Giles County Earthquake.

Continued reports come from Giles county, Virginia, concerning the quaking of the mound Monday a week. On the top of Angell Mountain is the crater of an extinct volcano, about one mile in length and one half mile in width. This forms Mountain Lake. It is one of the most beautiful sheets of water in Virginia and numerous hotels have been built near it. The earthquake rent the mountain asunder for about one mile, causing a carcass of gases for said distance. This has drained the lake until it is dry.

Near Pembroke is located the salt works of the celebrated Mathews Alkali Works. These wells are dry, and over 1,000 men are out of employment. The salt works is capitalized at over a million dollars.

The springs of the county are many of them, drawing nearly as the sea and others are entirely dry. The distant shocks were felt in this section last week, and many people are camping out.

The Wilson Survey.

Every now and then a strange-looking party of adventurers is to be seen in our midst looking at the Wilson Survey, in which the late General B. F. Butler was interested. Such a one was to be seen in our village last Tuesday morning. This party consisted of three men: one lawyer, one surveyor, and a venerable old man who looked like he was playing a role in the "Last Hope." The survey which they have come to find covers about twenty miles by ten miles of rattlesnake coverts, and includes some good land and the parts of several farmers' improved land. It lies between Marlinton and Dunmore.

Away back in olden times when the rank thistle nodded in the wind and the fox dug his hole unscared, a man named Wilson walked around a tract or parcel of land containing a couple hundred of square miles, and got a title from the State for it. Not wishing to be burdened with taxes the land was neglected, for in those days the United States was selling at the rates of about $2 per county. Mr Wilson and heirs neglected their vast rattlesnake range in Virginia, and diligent settlers and land speculators took out grant after grant until a crow flying over it would not be able to find a place not covered by a junior grant, and which had not had taxes paid on it as a mark of possession. For some reason Northern lawyers find it hard to understand that about the most important law in regard to land titles is that when both parties claim from Virginia, the later title with possession will effectually defeat the older.

About fifteen years ago some surveyors attempted to run off this survey. Near Dilley's Mill they were fired on by a group of Hill people, or rather a number of guns were discharged in their vicinity, and they took the hint and fled.

Much talk was indulged in at that time of getting a regiment of soldiers to come and run it off, but with the exception of an occasional visitor who views the county and then returns, nothing has been done. They will have a time finding any part of the old survey uncovered by better titles.

A RICH vein of paint ore has been discovered near Piedmont. It is said to yield 94 per cent. while the usual yield of such ore is about 35 per cent.

MARRIED.

Beard-Ralston.

On June 2d, 1897, in the quiet little village of Green Bank, two young people began the journey of life together. The happy pair on were Mr Leslie O. Beard and Miss Ruby M. Ralston. They were married at the home of the bride's father, Mr J. H. Ralston, in the presence of a few relatives.

Mr Isaac Horner, proprietor of the Horton House, Burton, W. Va., and one of the most widely known men in the state was carried off our mountain after three years of suffering. He says: "I have not sufficient command of language to convey any idea of what I suffered, my physicians told me that nothing could be done but ease my friends were fully convinced that nothing but death would relieve me of my suffering. In June, 1894, Mr Evans, then salesman for the Wheeling Drug Co., recommended Chamberlain's Pain Balm. At this time my feet and limbs were swollen to more than double their normal size and it seemed to me my leg would burst open. After I began using Pain Balm the swelling began to decrease, and now I consider that I was entirely cured." For sale by all druggists.

SCHOLARS.

A GOOD many advertisements which one reads gives you the impression that one or more lies is trying to astonish the people with wonderfully low bargains; but you can judge of the quality of the goods by the prices—they are too cheap to be good. I do claim that my $3.00 watch I sold last year is just as good and look just as well as a ten dollar suit. The period of the panic is the best, so you had better take a few minutes while at Court and make a tour of inspection and see how cheap good reliable and good the stocks of purchasing right now is as I do not think I could duplicate the goods for the same money. My $2.00 watch is meeting no very hard times. I have just received a lot of boys' suits, from 11 to 16 years old, at $2.50. You will never know how low they are until you see them. But remember it is not for all. You had better get a pair of indestructible pants at $1.00.

Things you Can't do

There are some things you can't do—for they are against nature. You can't make water run up hill. You can't cheat others and not cheat yourself. You can't make poor economy pay by purchasing poor quality clothing and bally made.

Mothers

if you expect the boys to keep neat and tidy you must buy them clothes that will stand the strain.

You Wouldn't

go to a doctor for legal advice, and you cannot expect to find a good suit in a half-kept store. I am just receiving a new line of clothing right from the tailor-shop, and it was bought extremely low, as the maker was hard pressed for money. I solicit your inspection.

Colored Students at Harvard.

The first negro to win a Harvard degree was a member of the class of 1870. Several negroes subsequently took special courses, but none graduated until 1890. There are now six on the rolls. The most prominent, who was graduated last year with honors, is now in the law school, and is president of the Harvard Forum. The present senior class in the university has three colored members. One named Williams, from Virginia, took two prizes while at Phillipps and Andover, and has maintained a similar high standing at the university. Another named Gregory, from New Jersey, is well up in his studies, is a fine debater and a fine ball player. A third named Napoleon Bonaparte Marshall has fame as a debater and greater fame as an athlete, particularly as a quarter-mile runner. A freshman named Lee is a tennis player of note and a substitute on the varsity ball team. The only difficulty these men have at Harvard is lack of means. They are not ostracised in any way.—Indianapolis News.

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE

In one of his wonderful sermons very truthfully said, "My brother, your trouble is not with the heart; it is a gastric disorder or a rebellious liver. It is not sin that blots out your hope of heaven, but bile in the only yellows your eyeballs and furs your tongue and makes your head ache but swoops upon your soul in dejection and forebodings,"—and

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use of liquor, beer, or wine, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures in the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention this paper when you write and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Statistics Gathered, from Departments of Nature by One Who Loves Her.

Stung and goaded by the taunts and sneers of Northern friends, that we were wasting our time in idleness or dissipating our effort in deer hunting and trout fishing, ignorant and regardless of the wealth of material resources with which a bountiful Nature had stored our beautiful valleys and crowned our glorious mountain tops, I, some years since, started an investigation of such facts as in my isolated life and lonely rides I encountered, bearing upon iron, coal and lumber, the interest which best represent the untold wealth shivered into the lap of our mountain state by the liberal hand of Providence, which "giving does not impoverish nor withholding enrich," and incured on to effort by such a labor of joy, which proved sufficient recompense for all the efforts made and time expended without taking into consideration the satisfaction that comes from the consciousness of loves labor faithfully performed by a willing and voluntary hands.

Looking back as I now can over the long avenue of life's pathway already trod, no vista is pleasanter to the eyes of memory than that portion devoted to the study of man's relationship to natures great resources.

Iron, while underlying all the blue, grass-clothed mountain sides of our upper valley, was too morose and sullen in its mood to yield to one of my poor powers of persuasion and dull comprehension many of its secrets securely locked in its native form of ore, making my field of observation in our pastoral country a narrow one.

GEORGE HOUCHIN'S EXPERIENCE IN IRON MANUFACTURES.

It is as an industry confined to the button-hook George Houchin made out of an old bayonet found on the White Top in Old Fort Hilroy at the time when, owing to "Poley" Arbogast being out of number nines over at the Forks, he got Loring Kerr to get Mary Jane a pair of store shoes over on the railroad, and he forgot to bring a hook. The nearest forge was at old man Armantrout's, across Rip Shin Mountain in Greenbrier Valley, and took a day each way. I estimated his time as worth $1.50 per day—or $3.00. This would fix the cost of manufacturing button-hooks in the upper corner of Randolph and Pocahontas Counties, West Virginia, at $36 per dozen. Erk. Martin, who travels for a Philadelphia shoe house, tells me that they sell them at fifty cents per gross. Assuming that two cents of this is transportation, profit, etc., we have a cost in that city including cost of material (which upon Rip Shin was free) of four cents per dozen, and by averaging these two results—the only ones with the figures of which I am familiar—I find that the cost of iron in the form of button-hooks is $18.02 per dozen.

COST OF COAL AVERAGED FROM SOURCES.

Coal is in evidence upon every side and in every hill, and, being a rare material, facts were more easily available, altho in a community where no one works for wages it is not easy to place a money value upon time. But I assume it to be approximately $1.50 per day and find yourself—as you must do in a country where no one can find you if you have twenty minutes start, and at this valuation I do not hesitate to affirm that my immediate neighborhood is the richest under the American flag, as we undoubtedly have more time than the richest of nations.

Quint Harris always thought he got a better temper on the spring of a bear-trap by using coal out of the cliff below Fishing Hawk, and the round trip could not be made in less than two days, delayed as one necessarily is by wearing of finger-ends and loss of nails in working it out from between the ledges by bare hands, and no man can earn on two days' pay pushed around the Falls Rock, which fixes the maximum load at that amount, thus fixing the cost at five cents per pound, or $100 per ton for Fishing Hawk coal.

Bear Rock Knob I estimate as to the cost of that Blue Rock Knob located out to the railroad to get as saved; but his ideas are crude as on such subjects and his answer somewhat vague,—he "thinks being that one has to go upside down," is Hatton's succession just as he does for those of all the other trades the few days he was out on Rich Mountain after it, that should not be counted, as it is out of "natural course," and how are more than offset by the news brought to us by those tracks and turkey signs,—so that the only cost was the charge of the wagoner, Charlie Dunlap, for the trip to and from the city of $2.00 Weimer Station, $1.00 per cwt., or $40 a ton. It being in no old gum on such, it was considered unnecessary to place a value upon the coal, especially in view of the fact that it was not mined and sold with other like stripped of bark.

One of the hazards who has driven cattle through Pocahontas county, informs me that the large mines of the New River field load their coal aboard cars at a cost of about sixty cents per ton. Allowing his figures to be as stated, the average cost of producing coal in Cheat, Tygart, and New River valleys, as shown by the instances under consideration, would be $40.20 per ton. I think my figures are correct, and the facts as stated I know to be true.

Lumber is to me more attractive from every point of view than either iron or coal, and opportunities for its investigation much more numerous, and is a field in which I need rely less upon the theories of others and can offer more personal observations of my own. Therefore, I shall present only such facts as come within the circle of my own knowledge.

BUREAU OF LABOR METHODS AS APPLIED TO WEST VIRGINIA LUMBER PRODUCTION.

Ham Collins' residence at Cheat Bridge was built of spruce poles, none being larger than could be toted by Syd or myself, and thus offered no facilities for the gathering of lumber statistics until after the second winter, when it was decided that hens set a heap better, because quieter, if under a floor than when in the room with the children. So, by the aid of Ad Conger and the two Hommond boys, he put in a puncheon floor, the four of them doing it in two days, or a total of eight days, equal to $12. The cabin is 20x15—300 *feet of flooring, or $40 per thous*and.

Little Ad Hamrick's barn on top of Point Mountain is unique in being cherry throughout, in every beam, sill and board—a monument erected out there in the wil*derness to the prodigality of Na*ture. The Kelly boys whip sawed it for "a dollar a hundred," $10 per thousand, where it grew, down on Back Fork of Elk, and it had to be packed up Barren She Run to get it into a yard where it could be reached by sun and wind to dry it. As this route was nearly perpendicular for the last mile, 100 feet per day was powerful hard work, or $15 per thousand for yard work and off bearing, or total of $25 per thousand.

Pardee & Curtin, in their large band saw mills on Elk tell me the labor cost in producing several million feet of popular lumber per annum from stump to car is not far from $10 per thousand. Assuming their figures to be correct, we have the average cost of labor in producing lumber in Cheat, Back Fork and [illegible] valleys of $25 per thousand.

HOW [illegible] STATISTICIAN.

There [illegible]mption about the the abstruse [illegible]ntract that would, it unrestrained, lead me to relate still further [illegible]nces of this nature, the risk of being prolix and tedious; but, feeling that the above fully sets forth the facts as is customary in statistical writers, among whom I feel proud to count myself, and not wishing to do more, I will leave the above data in your hands—glad if the knowledge, the pursuit of which has yielded me so much health and pleasure, shall afford to you the satisfaction that comes with information gathered and lessons learned.

In this connection I am glad to note that the United States Senate is awakening an interest in practical statistics, as will be seen by the following resolution introduced by Senator Pettigrew:

Resolved, That the Commissioner of Labor be, and is hereby, directed to send to the Senate a statement of the cost per thousand feet, board measure, of producing white pine lumber in the States of Minnesota and Michigan, respectively; the statement to include the cost of lumbering, or the work in the woods and the cost of manufacturing, or the mill work, in two separate items, including the cost of stumpage.

I am glad to know that no deep a question is given to so good source of information as the Commissioner of Labor, Hon. Carroll D. Wright, knowing that, with all the vast resources of this grand country at his command, it will be exhaustively treated.

While hoping that the deductions drawn from my own patient investigations, so conscientiously made, will be sustained by his official figures, yet, from the fact that from his broader field of collection he has been able to obtain the figures of five different locations while, restricted to the narrow limits of our encircling mountains, my amateur efforts confined me to but three, I shall not—indeed, as a loyal, patriotic citizen I might say—hesitate to accept his figures as the more trustworthy, compiled, as they are, with equal care, with equal intelligence and with greater opportunity—but, where all, being equal—A. H. Winchester in The Herbermas.

A Grand Bargain in Land.

The undersigned offers for sale in whole or in part a tract of land on very reasonable terms. It is situated about 24 miles of Falling Spring, Greenbrier County, West Virginia, and 34 miles from the west bank of Greenbrier River and lies on both sides of Spring Creek, being well watered by numerous rivulets and springs tributary to that stream. This land joins the lands held by Messrs Robinson, Robertson, Dancy, Knight, Eggleston, and Bucks. The tract consists of 700 acres—about one hundred acres cleared and ready for cultivation. The rest is well timbered with white-oak, black-oak, red oak, chestnut-oak, chestnut, and locust. The quality and quantity of the locust challenges admiration, while much of the other timber is above the average in quality. With judicious management the timber will more than pay the price for which the land can be had. When cleared the land is unsurpassed by any in the county for agricultural purposes. Address with a letter for further information, or call in the market.

For full particulars, all letters and inquiries should be addressed to Jas. M. Sydenstricker or W. Lewis Sydenstricker.

BIOGRAPHIC SKETCHES.

Jacob Cassell, ancestor of the numerous relationship of that name, was a native of Pendleton County. In early manhood he came to Park, where he married Nancy McLaughlin, a sister of Squire Hugh McLaughlin, late of Marlinton. After living several years in Bath, he bought out Mr Deaver, on Greenbrier River three miles west of Green Bank, now known as Cassell's Fordine. Here he settled and became a wellknown citizen of our county, about seventy years ago. His family were two daughters and five sons; William, Jacob, John, Samuel, James, Nancy, and Jane.

William Cassell married Matilda Wanless and settled on Back Alleghany where he spent the remainder of his life,—he was eighty-two years old when he died. He was married twice. The first children were Nancy Jane and George The daughter became Mrs Henry Ba..low, and now lives near Edray. George Cassell was a Confederate soldier and died of wounds during the war. William Cassell's second marriage was with Nancy Collins. By this marriage there were seven children. Mary Catherine became Mrs Thomas Beverage. Martha Ellen became Mrs Robert Sutton, who is a well known teacher of schools. William Cassell, Junior, married India Sutton and settled on the homestead. Louisa married John Cassell and lives near the old home. Charles Cassell married Anne Geiger, daughter of Mr and Mrs Adam Geiger, near Driftwood, and now lives at Huntersville, West Virginia. Sarah Ann died aged 13 years. George Cassell went to Texas, and after many adventures on cattle ranches was drowned.

Jacob Cassell's second son, Jacob Cassell Junior, married Nancy Sharp, daughter of the late William Sharp, Esq., near Verdant Valley, and settled in Illinois, where both are now living. (1897.)

John Cassell, third son of Jacob Cassell, Senior, married Sally Curry and went to the far West.

Samuel Cassell, the fourth son, wedded Eliza Valentine Tomlinson, of Augusta County, Virginia, near Staunton, and lived for awhile on the Greenbrier homestead then settled on Back Alleghany on lands now held by his son, Jacob Cassell. Samuel's daughter Eliza married Harvey Hevener, and lived on the Greenbrier four miles above the old homestead. Her children were Laura, Samuel, Maggie, Adam, Vanburen, and Rebecca. Jacob, of Samuel, married Clara Sutton, daughter of the late Samuel Sutton, near Green Bank, and settled on the Back Alleghany. Mary Ann, daughter of Samuel Cassell, married Cyrus Tallman, and settled on Back Alleghany. Her children were Rachel Henriette, Josephine, Anderson, John, and Colonel. Alice Cassell, of Samuel, married John Woodell and settled near Travelers Repose. Margaret Jane Cassell, daughter of Samuel Cassell, married George Barter, Esq., near Edray. Her children were Eliza Myrtle, Bessie Regina, Frank, Yola Mabel, Edith and George Harry. It is to this member of the Cassell family the writer is mainly indebted for assistance in preparing this paper.

Rachel Cassell, another daughter of Samuel Cassell, married Frederick Swink, and lives on Back Alleghany. Her children are Charles and Peter.

Hannah Cassell, of Samuel, married Claiborne Wanless, and lived on the old Wanless homestead. Her children are Effie, Maude, and George.

Rachel Cassell, the youngest daughter of Samuel Cassell, became Mrs George Ashbridge, and lives near Edray.

James Cassell, son of Samuel, married Margaret Ann Swink of Rockbridge County, Virginia, and settled on the Greenbrier homestead. His son John married Lucy Cassell, and settled on Back Alleghany. Samuel, of James, married Ruth Wanless and lives on the old Greenbrier near the old Cassell home.

James Cassell, of James, married Sarah Shinneberry, and lives on Back Alleghany. Thomas Cassell, of James, married Lydia Galford, and settled on Back Alleghany. Ella Cassell, daughter of James, married Henry Kessler and lives in the same neighborhood. Nancy Jane, daughter of James, married Benjamin Collins, a minister of the German Baptist church. Rachel Ann Cassell, daughter of James, married Amos Gillespie, a prominent teacher in the public schools, and lives at Gillespie.

Nancy Cassell, daughter of Jacob Cassell the ancestor, married Allen Galford, Esq., and lives on the Greenbrier near the mouth of Deer Creek. In reference to her children the following particulars are available. Brown Galford married Susan Geiger, and settled on Back Alleghany; Lydia Galford married Thomas Cassell. Lydia's children are Allen, Jacob, Mary, and Samuel. Nancy Jane Galford daughter of Mr and Mrs Allen Galford, married James McCloud and lives near Driftwood. James Galford, son of Allan Galford, Esq., married Rebecca Logan, daughter of the late John Logan, and settled on Back Alleghany. Hannah Galford, another daughter, married Dallas McLaughlin, son of the late David McLaughlin, and they live near Driftwood. Caroline Galford married George Tacy, and lives on Back Alleghany. John Galford the youngest son, married Agnes Chestnut, of Bath County, and lived at the old Galford homestead. He died a few years since. Alice Galford, the youngest daughter, married S. David McClure, and they settled on Laurel Run, in Edray District.

Jane Cassell, the other daughter of Jacob the ancestor, married Jacob Wilfong, and when last heard from they were in Minnesota. Their children were Jacob and Margaret Jane.

Jacob Cassell, Senior, the founder of the Cassell family in upper Pocahontas, was a person of remarkable muscular strength and agility. He was passionately industrious, and even in extreme old age never satisfied without something useful to do. He and his family have done very much in developing that part of the county where he resided. In his attire he was very neat and particular, and a perfect gentleman in his deportment. His personal influence and example were for fair dealing, strict integrity, and pure morals. He lived to be ninety-two years of age. Mrs Cassell died several years before her husband. Her death was occasioned by nasal hemorrhage brought on by overexertion in crossing a very high rail fence.

With the assistance of a granddaughter of these venerated persons the compiler has been able to prepare this memorial of two very worthy people, richly deserving of lasting and grateful remembrance for the part they and their descendants have performed in rescuing from a rugged and remote forest wilderness and laboriously developing one of the more really prosperous sections of our great county. W. T. P.

THE POLITICAL LIGHT WHICH FAILED.

We feel that the sound money leaders and journals which gave utterance to assurances of immediate prosperity, or an advance in that direction, if Mr McKinley was elected, lied either knowingly or unwittingly. The fallacy of the theory that vaunted mass of men, by only assisted investment to be assured of the stability of the government has been proven. The argument that things might be worse if the ambitious Mr Bryan and his mass of American farmers had been elected argues to us that it might be worse for the manipulations of some great political party to, but not for the rugged majority who have little or nothing to lose.

The great head of the Republican party, President McKinley, did not indulge in any of the bosh of the campaign, but preserved a dignified silence by sending Democratic statesmen from the front porch. Were the election however to attend the wag ie word "wait," but he did not make it clear whether he relied upon the work of the administration to bring prosperity or on the generally accepted doctrine that "everything comes to him who waits"—and hustles.

The country is finding the mere assurance that the affairs of the government will be in the hands of the Republican party is not sufficient for prosperity to come upon the country like the blessing of Heaven. Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness and all who looked at it with believing eyes were healed, but it seems that the distress of America is more stubborn and refuses to down. Even confidence is not restored. The text to-day is: "Put not your trust in millionaires," and the activity of our statesmen is that of harassed agents of office seekers. The rich refuse to become poorer that the poor may be richer, probably for the fear that their investments failing it would miss those intended to be benefitted and enrich those already rich. It is too much to hope for that our country will again be what it once was when it seemed no handicap to be born poor. The classes are becoming marked, and it is harder for a man to rise.

We are taxed until the business of the country is paralyzed. There was never a government which raised such revenue from its citizens. The very form of government of which we are so proud enables our rulers to extract taxes, both direct and indirect, and they sap the resources of the citizen. The mighty (and by the mighty these days is meant the monied) had friends at court, and the vast tax of national government being levied indirectly they escaped its consequences except in so far as they were consumers; and the government left the poor man his appetite in order, let us suppose, that he should pay dearly for his food, clothes, furniture, tobacco and drink.

We take it for granted that the confidence game is about played out in politics. As the government cannot help us (according to Henry Watterson, the philosopher,) and we are controlled by a law which has regulated the traffic of man from prehistoric times—that of supply and demand,—why in the name of common sense cannot the government leave us alone. Let them reduce the expenditures of the government one half. They can do it. The most useful of all the systems of the government is the postal system, and we are taxed directly, so to speak, for it, and it is almost self-sustaining. We can do without the printing office at Washington; the seed distribution; the river and harbor improvements, that could be carried on by private corporations by franchise; the weather bureau; a standing army that does not stand and protecting navy that allows Spain to fire on our flag. Let us retrench. That will be effectual but to expect prosperity to bloom on every bush because we believe our President is a great and good man is asking too much of Mr McKinley.

LUMBER INDUSTRY.

The St. Lawrence Company will have little or no lumber cut in this county this year we are sorry to say, as the firm of Smith & Whiting, alone, generally expend about $75,000 yearly in the county for work and supplies. We feel that it is very unfortunate the business should take such a long rest the year after McKinley ascended to the throne, but we have enough sense not to blame the Administration, and know that the election of Bryan would have made no difference. Still it was not what some expected.

The camps on Williams River are working with reduced forces. Times were plenty of labor to take the logs in this year. In fact our flood took the gates away from W. McClintic's splash dam. He had the largest landing now ready for breaking in that has ever been on Williams River, all the logs nearly marked on the river bank. He is working on the "old job" now in a rougher country than where he has recently been cutting.

Henry Sheets had secured what was considered a good job, put up camps, and then abandoned them. It was the impression of many lumbermen that he had the best job that had been given out by the company for years, but as Mr Sheets is a veteran in the business he should know.

The Silva brothers have a good job of cutting for the Hardwood Company at Jack.

Contractor Gray, who has worked such havoc with a number of Pocahontas sub-contractors and hands, promises to square up, and has been paying out some money. A woodsman told the writer the other day that he had pursued him for a week and had finally come up with him in the Company's office and that Gray had paid him $25 there, which seemed almost like velvet to him. What Mr Gray can or will do, however, is a secret known only to Mr Gray, and is one which he carries in his own breast.

THE thoughful reader has been surprised at the readiness of so many persons of influence, in all sections of the United States to encourage a war with England in defense of a principle so little understood as the so called Monroe Doctrine. Some account for it in part to political agitation awakened by the tariff and silver questions.

The earnest adherents of the protective policy regard British influence as one of the main reasons for the oppositions that exists against protective interest.

Likewise the friends of free silver trace the dissaters, that are attributed to the demonetization of silver, to the fallacious reasoning of English economists. Many think, too, that British gold in the guise of gifts secured votes for this famous demonitization.

While these things may have their influence and may account in a measure for the hostile expressions that surprise so many, and writer inclines to the belief, if these were the main and only reasons, there would be but very little spoiling for a fight among the people at large. The London Times, one of the most farseeing journals in the world, published something in 1860 which we will repeat for the consideration of those seeking an explanation why hostile feeling, and readiness for war should be so manifested:

"There will by a colossal Ireland placed in the New World. The Celt is pushed westward, no longer to be imprisoned between Liffey and the Shannon, but he will spread from New York to San Francisco. We (the English) must gird our loins to encounter the Nemesis of seven centuries of misgovernment. To the end of time a hundred million of people, spread over the largest habitable area of the world, and confronting us everywhere by sea and land, will remember that their forefathers paid tithes to the Protestant clergy, rent to absentee landlords, and a forced obedience to the laws which these landlords had made. And even tho the rancorous Celt were to forget and forgive, that will not prevent the sure development of an intractable race and the introduction of intractable elements into the character of the great American nation. It will be more than half Celtic. There will be other races in America, but the preponderating race of all will be Celtic, in sympathy with Ireland, seeing Ireland's opportunity in England's extremity."

THE venerable Abram Sharp who resides near Frost is a citizen of sterling integrity of character. He was a Union sympathizer and a faithful soldier of the Federal Army. He keeps himself well informed in the political issues of the day and holds himself ready to meet all comers in defense of a protective tariff. He is going to patronize The Pocahontas Times, not because he agrees with its sentiments, but because it is a home enterprise and hence industries should be manifested first of all, so long as they keep decent in language and appearance and reflect credit upon the county. He felt it his duty to work day and night in fencing out the hungries that have been such a feature in his community. He hopes that when has been accomplished may be a warning to any others and that all such may repent and live better lives, both for their own good and the welfare of the neighborhood.

AYER'S ARGUMENT.

If there is any reason why you should use any sarsaparilla, there is every reason why you should use Ayer's. When you take sarsaparilla you take it to cure disease; you want to be cured as quickly as possible and as cheaply as possible. That is why you should use Ayer's. It cures quickly and cheaply—and it cures to stay. Many people write us: "I could sooner have one bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla than three of any other kind." A druggist writes that "one bottle of Ayer's will give more benefit than six of any other kind." If one bottle of Ayer's will do the work of three it must have the strength of three at the cost of one. There's the point in a nutshell. It pays every way to use

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Skinning a Rattlesnake.

The Snake Editor had for long desired the skin of a real deadly rattler to make him a belt,—for there is something of fascinating interest about the tokens of its deadly presence,—so when "Joe" came in from his "clearing" with news of a serpent slain in fair fight and no favor, and exhibited sundry rattles and "buttons," supplemented by a stick denoting the unbelievable length of the monster we proceeded to get minute directions as to where the snake might be found. As to returning and skinning his victim himself he "would n't do it for nothin'."

A colored "friend and brother" standing by, whose clearing was on land adjoining, and who seemed to get a clearer insight of the route to be taken from a groundplan sketched with a stick in the mud of the road whereby we were to locate a certain stump on which the said snake was to be found, offered to guide us to the locality, but did not much fancy the idea of being a party to any such enterprise as dissecting a rattlesnak—opperations of this kind being only suitable for witches and hoodoos. Still less was he pleased to have his knife (a valued keepsake) used in the operation.

This snake, which was really a large one, had an extra fang, and they were fully a quarter-inch clear. The skin slipped off easily, tho somewhat damaged because the slayer in an excess of fury had pounded the body even after he had removed the rattles. The flesh is white and firm, and appears appetizing—justifying the tradition that it was eaten by some tribes of Indians. It is said that when weary on the trail the Indian would sometimes grasp a live rattlesnake, bite a mouthful from its back, and imbibe fresh vigor from the food.

The writer has never in his life seen a live rattlesnake in its native woodland haunts, and we may therefore assume that they are somewhat scarce in Pocahontas,—the hair-raising yarns of adventurous persons to the contrary, notwithstanding. S. B. P.

A Pioneer Adventure.

JOHN JOHNSON, the ancestor of the Johnson relationship, and the pioneer of West Marlinton, whose log cabin stood near where The Times office now stands, heard that corn had matured in Nicholas. He set out to bring in some of the Nicholas corn for seed and had his way in Black Mountain and was bewildered for nine days, having nothing to eat most of the time. In his desperation he tried a morsel of garter snake but he could not swallow it, and concluded that he would rather die than eat such "things as that." Upon coming to a house he was just able to move and scarcely able to talk enough to make the mistress of the place understand what had happened. She at once proceeded to prepare a beautiful meal, thinking a man so hungry as he was would never know when to quit. In the meantime the proprietor came in and coldheartedly did this preparation, and directed the dish wash to not be hailed and a little skimmed milk be brought from the spring house. He prepared a saucer of mush and milk and gave the famished stranger one spoonful, and then waited for results. In a few minutes there was a violent emetic disturbance and it looked as if he was about to turn inside out. When this subsided, a little more of the mixture was given with more favorable results and in the course of a few hours the pangs of hunger were somewhat appeased. Nourishment was carefully doled out for some days, and he finally made the trip home on the route where "plenty" of the game was found, and became a resident in the vicinity of Marlinton.

THE Fairmont Normal School had twenty-one graduates this year.

FAST driving in Fairmont must be stopped, says Mayor Kendall. Since April he has collected more than one hundred dollars on fines for this offense.

ONE stick of timber from the forests of the Little Kanawha, delivered at Marietta, contained 196 cubic feet of lumber, or over 2,352 feet, board measure.

ONLY one man in ten knows that Decoration day, tho a legal holiday in thirty-six States and Territories, is not such in West Virginia. This interesting fact was brought out thro numberless discussions on the occasion of the last Memorial celebration in this State.

MARCUS POLASKY, the Chicago millionaire, was in Clarksburg last week, and announced his intention of taking a hand in railroad building there shortly. He holds an option on the whole town of Lumberport, in the same vicinity, which will change its name to Polasko in his honor.

THE railroad tie industry has assumed large proportions on Elk River. The ties are rafted down the Elk to Charleston and shipped from there. During the past five months about 200,000 ties have been shipped from there. At Charleston the price is 32 cents for hewed ties; 26 cents for those that are sawed.

THE delinquent tax list of Monongalia county shows a total of only 160 names. That recently published by Mason county reveals 1,700, and brings forth some caustic comments from the Point Pleasant Register. The Hon. George Washington Tippett says, "the vast majority of these dead beats are voters," and strongly advocates a law to compel a man to pay his taxes before allowing him to vote.

NEAR Bristol, Tennessee, is a tree that has been rendered famous by an inscription in the bark—cut there by Daniel Boone—to this purport: "D. Boone killed a bar on tree in the year 1760." The promoters of the Centennial Exposition thought of taking the tree to Nashville, and had the matter investigated. The State agent opposed to the removal, and thinks the tree is good for another century. The tree is in a fair state of preservation, and the inscription is still quite legible after 137 years.

BUSINESS shrewdness and financial ability are uniformously not confined to the better classes of monchausia. At a recent meeting of the Liquor League of Ohio, one of the officers remarker that after a man was grown and temperance habits formed he seldom changed, and he therefore drew the conclusion that one of the means of the liquor business missionary work must be done among the boys. "Nickels expended in treats to the young now will return in dollars after the appetite is formed." Even the hardened journalists present appalled before the frankness of statement of such diabolical facts.

Youth's Companion.

On the first day of June an event of more than ordinary import occurred at Charleston, W. Va. long Telephone communication was opened up between Charleston and several points, north, east and west. The Governors of West Virginia and Delaware had a free and easy talk at the distance of twelve or fifteen hundred miles, the way the lines run. Then Governor Atkinson and the Mayor of Charleston talked and a few commercial words passed between, and speakers, hundreds of miles away could be heard as satisfactorily as if in sight. A very interesting entertainment was given in connection with the opening event by the ladies of Charleston.

Hamden-Sidney College.

The final exercises of Hampden-Sidney College were concluded on Thursday morning, June 10. The Rev. Charles Obenchain, D. D., of Shepardstown, West Virginia, preached the baccalaureate sermon on the preceding Sundry; the address before the Literary Society was made by Prof. Francis H. Smith, of the University of Virginia; the address before the Society of Alumni by Judge W. E. Stuart, of Bristol, Va., while the address to the graduating class was made by the Rev Moses D. Hoge, D. D., of Richmond, Va.

The session is said to have been one of the most prosperous in the history of the College; the results of the examination, taken as a whole, were reported to the Board of Trustees as being exceptionally good. The only case of severe misconduct was that of a young man who was detected by his fellow students in the act of cheating on examination, and who was expelled from College a mass-meeting held by the students themselves, and in which the faculty took no part. This student appealed from the action of the student-body to the faculty, but it, after investigation, refused to interfere.

The subject of athletics has grown in interest at this place and has received encouragement at the hands of the President and Faculty. An excellent gymnasium has been recently fitted up for the use of the students, and a large, and well-adapted athletic field donated donated to them by one of the friends of the College. The experiment of permitting the baseball and football teams to play return games with other colleges away from the College, under proper restrictions, has been found to work well, the presidents of the various institutions which they have visited, having, in each instance, testified in writing to their gentlemanly conduct. This, with the demonstrated fact that their studies do not suffer by such moderate attention to athletics, has led the Board of Trustees to appropriate a sum of money which will hereafter enable the students to keep themselves supplied with the necessary uniforms, etc.

The Board of Trustees, which is made up of such men Hon. William Wirt Henry, of Richmond, S. W. Venerable of Petersburg, Judge W. H. Macn, of Nottoway, Rev Moses D. Hoge, of Richmond, ex-Governor P. W. McKinney, Hon James L. Tredway, of Cabell, Hon S. P. Fourney, of Charleston, W. Va., and a number of others, held a meeting lasting several days. Owing to the proposed move of the Union Theological Seminary from Hamden-Sidney, this Board eagerly grasped the opportunity to secure the buildings which it vacates. This will enable the College to handle with greater ease the increasing number of students which it has secured. The negotiations for the purchase are now in progress. The Board of Trustees of Hoge Academy, at Blackstone, Va., were in consultation with the College Board, and it is probable that the College will also purchase, within a few weeks, that institution.

It was thought at one time that the removal of the Theological Seminary from Hampden-Sidney to Richmond might have the effect of injuring the College. This seems not to have been the case, as the attendance this year was considerably larger than that of last year, and the prospects are that the attendance next session will be larger than ever known in its history.

We are glad that old Hampden-Sidney is evidencing its vitality by such reports as these. With the exception of William and Mary College, it is the oldest educational institution in the South, having been founded in 1776, and being more than fifty years older than the University of Virginia. While old in point of existence, it has continually renewed its youth by keeping its Chairs filled with men who are fully abreast of the times, and adding to its curriculum such studies as experience has shown to be useful in the education of young men.

Among the sons of Pocahontas County who have received education and training at this institution we recall the names of S. B. Hannah, of Green Bank, Rev Henry W. McLaughlin, now of Prince, W. Va., Prof J. L. Sydenstricker, now of Concord, W. Va. Somers Kennison, of Academy, and Fred Wallace, now of Lewisburg.

Seek Reward, Sure.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one decided element that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarrh Cure destroys the foundation of the disease, and gives the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Cure that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WILLIAM J. CALHOUN, a special commissioner to the Ruis investigation to learn whether Mrs Ruis has any show for an indemnity for the death of her husband, a naturalised citizen of the United States, has just returned. He says: "In reference to Cuban affairs the adherents of both sides are exceedingly intense. The Cubans and the Spaniards tell their stories just as they want you to believe them. From what the Spaniards say the island is virtually pacified and the rebellion practically subdued. The Cubans most positively assert the insurgents never were in such excellent condition as they are now, and they are going to fight to a finish if it takes all time to come."

AS OUR readers have learned, the Committee on Constitutional Amendments has closed its important work and adjourned indefinitely. So far as we can comprehend the situation the Committee deserves special commendation not so much for what was done as for what was not attempted. Changes of experimental character were avoided and nothing destructive or disorganizing approved. The will of the people, so far as it could be ascertained, was most respectfully considered. Some of the propositions may be modified by the Legislature; and yet, taken altogether, the amendments to be submitted are only such as the people have been calling for a long while past, and they will vote for the men who will do as they wish.

PRESIDENT PORTER knows what is good for young men, or he would not be able to give this good advice: "Take for your star self-reliance. Rely on your strength of body and soul. Take for a motto 'Luck is a fool; Pluck is a hero.' The art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Think well of yourself. Assume your own position. Put potatoes in a cart, go over a rough road, and the small ones go to the bottom. Energy and invincible determination with a right motive are the levers that move the world. Try being perfectly independent from the first and shun debt in all its forms. Try to cultivate the moral courage that will resist the arrogance of fashion."

LIKE a dutiful son, the Philadelphia Record seems ready to take his medicine as prescribed by Dr Dingley and others.

"The nation is ready to take the new tariff just as a traveler in a thunder-shower is prepared to take a ducking—not because he desires it, but because he cannot escape. Business men are anxious that the tariff be passed—not because they approve the proposed changes but because delay and uncertainty are harder to bear than any conditions that may be imposed. The United States will be checked in their imperial growth by the shackles imposed upon industry and commerce when Dingley, Aldrich, and McKinley shall have finished their work. But the country can stand a heap of misgovernment, extravagance, and folly, and yet be the best country in the world to live in."

Forbearance.

ONE of the most desirable traits to be fostered is that of being able to give due credit to the opinions of others, decide as we would have them to do concerning our cherished convictions.

"A great heart is the first and fairest ornament of mankind? We answer let us reason together, let us think and investigate, let us banish the clouds of prejudice from the firmament of the mind. We must not conclude that because a person differs from us he is positively wrong. Let us try to know our friends as they are and then if we cannot agree let us grasp each others' hands in genuine friendship. We must remember that all of us have equal rights and that our neighbors have just as good a right to their views on anything as we have. In the name of decency and common sense let us give other people every right we ask for ourselves. Does a man's views on baptism affect his ability to demonstrate and instruct? Can't a follower of John Calvin explain the economics of the church as well as a believer in Calvin-ism?

"Can any one expect to run in the opinion of others by mistreating those that have the misfortune to express honest opinions opposite the it may be? Let us be candid, sincere, honest, and free. Let us place the banner of truth, justice, love, and liberty on the everlasting hills where it may ever wave in the eternal sunshine and let us remember that broken Rule and this little verse till our eyes are closed forever:

"Do unto others as you would
That others do unto you;
Those of who we don't exclude
Often prove our warmest friends

SAMUEL STUART, for sometime a tenant on the McCollum place, near Lobly's Mill, now in the possession of Amos Barlow, and who is a worthy colored citizen, was bereaved of his third wife last Saturday morning.

TUESDAY had ten confessions of misdemeanors and two convictions. Bernard Hamrick confessed to giving a minor about six feet high a drink of liquor and was fined $25 for it. J. W. Geiger was found guilty of assault on John Geiger.

FREDDIE MOORE, 9 years old, son of C. L. Moore on Brown's Creek, recently received an injury while peeling birch bark that necessitates the amputation of the index finger of his left hand at the middle joint. The operation was performed by Dr Patterson.

THE smallest crowd by half was to be seen here the first day of court that has ever been seen at this place on a court day. It was also one of the hottest. In spite of the intensely hot weather a good deal of speakeasy liquor was consumed. The horse market was very dull.

A VERY severe rain and hail storm occurred in this section Sunday evening. At Marlinton .90 of an inch of rain fell in an hour or so. On Beaver Dam the hail covered the ground like snow and cut the leaves of the trees very badly. Much damage was done the road by washing, etc.

THE Confederate Veterans met this week and arranged for a great reunion here Wednesday, September 1. It will be the biggest day this town ever had. The services of some famous speakers will be secured. More on this subject next week, when we will give the names of the committees.

THE luxuriest growth of white clover is attracting attention as something wonderful in these parts. The bees are busily employed. A single bee, with all its industry, energy and countless journeys, only has about a teaspoonful of honey to show for it all; during a single season.

THE significant statement is made by geographers that three acres out of four of the earth's surface, not covered by the oceans, cannot be farmed on account of mountain ranges, deserts, swamps, and barren grounds. Man can have but little here, it appears at present.

THE tasteful presence of an unusual number of robins and appearance of two or three kinds of weeds in the meadows are themes much talked about in some localities. Some persons have seen a few new birds also of singularly beautiful plumage. Ornithologists and botanists might find much to interest them in our region.

THE New York Sun gives a valuable remedy for flies: "Take a tablespoonful of ground black pepper and mix it with two teaspoonfuls of brown sugar; moisten the compound with water and place where it can be seen by the flies. The flies will generally be quickly attached to it and eat greedily. If they do, it will be their last meal, for the least of it is poison for a fly."

SUCH drafts are dangerous things to find with. They are liable to greet everybody. The latest fellow to greet people is the sheriff of Randolph county. The sheriff of R. B. Hill, of Lobelia, sued on a school draft of $44, issued by the Board of Education of Emery district, before Crush Boil, Justice, and before the hour of trial the sheriff had to travel 40 miles to summons his suit, by which proceeding he had costs to pay amounting to $9.25. Besides the defects in the form of the service the suit would have failed for the reason that the Board of Education never met in Emery district and the draft was levied by the Board. The warrant summoning under the defective law will have to be tested in the next term.

The President in West Virginia.

The President left Washington last week to visit the Nashville Exposition, in a special train consisting of five coaches. Wednesday night was spent at the Hot Springs. A large crowd of mountaineers gathered to see him off the next morning and cheered him londly. The President made no speech. At Staunton he spoke in friendly greeting to the crowd at the depot. but he allowed the fatal word "prosperity" to creep in his remarks. It is thought that our dignified President has prosperity on the brain. He recounted some war experiences which happened him when campaigning in Virginia. At Hinton a large crowd had assembled and the President was presented with a large gilt "key of prosperity." We don't see the point exactly, but no doubt those who presented the emblem thought it was a right thing to do. At Charleston Mr McKinley recognized an old war comrade. At Huntington he was saluted by artillery.

The Farmers Institute.

We are requested to announce that there will be a "farmers institute" held in the old court-house at Marlinton on the 25th and 26th of this month. The Secretary and one or two other members of the Board of Agriculture will be present to conduct the institute. A free discussion of all subjects on the program and a general interchanging of opinions relative to farming will be participated in by all. The public are cordially invited to attend.

Longest Prison Record.

Peter Zimmerman, says the Moundsville Echo, has the longest prison record in the State. He is 75 years of age and has served for 15 years of that time in prison. He has served time in seven penitentiaries. Every one of his terms was for horse stealing, for which he has a mania. His general appearance has any thing but a criminal cast. He is well preserved for a man of his years, and looks more like the average well to do farmer than the old-fashioned criminal.

—KIPLING.

A true and vivid account of the passage at arms between two gentlemen of valor, of Virginia. Be it remembered that on the first day of June Term came the attorneys, and court having been met they commenced to argue a hotly disputed case before the Judge. And the smallest lawyer said of largest lawyer that he had promised to pay him certain moneys as receiver or resign his receivership, whereupon the other indignantly pronounced it a "falsehood";—and if words have tears prepare to shed them now.

In a flash the younger attorney had drawn a chair on the other and an encounter with fists followed. At the time when some damage might have been expected, the sheriff came and stilled the storm. His Honor viewed it very calmly, and it was not known that he had been disturbed to any great extent until he had a fine entered against each attorney for $25, in that quiet and deliberated and dangerous way of his. The gentlemen who supported their principles with force and with arms were Colonel R. S. Turk, of Staunton, and Mr J. T. McAllister, of Warm Springs, who made a break at the Colonel.

The older citizens, from whose tenacious memories nothing escapes, called to mind the famous encounter years ago between the late General William Skeen and Hon Robert Dennis, in the court-house at Huntersville, when words failed to express each his indignation.

Children's Day on Stamping Creek.

It was the writers privilege to attend the Children's Day exercises at Stamping Creek school house, last Sunday (June 13), which was a very enjoyable occasion, not only for the children, but for grown people as well.

The ladies of the neighborhood had certainly displayed remarkable in decorating the house. The decorations consisted of a beautiful rainbow of flowers and schrubery, tastfully arranged, beneath which the speakers stood to deliver their addresses. The exercises were conducted by the superintendant, R. D. Silva, and consisted of music, recitations and addresses.

The first recitation, "Have you heard of Jesus," was well rendered by the following little girls: Minnie McClure, Nellie Boblett, Roxsie Grimes, Edna Sharp and Mamie Cackley; recitation, "Children's Crusade," by Ethel Sharp; addresses by the following persons: "Sunday Schools," by Martin Boblett; "Missions," by Miss Nora Boblett; "Epworth Leagues," by Miss Minnie McClure; "Christian Education," by C. B. Grimes. The collection was taken up by four young ladies. D.

A Case of Abduction.

On last Fridaday, Susan, the adopted daughter of Jack Griffin, of Jackson river, while on her way to a neighbor's house, was overtaken by A. J. Hooks, a man of ugly notoriety in this as well in Pocahontas county, who took her on his horse behind him and made away with her to Pocahontas county. It not known certainty whether she was taken against her will or not, but up to this time she has borne a good reputation and was well thought of in the community, and there is no reason known why she should take this step. She is about fifteen yers old.—Highland Recorder.

BUMBLEBEE.

"The Foot of a Fly"

says an eminent English doctor, "will carry enough poison to infect a household." In summer-time, more especially, disease germs fill the air, people are infected, fall ill, die; multitudes escape. These messengers of mischief do not exist for millions. Why not? Because they are healthy and strong—protected as a constable is against gaolbirds. It is the weak, the run-down, the ill-blooded who fall; those who have no resistive power so that a sudden cough or cold develops into grave disease. We hear of catching disease! Why not catch health? We can do it by always maintaining our healthy weight.

Scott's Emulsion.

of Cod-liver Oil, is condensed nourishment, food for the building up of the system to resist the germs of disease. It should be taken in reasonable doses all summer long by all those whose weight is below the standard of health. If you are losing ground, try a bottle now.

The bar will soon be opened up. Young man, look not upon the wine when it is red.

AT LAST the floods in the Mississippi Valley have subsided and it is found that the forts were mitigated to a less amount of damage. It is said, by those who have made the thorough investigation, that the loss is smaller than was expected. In fact, less than it was from previous floods, and it did not rise as high. The total damage is placed at $14,000,000, divided between Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

THE journey upon which Mr Charles Burdett Hart, the newly appointed minister to Colombia, left on Saturday, is a long one. After leaving the steamer at the principal port of Columbia, a journey of several hundred miles up the river by slow boat is to be made; thence a short distance by rail, and then by mule to the capital of Bogota, which is situated in the most delightful part of the South American continent, is a beautiful place of residence and contains a population of more than 100,000. The mule back ride up the mountains will be taken by the retinue of Mr Hart's party, as with any easier, who will be carried in the comfortable sedan chair or palanquin.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours: a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over indulgence. The necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Ten proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

OH, WHY SHOULD THE SPIRIT OF MORTAL BE PROUD.

Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?
Like a swift fleeting meteor, a fast flying cloud,
A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
Man passes from life to his rest in the grave.

The leaves of the oak and the willow shall fade,
Be scattered around and together be laid;
And the young and the old, the low and the high,
Shall moulder to dust, and together shall lie.

The infant a mother attended and loved
The mother, that infant's affection who proved,
The father, that mother and infant who blessed,
Each, all, are away to their dwellings of rest.

The maid on whose cheek, on whose brow, in whose eye,
Shone beauty and pleasure—her triumphs are by;
And the memory of those who loved her and praised,
Are alike from the minds of the living erased.

The hand of the King that the sceptre hath borne,
The brow of the priest that the mitre hath worn,
The eye of th sage and the heart of the brave,
Are hidden and lost in depth of the grave.

The peasant whose lot was to sow and to reap,
The herdsman, who climbed with his goats up the steep,
The beggar, who wandered in search of his bread,
Have faded away like the grass that we tread.

The saint who enjoyed the communion of heaven,
The sinner who who dared to remain unforgiven,
The wise and the foolish, the guilty and just,
Have quietly mingled their bones in the dust.

So the multitude goes, like the flowers or the weed,
That withers away to let others succeed;
So the multitude comes, even those we beheld,
To repeat every tale that has often been told.

For we are the same our fathers have been;
We see the same sights our fathers have seen;
We drink the same stream and view the same sun,
And run the same course our fathers have run.

The thoughts we are thinking our father would think,
From the death we are shrinking our fathers would shrink;
To the life we are clinging they also would cling;
But it speeds for us all, like a bird on the wing.

They loved, but the story we cannot unfold;
They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold;
They grieved, but no wail from their slumbers will come;
They joyed but the tongue of their gladness is dumb.

They died, aye! they died; and we things that are now,
Who walk on the turf that lies over their brow,
Who make in their dwellings a transient abode,
Meet the things that they met on their pilgrimage road.

Yea hope and despondency, pleasure and pain,
We mingle together in sunshine and rain;
And the smile and the tear, the song and the dirge,
Still follow each other, like surge upon surge.

'Tis but a wink of an eye, 'tis the draught and the pang,
From the blossom of health to the pale rose of death,
From the gilded saloon to the bier and the shroud,
Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?

Mr Isaac Hornet, proprietor of the Benton House, Benton, W. Va., and one of the most widely known men in the state was cured of rheumatism after three years of suffering. He says: "I have had sufficient command of language to express one tenth of what I suffered, my physicians told me that nothing could be done for me and my friends were fully convinced that nothing but death would relieve me of my suffering. In June, 1896, Mr Kerns, then salesman for the Wheeling Drug Co., recommended Chamberlain's Pain Balm. At this time my feet and legs were so sore due to rheumatic thrombi that I could not put my feet to the floor without suffering intense pain and it seemed to me my head would burst but soon after I began using the Pain Balm the swelling began to decrease and now I am entirely cured." For sale by all dealers.

SERMONETTE.

Thomas saith unto him: Lord, we know not whither thou goest and how can we know the way? Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me.—JOHN xiv. 5, 6.

During the writer's recent excursion it was his privilege to listen to two sermons on these remarkable words. One by Rev J. E. Mebane, recently of Fayetteville, West Virginia; the other by Rev D. M. Layton, of Frankford, Greenbrier County. In both sermons reference was made to the deeply interesting circumstance under which this fourteenth of John was spoken. Our Lord was now passing his last night on earth previous to his crucifixion. In a few hours more he was to be betrayed, spit upon, buffetted, and scourged, and then nailed to the cross and endure its unspeakable agonies. And yet he seemed more concerned about his few faithful friends than about himself, so full was his heart with sympathies for his distressed companions, whose minds were so full of sorrow at the thoughts of separation. His blessed mission on earth was to comfort those that mourn. and so he spoke to them more kindly than they were disposed to speak of themselves, and referred to their separation as that of merely going away on his part to the Father's house of many mansions to prepare a place for them, and when the place was prepared he would return for them, so that where he should be they should be also.

In answer to the question "How shall we know the way to the Father's house?" our Savior said: I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh to the Father but by me. He declares that he is the way,—not a mere sign-board or finger-post to point out the way, but he himself is the way. Were he to express the same idea in our language he would say "I am the road," in a sense as widely different as the sign-board differs from the road it points out. The road is the means of bringing places near each other so as to pass from one place to another. So Christ brings earth and heaven into a practical nearness, and He is the Way by which a person may go from an earthly state to a Heavenly relation or condition,—from an unsaved state to a saving state of grace.

Christ is also the Truth.

That is to say we are to believe as Christ believed and make use of the truth as he made use of it. That truth he used and to which he refers he expressed in this way: To love God with all the heart, the soul, the mind, and strength, and the neighbor as one's self. Not only to know this but actually put this truth to use. Were this to become a general thing among the controlling masses of people that make up the masses of our earth, every wrong would be justly righted, every quarrel would be peacefully settled; there would be peace and prosperity far exceeding anything ever dreamed of by our citizens. There is a touching picture illustrating what may be or what was the case in reference to our country after public affairs had gone on so far in forgetfulness and neglect of the Truth as to throw forth in the late terrible war. In this painting Columbia appears as a weeping mother pleading with her two most pet properties to refrain them from engaging in a deadly conflict. In spite of her protestations, her hands and her persuasive countenance they were cutting each other in pieces, blood was streaming from numerous ghastly wounds, and of last gasp struggle ceased from about the bosom. Then upon reflection it was found that all this need not have been had all parties loved God with all the heart, the soul, the mind, and strength, and their neighbors as themselves.

Christ is The Life.

Our Savior through the influ*ence of the Holy Spirit imparts* life and enables all those willing to receive and use this life to do what otherwise would be impossible. The impotent man placed by friends near the healing pool had not walked a step for years, the he had feet and all the bodily members and faculties of intelligent reasoning; yet all were useless for the purposes of life and action. But when he permitted Jesus who is the life to come in contact with him, and he tried the best he could to obey Christ when told to arise and walk, he was enabled to rise and walk.

That was a very impressive scene that occurred near the graveyard at Nain, the home of the widowed mother whose only son had *died. That dead youth whose fu*neral was in progress, tho he had eyes, feet, and hands, still all these were just as useless as so many clods of earth. Life was wanting, but when the Blessed One, who is The Life, said to him: Young man I say unto you arise, and the dead youth was willing to receive the offered life, and did the best he could to obey Jesus through the almighty life-giving power that went along with the command of Jesus, he arose and returned home.

So in a spiritual sense there may be everything apparent but the life, and still nothing really accomplished in the way of going back towards our heavenly home. But when we attend to the words of Christian duty, and our wills respond to the Savior's instructions, and we do the best we can in our weakness to obey his commands, then along with the words comes the Life, or power of proper living, and a difference as manifest as that between life and death becomes apparent. On the morning of that sad funeral at Nain that sorely bereaved mother looked with tearful eyes and a breaking heart upon her loved dead, but at evening time the same eyes were suffused with tears of joy and her heart thrilled with hopes unspeakable as she sat by her son that was dead in the morning but now alive.

How wonderful is Life, and may it be in our hearts to receive this Life, and that too more abundantly.

And this is the record that God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. . . . These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.—1 John, v. 11-13.

Suffering Women.

Alas! women do suffer. Why, we often cannot tell, but we know there is one great cause, and that is weakness. The headaches, the depressed feelings, the pains, the discouragements, indeed, almost all the misery has a common cause—weakness. At such times a woman always needs a friend that can be relied upon, and such a friend, for more than twenty years, has been that greatest of all remedies,

WOMAN'S Safe Cure

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

Among the persons settling in what is now Pocahontas County early in the century John Sharp, Senior, a native of Ireland, is richly deserving of more than passing notice. He is the ancestor of the families of that name that constitute such a marked proportion of the Frost community, and have been identified with that vicinity for the past 95 years. Previous to the Revolution he came in with the tide of Scotch-Irish immigration that spread over Pennsylvania and New Jersey and thence moved South, and finally located in Rockingham County, Virginia.

His wife was Margaret Blaine, whose parents, resided in west Rockingham in the vicinity of Rawley Springs." She was a relative of the Rev John S. Blaine, one of the pioneer Presbyterian pastors in our county.

After a residence of several years in Rockingham County, Mr Sharp came to Pocahontas in order to secure land for the use of his large and industrious family, and he succeeded well, and saw them well fixed in life all around him. He reached Frost in 1802, and settled on the place now occupied by Abram Sharp, Esq. There were six sons and as many daughters. The daughters were Margaret, Anna, Isabella, Elizabeth, Rosa, and Polly. Margaret became Mrs Henry Dilley, and lived on Thorny Creek. Anna was married to Daniel McCollum, who finally moved to Ohio. Isabella became Mrs Alexander Ryder, who lived so long on the top of the Alleghany, seven miles east of Huntersville. Elizabeth was the wife of the Rev Jas. Wanless, a widely know Methodist minister, and lived on upper Thorny Creek, where John F. Wanless now resides.

Rosa Sharp was married to the Rev William J. Ryder, on Back Creek, Highland County. Her family mostly went West—to Illinois. Rev Stewart Ryder, of Bath, is her son. He was for several years an itinerant minister in the Baltimore Conference. Aaron Ryder, who lives near Frost, is another son.

Mary (Polly) Sharp became the wife of William Hartman, and settled in Upshur County, West Virginia. Her children were Joel, Susan, Elizabeth, and Mary. Joel Hartman married Jonathan Yeager's daughter Rachel. Mary Hartman became Mrs Jeter; Susan Hartman became a Mrs Harper, all of Upshur County.

In reference to the six sons that were of this family, and the brothers of the six sisters whose history is so briefly traced, we learn the following particulars from Mrs Elizabeth Sharp, the aged relict of the late John Sharp, a grandson of the pioneer John Sharp. This venerable lady has a remarkable history; left alone during the war, she supported her young and numerous family, paid off mortgages on the land, and came through the great trouble out of debt.

The pioneer's sons were John, Robert, Daniel, James, William, and Joseph.

John Sharp, Junior, married Rebecca Moore, daughter of Pennsylvania John Moore, and settled on land now occupied by Joseph Moore, near Glade Hill, who is a grandson of John Sharp, Senior.

Robert Sharp died in early youth.

Daniel Sharp married Miss Margaret Palmer, of Augusta County, and settled on Buffalo Mountain, beyond Green Bank. Daniel finally went to Lewis County, and settled on Leading Creek. His sons were John, Robert, Joseph, Cornelius, and James. Daniel Sharp's daughter Mary (Polly) married William May, on Anthonys Creek.

James Sharp, son of John the pioneer, married Margaret Wanless, a daughter of Ralph Wanless, Senior, and settled on the head of Thorny Creek. There were five sons and two daughters in his family. William, Andrew, Robert, James, and Lindsey were the sons, and Jane, who became Mrs Nicholas Beverly, and Nancy, who married James Moore, now of Ritchie County, were the daughters. He and Mrs Beverly moved to Ritchie County. Lindsay Sharp lives on the old homestead. Andrew Sharp lives on Back Creek, and will be 97 years of age July 3, 1897. He is able to do considerable work with his axe and brushhook.

William Sharp, of John the early settler, married Margaret Nesbitt, of Rockbridge County, and settled near Frost. There were a a son and three daughters. John Sharp, Mary Paulina, Eliza Jane, and Margaret. Mary Paulina married Stephen Wanless, and lived on Back Creek. Her husband was killed by a vicious horse. John F. Wanless, a widely known citizen is her son. Eliza Jane became Mrs David Hannah, of Fayette County. John Sharp, the one son of this family, married Elizabeth Slaven Wade, daughter of John Wade, Esq., of Highland County, and settled on the place near Frost where his widow now lives. There were five sons and four daughters.

The sons were Charles Osborne Wade, William Alexander Gilmer, John Benjamin Franklin, Aaron Uriah Bradford. Little Bradford died at the age of seven years, his mother's darling, and though many years have passed she weeps at the mention of his name. It cannot be long till they meet again. Matilda Ursula died at sixteen months. Margaret Ann died aged sixteen years. Martha Ellen and Marietta Emmeretta Virginia are yet living.

Gilmer Sharp married Nancy Elizabeth Arbogast, daughter of Solomon Arbogast, near Glade Hill. He settled a mile from Frost on the west branch of Knapp's Creek, in the pine woods, and opened up a nice home. His family consists of seven sons and two daughters: Upton Porter, William Bradford, Clifton Chalmers, Ernest Gilmer, George Mervin, Charles Letcher, Minnie Ursula, and Nancy Elizabeth Daisy. Minnie is now Mrs Ellis Busard, near Glade Hill. Upton Porter is a teacher in the public schools.

J. B. F. Sharp, of John of William of John, pioneer, married Mary Alice Gibson, of Bath, and now lives near Frost. Henderson Wickline, Carrie, Bessie Ellen, Ruthie McRae are their children.

C. O. W. Sharp, another son of the same family, married Miss Amanda Grimes, daughter of David, and settled near Frost. There were six sons and three daughters. Hanibal Hamlin, Charles Hanson, David Franklin, George Winters, Sammers Hedrick, Austin John, Trudie Montgomery, Isa Amanda, Eata Medora. Charles Sharp died June 29, 1892.

Martha Ellen Sharp, one of the surviving sisters, became the wife of Abram Sharp, Esq., near Frost Mill. He was a Union sympathizer and a Federal soldier. Their family consists of six sons and four daughters. Joseph Averill married Sarah Vint, and lives on Brown's Mountain. John Washington married Mary Ann Simmons, of Highland, and lives near Frost. Anderson Butler, Stewart Holmes, Aaron Abraham, and Lincoln who died at the age of four years. The daughters are Julia Quebec, who is Mrs William Shrader, and lives near Frost; Cuba Texillo died December, 1895, greatly lamented; Elizabeth Rachel, Mary Hannah Susan.

The other surviving member of Mrs Bettie Sharp's family is Marietta Emmeretta Virginia, who married Thomas R. Kellison, and lives near Mountain Grove. Her family of three sons and six daughters are named as follows: John Benjamin Franklin Lightbourne, Charles Hankie, Thomas Boner, Elizabeth Lagertie Mooney, Anna Amanda Jane, Ella, Marietta Constance, Hattie, and Lucy.

The last of the sons of John the pioneer is Joseph Sharp, who married Elizabeth Lightner and settled on the old homestead, now held by Abram Sharp. His children were named in the Lightner sketches.

It might be well to mention as many of his grandchildren as may have come to our notice. Polly Sharp was the wife of John Hannah, on Elk. Her sons were Joseph Bryson Hannah, late of Frost, where his bereaved family now reside; Sheldon Clark, Andrew Warwick, William, George Lightner Hannah, wellknown and welldoing citizens of Elk. Her daughter Jane became Mrs Fox, of Randolph County; Elizabeth is now Mrs Hall; Martha is now Mrs James Gibson, Rachel Mrs George Gibson, and Amanda Mrs Hambrick, of Point Mountain.

The late Peter Sharp near Frost was a son of Joseph Sharp. He was a Confederate soldier. His wife was Mary Ann Herron, daughter of Leonard Herron. Three of his sons are Methodist preachers. Oscar is a local preacher, William and Jasper are in the itinerancy. Samuel died recently, and Ashby is Constable of Frost District. Alice is Mrs Alexander Caricoff, and lives in Augusta County. Azelia married Rev C. M. Anderson, and lives in west Pocahontas, near Lobelia.

Another son, Henry Sharp, of the pioneer's son Joseph, married Caroline Curry, daughter of the late J. Harvey Curry, of Dunmore, and lives on Douthard's Creek, near Driscol. Their family numbers seven daughters and two sons. Clara, now Mrs Henry Overholt; Docia, now Mrs Warren; Effie, Mrs J. E. Campbell; Lizzie, Mrs Mack Ervine; Bertha, Lucy, and Pearl. Gilbert Sharp is at home, a well-known machinest; Albert Sharp resides at Marlinton, where he is a well-known citizen and has performed an active part in the construction of improvements.

Thus far we have been able to illustrate to some extent the history of John Sharp the settler. As was intimated, the great motive that prompted his coming to the head of Knapp's Creek was to get land. In this he was successful. His landed possessions reached from the Gibson farm near Frost up the West Branch to Armenius Busard's, near Glade Hill; he had property in the Hills, on Thorny Creek, and on Buffalo Mountain beyond Green Bank, and the most of these lands yet in the possession of his descendants.

He was small in person, blue eyes, light hair, and of florid complexion. He was constantly employed. Mrs Sharp was quiet in all her ways, very diligent in her duties, and patiently met and endured the toils and inconveniencies of living in the woods. These persons were pious, and some of the first religious meetings ever held in the vicinity of Frost were at their house.

CHILLING REMEMBRANCES.

It was during these late hot days, when from all sides came anxious inquires as to the whereabouts of the man who said "this is going to be a cold, wet sumther." No body seemed to be able to shed any light of the subject. One person gave utterance to the dreary thought that he had been stricken down by heat or overcome by thirst, perhaps within sight of home and friends, but we all, with one voice, cried "Pariah the thought!" We would not have him die exactly, however often our souls may have risen in revolt at the positively disagreeable man who makes thoughtless remarks about what the weather is going to be. I know of nothing more painful, when you are congratulating yourself on having come safely thro one of our show winters of fogs and frosts, and winds and old-fashioned snowstorms, and are looking forward to one of those "long, bright summers of our first youth that come no more, alas," but which we look forward to just the same. I say there is nothing half so painful as to meet a person who tells you in a way that leaves no room for doubt that this is going to be a cold, wet summer. He remembers a summer that started out just like this, nothing would grow and water melons did not get ripe enough to eat until the last of November and so on. It is an evil day when a man treats his friends to a reminiscence like that. I know a man who is an ardent, a most stubborn weather man and who does not hesitate to gainsay anything that has to do with weather. His friends are all sorry as no doubt this has been the chief obstacle to a useful and brilliant career. This man once counted among his friends an old lady who had boundless confidence in him and his weather forecasts. She went so far—she could go no farther—as to take his advice one evening as to whether there would be frost that night. She wanted to save her cucumber vines. He said there would be no frost that night. The old lady slept peacefully. The hardest frost of the year came that night and struck a vital spot in the cucumber vines. The scene next morning was a pathetic one. The old lady's grief was pitiful, as she bewailed her loss while the weary, hired man spoke his mind about weather prophets.

The weather man admitted that he had missed it and often did. He was braver than most weather men, willing "to die in the estimation of his friends with smiling lips, sparing them the spectacle of an unseemly death struggle unworthy of a prophet and sage."

What I really started to say was that it was one of those late hot days when I had almost despaired of getting cool. I suddenly remembered my arithmetic, which, in my school days, never failed to bring up what might be called a mental thunder-storm, and the atmosphere became cool all around me; the cold wave starting from where the teacher stood. I got the book, a sadly battered affair, and opened it, looking with interest at the names of girls and mystic school girl isms scrawled over the pages. On one of the blank pages was written the following, which was entitled "A never failing receipt for an awfully good time":

"Take an old horse and a rattling old buck-board, invite two other girls, dress up in striking costume, and drive back into the country to some quiet village and 'paint the town red.'"

The latter consists in such wild revelry as raiding ice cream saloons getting pictures taken, singing thro the streets, driving recklessly and mystifying people with absurd questions. Passing over this effusion of some misguided school girl with silent scorn, I presently came to something else not quite so ghastly. This was a piece of paper, some thing smaller than a yard square, securely fastened. How it got there I am sure I do n't know, but I recognized the paper instantly and my mind flew back to one dreadfully cold morning, in a school room in a little but loud-ed-ucational centre, in a not very obscure part of this faraway West Virginia. The paper was not quite a yard square and was covered on both sides with figures almost large enough to be seen across the street, with a sum in partial-payments. We had gone to the class one morning with that particular sum, all unworked, unbonored or unsung, and we were feeling very gloomy. I do n't think any of us ever had much faith in our teacher's mathematical qualifications—she's married now and can't be hurt—since one day when she told us that after getting to a certain place to "turn back and see how far you've gone." It did not seem possible to me then that a woman could go about carrying mathematical problems in head with an unsatisfied desire to play tiddle-de-winks, and we felt from the beginning of our lessons in arithmetic that sooner or later we, teacher and all, would get into trouble. Our apprehensions were reasonable, for our teacher became plunged in serious mathematical difficulties as soon as this sum was presented to her, with a remark from one of the girls to the effect that she did not believe that even "you can work that sum." This girl always says the first thing that comes handy and therefore is kept busy keeping herself afloat in sea of troubles three hundred and forty-five days out of the year. But the girl was right. The sum was too much for the perplexities for our teacher, but she stood at the bit, a board with pencil persistently advancing away with the chalk, now turning the paper back again, and forwards to look for the rule and shaming the day she was born, as know by the movement of her lips. We stood around, ill at ease, thinking some thing must be wrong with science itself. It was all very melancholy, and even now "it is not with laughter that I raise the ghost of that once troubled time," but I can recall it with coolness and quietude now, which are two important sensations in hot weather.

SERMONETTE.

My heart was hot within me, while I was musing the fire burned; then spake I with my tongue. Lord, make me to know mine end and the measure of my days what it is, that I may know how frail I am. Surely every man walketh in a vain show; surely they are disquieted in vain; he heapeth up riches and knoweth not who shall gather them.—PSALM XXXIX. 3, 4, 6.

The Psalmist was in profound thought, and the train of reflection was apparently modified by the blazing fire and the smouldering brands becoming ashes. Scientists tell us that the processes of our bodily life is a combustion to all intents and purposes. Hence it is when the life fire is quenched that "ashes to ashes" is something more than a metaphorical formula in the funeral service. The fourth verse is the lesson emphasized by the Psalmist. Surely men walk in a vain show when disquieted about vanities, heaping up riches and not knowing who shall gather them.

These verses have been going the rounds of the periodical press for several years, and illustrate the text. We feel sure that it is a very acceptable service when we place them in the reach of our friends. There should be no incidents in our history more impressive than the death and burial of our friends and acquaintances. For we are thus reminded of the solemn change that awaits us all, and those of us who may desire to give our thoughts an appropriate direction before we attend the burial services, as well as after our return to our homes, will find this exquisite poem very appropriate.

THE CLOSING SCENE.

BY THOMAS H. READ.

Within the sober realm of leafless trees
The russet year inhaled the dreamy air,
Like some tranced reaper in his hour of ease,
When all the fields are lying brown and bare.

The grey barns looking from their hilly
O'er the dun waters widening in the valley
Sent down the air a greeting to the mills
On the dull thunder of alternate flails.

All sights were softened, and all sounds subdued;
The hills seemed farther and the streams sank low,
As in a dream the distant woodman hewed
His winter log, with many a muffled blow.

The embattled forest, erst so stern
In autumn gold,
Their banners bright with every martial hue,
Now stood like some sad, beaten host of old,
Withdrawn afar in Time's remotest blue.

On the clear wings the vultures tuned his flight,
The dusky snakes heard his sapping ear's complaint,
And the sere mice feeling to the light
The village chimes went nearer to pale mid-heaven.

The sun had sunk from the hilltop cone—
Gray twilight—and all was stiller than stillest—some replying warder blew
His alien horn, and then was heard no more.

Where erst the jay within the elm's tall crest
Made garrulous trouble round her unfledged young,
And where the oriole hung her swaying nest,
By every light wind like a censer swung;

Where sang the noisy martins of the eaves,
The busy swallows circling ever near,
Foreboding, as the rustic mind believes,
An early harvest and a plenteous year;

Where every bird that waked the vernal feast,
Shook the sweet slumber from its wings at morn,
To warn the reaper of the rosy east,
All pow was sunless, empty, and forlorn.

Alone from out the stubble piped the quail
A croaked the crow through all the dreary gloom;
Alone the pheasant drumming in the vale
Made echo in the distance to the cottage loom.

There was no bud no bloom upon the bowers;
The spiders weaved their thin shrouds by night;
The thistle-down,—the only ghost of flowers,—
Sailed slowly by, passed noiseless out of sight.

Amid all this, in this most dreary air
And where the woodbine shed upon the porch
Its crimson leaves, as if the year stood there
Firing the floor with its inverted torch.

Amid all this, the centre of the scene,
The white-haired matron with monotonous tread
Plied the swift wheel, and with her joy'ous mien,
Sole like a fate and watched the flying thread.

She had known sorrow. He had walked with her,
Oft supped and broke with her the ashen crust;
And in the dead leaves still she heard the stir
Of his thick mantle trailing in the dust.

While yet her cheek was bright with summer bloom
Her country summoned, and she gave her all;
And twice was bowed to her his noble plume—
Regrets the sword in rust upon the wall,

Regrets the sword, but not the hand that drew
And struck for liberty the dying blow
Nor him who to his sire and country true,
Fell 'mid the ranks of the invading foe.

Long, but not loud, the droning wheel went on,
Like the low murmur of a hive at noon;
Long, but not loud, the memory of the gone
Breathed through her lips a sad and tuneless tune.

At last the thread was snapped—her head was bowed;
Life dropped the distaff through her hands serene;
And loving neighbors smoothed her careful shroud,
While death and winter closed the autumn scene.

The Blue and the Gray.

Both men and women are apt to feel a little blue, when the gray hairs begin to show. It's a very natural feeling. In the normal condition of things gray hairs belong to advanced age. They have no business whitening the head of man or woman, who has not begun to go down the slope of life. As a matter of fact, the hair turns gray regardless of age, or of life's seasons; sometimes it is whitened by sickness, but more often from lack of care. When the hair fades or turns gray there's no need to resort to hair dyes. The normal color of the hair is restored and retained by the use of

LAST Saturday, June 19, a very remarkable marriage was arranged for at Ligonier, Indiana. The parties are James Saxton aged 84, and Mrs Mary Twinkle aged 80 years. They were engaged and would have been married, but Mr Saxton went into the army and was lost sight of, and finally it was believed he had been killed and buried with the unknown dead. In the meantime Saxton buried three wives, and Mrs Twinkle has mourned the decease of four husbands. THE Pittsburg Post sends out this refreshing morsel of humor, and illustrates how prosperity may be retained by reducing an outlay for wages. It seems from the story that a section foreman on a branch line, after being notified repeatedly to reduce his force, received notice to discharge just one more man. It so turned out the foreman had no help but himself, and so explained matters in this way:

"DEAR SIR—Have been getting along the past three weeks with myself and the track jack. In consequence with your order have discharged the jack and send him to the track foreman. If you think best will discharge myself and give the jack permission to do the work.

"JAMES BARNES."

AS President McKinley was on his return from Nashville he paused at Atlanta, South Carolina, to let Vanderbilt's Biltmore rustic "nothing at Phillips."

one of the most elegant private homes in the South, and not many talk it anywhere else. The agent in charge knowing Mr Vanderbilt's aversion to newspaper notoriety objected to the reporters being admitted. Mr McKinley bristled up at this and sent the manager word that he and the invited correspondents would come together or stay away together. Upon second thought the reporters were admitted as the President's guests, and the agent would make no discrimination in regard to guests. The question, however, arises whether these reporters should have gone after knowing their presence was not wanted. Anyhow they ought not to have written one word about what they saw and heard within the limits of Biltmore as a matter of courtesy to Mr Vanderbilt. Good manners may be a trifle, but perfection is made up from properly observing trifles, and perfection is no trifle by any means.

HON W. J. BRYAN seems to be "swinging around the circle" on his lecture tour. More than ten thousand people listened to him 15th of June on the Virginia University lawn, and the fever of the people most everywhere to see and hear him appears about the same temperature it was when in its 'malignant' form in 1896. It made things a little chilly about the University when it became known that C. B. Rouss' conspicuous absence was owing to Mr Brayan's presence. While little is being said, there is a vast deal of thinking going on somewhere, and actions speak louder than words sometimes. Can it be that the Old Dominion is getting too small to hold two such men as Rouss and Bryan the same day, and is the whole United States liable to a similar shrinkage? It looks that way, we are sorry to say. Mr Bryan's address related largely to the elevation of mankind and to the most useful objects of society. "Men are largely creatures of enviroment. We can only strive within certain limits, but he is greatest who gives most to the world." He said the purpose of all society is to make each generation of men camp on a little higher ground.

"Monticello is a second Mt Sinai. Jefferson's ideas favored the application to government the principle of Christ.' 'Unjust taxation, larceny practices by law, and the money question will never be settled until a system be established which deals justly with every human being."

DAYTON RESIGNED!

A political commotion more startling than a thunder - storm breaking from a clear sky is now sweeping over the civilized world. The storm centre is at Phillipi, Barbour county, West Virginia. A dispatch from that place, June 20, is to this purport: The Hon A. G. Dayton is resting easier this evening. The doctor is in constant attendance and his friends are watching him. He has made several efforts to attack his signature by his resignation of his seat in Congress, but has been forcibly restrained. His wailing at times is pitiful, and his denunciation of Hanna is blood curdling." As to results the Charleston Gazette states in glaring headlines that the reported resignation makes a big sensation. Political and business centres are greatly alarmed. The cabinet in constant session. Panic in Wall Street feared, and public men and financiers in Europe very much alarmed.

The refusal of the President to appoint Colonel Tom Davies Collector of Internal Revenue has occasioned sorrow in Georgia. A dispatch from that point June 20 says: "The candidacy of Colonel Davis is not much improved. The swelling in his head has been somewhat reduced, but the attending physician says that it will be months before fully removes from the stock. His threatened to become a candidate for Congress when Dayton's resignation is accepted.

The London Times, the leading paper of the world, in discussing Dayton's resignation, gravely says: "Our trans - Atlantic cousins are never tired of making sensations. The news from West Virginia, the capital of the state of Phillipi, is very grave, but we will continue to hope for the best."

WHEN Mr Bryan was asked what he thought of the resignation he answered the questions with this question: "How can Mr McKinley get prosperity with Dayton

Mr Isaac Horner, proprietor of the Burton House, Burton, W. Va., and one of the most widely known men in the state was cured of chronic rheumatism after three years of suffering. He says: "I have not sufficient command of language to convey one idea of what I suffered, my physicians told me that nothing could be done for me and my friends were fully convinced that nothing but death would relieve me of my suffering. In June, 1894, Mr Horner, then salesman for the Wheeling Drug Co., recommended Chamberlain's Pain Balm. At this time my feet and limbs were swollen to such an extent that I could not wear shoes, it seemed to me my leg would burst and soon after I began using the Pain Balm the swelling began to decrease, and now I consider that I am entirely cured." For sale by all druggists.

GOVERNOR ROSWELL P. WE learn from the Clarksburg News that Union College, at Buckhannon, owned and controlled jointly by the U. B. and M. P. Churches, has been sold to a Mr. Moore, of Pocahontas County, for five thousand dollars. This is quite a feather in our cap to learn that one of our citizens owns a college. It is represented as one of the most valuable building properties in Buckhannon, including the college campus and two good buildings.

T. C. WARE, of Valley Head, is now in this county fitting out businessmen with the well known hive of which he is the inventor and manufacturer. It is a surprising sight to see him, in transferring a colony of bees to a new hive, turn the old "gum" upside down, split a piece out of the side and cut out slabs of honey-comb. The bees buzz about in clouds, but not attempting to sting. They evidently know and appreciate the fact when a person approaches them with good intentions and without fear—which induces confidence. You might almost say that the bee is a mind-reader of no mean capability.

JUSTICE H. BUSKIRK, the well-renowned Assessor of Pocahontas County, in passing near a young horse at Bird's Head was kicked twice on his knee by a playful colt—"accident or malice" He is also to be about on crutches now. He congratulates himself on the fact that he is done assessing the county for this year. In the work he has gotten the highest assessment ever given in the land that stock-raising was not stocked up to full as usual it was found that a light assessment would cause the rate to be higher, but the assessor is a wide-awake man who completed the work in short time and left a good deal of business for some successor to finish next year, which is a difference on the right side.

THE Bath County Enterprise is the name of a new paper started at the Warm Springs, with Robert Payne, Editor, and C. E. Alexander, manager. THE trial of Trout Shue for the murder of his wife was set in the Greenbrier Court for Wednesday of this week. It is said that the defense has summoned 120 witnesses. Messrs Preston and Gilmer prosecute and Dr. William P. Rucker defends the prisoner. On the issue of this trial depends the question whether Shue, who is a Dreop citizen, will reach his seventh wife, as he has boasted that he would have seven. The passing of the third endangers his neck or is liable to send him to the penetentiary where there is no marrying or giving in marriage.

A GENTLEMAN in the far South, who has traveled over much of the United States from Canada to the Gulf, gives it as his decided opinion that Pocahontas has the best summer climate of any place in the union for its tonic effects upon the nervous system. He predicts that when facilities for reaching this region become convenient and sure that our woods will be filled to repletion with people who have nerves needing bracing up. He speaks of a transient visit to this region as the means of making him feel good for a year, and he was nowhere near the Black Mountain of the nerve-refreshing precincts of Cheat and Gauley. There is reason for thinking that our climate in summer is about the best in the habitable world for the purpose indicated.

FROM what Mr C. P. Jones, of Monterey, Va., said while in this county last week in discussing the formation of this county, it received its name accidentally. According to his understanding this county and Alleghany were formed the same session of the Virginia Legislature. This county has the highest average elevation of any part of the Appalachian range, and it was to have received the name Alleghany, while that county was to have been named after Pocahontas, the Indian squaw, a name which would have been as appropriate for that county as this. As it happened the two infant counties were left to the tender mercies of an enrolling clerk who changed them in the christening and gave to this county the name intended for Alleghany county. The narrator wished it understood that he had not verified the legend, and that if it were discovered that Alleghany and Pocahontas Counties were not formed the same session, then this nicely constructed anecdote would fail.

MR Wesley Barlow, of West Union, paid this office a pleasant visit last Monday. He was a sunny soldier and served in Company I, 3d W. Va. Virginia Cavalry. Capt. D. A. Overfield. He was in the Valley campaign under Sheridan. He showed a pocketbook that he carried through the war and a no. 3 needle he used in mending clothing when in the field. He has a number of books on file at this office, one of which is a copy of Sands' Digest in the year 1846. It was made at the "Judy Press" sugar camp, a mile east of Huntersville, stated he pours annually from 600 to 700 gallons of sugar and molasses.

A Dangerous Forger Arrested.

The Black Douglass is in trouble. Not the chieftain who at the head of five thousand picked soldiers harried all Scotland in the thirteenth century, but one of the Pocahontas Douglass's, the thirteenth child of a widowed mother whose head is bowed down, not over the wash-tub as usual, but in real sorrow on account of the misdoings of her youngest boy.

Those who believe that education spoils a negro will score a point when they hear of a new departure of a young negro of Pocahontas County whose dishonesty took the direction of forgery. Tom Douglass, wishing to obtain some needed supplies a few weeks ago, wrote an order to N. J. Brown, the merchant at Mill Point, for forty cents in goods. The order was accepted, and last week he tried it again, raising the amount to fifty cents. This time he drew his Inland bill of exchange on E. L. Beard & Co., of Academy. Mr. Beard, knowing that the order was not genuine, refused to cash it, so prince of Swindlers proceeded to Taylor & Mcelwee, of the same town, telling them that Mr Beard had not honored the draft because he did not have the goods. They took up the order, and the Black Douglass traded it out in powder and shot.

In both instances he had taken the liberty of signing the name of Miss Bessie Edgar, the second daughter of Captain A. M. Edgar, and a most charming and accomplished young lady. Douglass had been working for Captain Edgar. He will be sufficiently punished for his presumption, no doubt.

As soon as Taylor and McElwee learned of the forgery thy had a warrant issued for him, and having confessed the crime before Justice Curry, was sent on to await the action of the grand jury. He was lodged in jail Saturday evening, where he will probably lie until the portals of the penitentiary open to receive him. The penalty for this offence is from two to ten years. This is a copy of the second order:

Mr Beard – Please let tom Douglass Have fifty Cents in store.

BESSIE EDGAR.

No effort had been made to imitate the handwriting of a young lady, but it is written on the leaf of a pencil tablet in the large round hand of a school-boy. The boy is better educated than many white boys, but still he missed it when he departed from the time-honored chicken-stealing habits of his race. He lacks the finesse necessary to the success of the forger.

The colored youth is a coalblack negro, about seventeen years old, and, as we said before, looks more fitted to rob a roost than forge a name. He is the favorite son of his mother, who is a widow, and this dereliction on his part has almost broken her heart. He gets his intelligence from his mother, who when asked how many children she had, said she did not know, but one of her daughters had told her it was a dozen and one.

A Woman in the Bar.

At each Court strangers are mystified and amused to see a fat old lady sitting in the bar with the lawyers, calmly knitting away from a ball of yarn that was originally white, but which, by the slow progress of the work and much use, has become a dirty black. Such is Becky Clayter the former defendant in a case in chancery, whose lands were subjected to the payment of her debts. She mistrusts all the lawyers, her own the most of any. She relies on the Judge and she generally manages to secure a hearing with the ear of the bench, at which time she tries to make her case clear by referring to a "forged note," and a "deed without a pole," all the time trying to get the court to read her authority, which is a carefully preserved page of an almanack. One day last Court she came in and deposited her dirt begrimed workbasket in the lawyer's consulting room, took an arm chair in the bar near the clerk and knitted away most unconcernedly except when she looked up to try to comprehend some particular knotty point in the argument. On this morning she had picked a resplendent bouquet for the Judge, consisting of wild roses and other common wild flowers, but she saw no good opportunity to get presented and she handled it all day until it was much wilted. The writer saw her late in the after noon with the flowers on a table in the bar, but does not know whether the Judge finally received the bouquet or the bouquet of wild flowers. Becky Clayter is to be expected every Court. She does not comprehend that her land is irretrievably sold and tries to pay her tax tickets each year, which the sheriff refuses to accept. She is a very good sense between the mad Miss Flyte of Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce, in "Bleak House," and "Poor Peter Peebles," in the Waverly Novels, both of whom haunted the courts of chancery for years. Becky comes in a "perpauly fix," as was reported, and so we may expect Becky Clayter to sit in our bar so long as the officers of the Court will let her or until she has fallen down in a "perpauly fix."

Hot and wet, and fine growing weather. Oats and corn are coming right along, and wheat never looked better.

The Box Supper' at Glade Hill was a success. $31 was realized.

The funeral services of Mrs Laurence Dysard were largely attended.

We understand that there will be a Quarterly meeting at Green Bank next Sunday, June 27, also Mr Harvey Curry's funeral sermon will be preached by Presiding Elder Martin.

R. L. Nottingham, C. E. Pritchard and H. P. McLaughlin are at Staunton this week.

Wm. Sheets and Wm. Jackson are off to Beverly, West Virginia.

George W. Ginger spent Sunday in town.

Auburn Friel was in town Sunday.

Miss Gertie Yeager and Sula Borner spent Saturday night with Mrs C. E. Pritchard.

L. E. Pritchard is off to Highland County.

We understand that there will be a big picnic at Green Bank on July 3d, and one at the old battle field at Top of Alleghany, on July 5.

We understand that the remains of the Soldiers buried in Pocahontas will be taken up and buried at Marlinton. This is what ought to have been done long years ago, as it would look much better than to have them scattered all over the county. It would be well if all the graves were fenced and the graves of the dead were cared for a little more.

The Taylor brothers will move their planing mill to Huttonsville this week.

Miss Bertha Sharp and Lu Moore were in town Saturday.

Mrs Annie Kerr has moved to Williams River.

Miss Nancy Galford has moved to near Dunmore.

The carding machine will commence work soon.

We have good reasons to believe that the road between Dunmore and Meadow Dale, Highland county, Virginia, will be built. The distance from Dunmore to Monterey then will be 20 miles. With this road and a telephone line we could know what is going on.

We believe that a few fifty-cent dollars would come in very well at this time. OLIVER TWIST.

Editor of THE POCAHONTAS TIMES:

A number of Pocahontas people have been inquiring about me, and as I do not take the time to write to an one outside of my own family, I find it convenient to reach my friends generally through your paper.

I have been here over a month, and like the people and the county very well. Spend my time working at Peter Dow's camp and at the Addison Springs.

I find a good many Pocahontas people here. Several of the boys are in camp and some are visitors at the springs. The Addison water is allright, but the Webster whiskey is frightful. A man who drinks much of it shows that he is not afraid of snake bite.

Several of the Pocahontas boys are sick. Monie McLaughlin and others in camp. John Lowry and others here in town.

I find that logging here differs in many respects from logging on the Greenbrier. Logs, 16 feet long, containing two thousand feet have to be brought in over the roughest roads imaginable.

Ted Henry intends to come down and help us a few days.

The Page.

The page's place in the Circuit Court is much sought after by the boys of the town and they take it turn about it would seem as a new boy gets the place very frequently. The services are light, such as errands over the building for the Judge, water for the juries, etc., and the compensation is one dollar per day. We opine that in the last few years that the place is secured by more political means than market its occupancy formerly in the days of the redoubtable Bruce Snyder, a bullet head youngster who made his pretensions good to the place by force and held the place successfully several years. It was generally understood throughout Roydom that if any boy aspired to the position that Bruce bade them defiance and challenged them to mortal combat, and in case they did not care for war, then they might expect he way laid and made to fight it out just before or after court. It was this cinch on the position that probably made that young officer so independent that if he found the proceedings tedious he would take a recess and when wanted, was not to be found. He moved away, and was succeeded by boys of milder manners and more industrious ways.

THE Rev Dr Sydenstricker, of Hillsboro, preached a series of instructive sermons at the recent Marlinton sacramental meeting. The texts were as in the order named: "And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear."—1 Peter iv. 18. "If I forget thee O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy."—Psalm cxxxvi. 5, 6. "For God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil."—Ecclesiastes xii. 13. HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

WANTED—AN IDEA

Barney Barnato.

LONDON, June 14.—A dispatch to the Central News from Funchal, the capital of Madeira, says that Barney Barnato, the well-known South African multi-millionaire, while returning to England from South Africa, committed suicide by jumping overboard from the steamer on which he was traveling. The body was recovered.

Barney Barnato was reputed to be the richest man in the world, his fortune having been estimated as high as $300,000,000, but where he came from and how he laid the foundations of his fortune are matters which have never been made quite clear. He appeared in London about five years ago with his head full of great schemes, and within two years he launched a stupendous speculative movement in South African mining stocks, and he was known as the Kaffir king.

According to one story he was he son of a Barney Isaacs, who used to go about the Whitechapel district of London gathering rags and old iron, and Barney himself turned cartwheels in the streets behind omnibuses to amuse the passengers and earn half-pence. That his name was originally Isaacs, and that he was born of Jewish parents in London, there seems to be no doubt, and, although another story says that his father was able to afford private tutors for him, this is probably a myth, for his lack of education and his uncouth manners were notorious.

Sometime during his early youth Barnato drifted off to the South African mining country. What he had done before that time to earn a living, and what he did during much of the time after he arrived in Africa, is largely a matter of conjecture, but there are stories told by persons who claim to have known him at various periods of this stage of his career which indicate that he lived by his wits then, just as he has since, only working on a much smaller scale. He is said to have been, in turns, a barber, a street fakir, a circus clown, an actor, and a mining camp follower, according as fancy prompted or the opportunity afforded. Just before he made his first big strike he is reputed to have been the owner of a "circus," which consisted of a single donkey that did clever tricks. Sometimes he peddled watches, or even cheaper articles, and there were hints that he dealt in "contraband," as diamonds are called which are not brought thru the regular channels. Men who make money in the South African country do not always tell just how it is done, and Barnato himself never made it clear how he got his big start.

However, its was its rapidity that suggested the marvels that followed the rubbing of Aladdin's lamp. One story is that he discovered by accident that the "blue earth" at Kimberly was the true diamond-bearing soil. According to it 20,000 men had been digging for diamonds at the Kimberley mines, and when they reached a depth of 100 feet or more below the surface, the yellow soil, in which they had been working, suddenly ended, and they came upon a substratum of blue earth that was almost as hard as rock. One digger went some distance into the blue earth and piled up several hundred tons of it, but the rest abandoned their claims and went away. The last man left when the racing season came on, and four months later Barney came tramping that way and in the crumbling blue earth left by miners he found a 30-carat diamond. In No. 1 time the word originated with these people and has come to mean a rowdy in English.—Mr y C. Collins, Missionary to Sioux Indians, St. Yates, N. D.

Hundreds of thousands have been induced to buy Chamberlain's Cough Remedy by reading what it has done for others and having tested its merits for themselves are to-day its warmest friends. For sale by druggists.

Kaffir boom.

Sir Edgar took Barnato to Paris and introduced him in other European financial centres, and the companies and shares which he was enabled to create and sell seemed endless. Anything with "South Africa" and Barnato's name upon it was accepted as a sure sign of wealth-making power, and it was estimated a year or more ago that the British public had invested $750,000,000 in his schemes.

One of these was the creating of the "Barnato Bank, Mining, and Estate Corporation, Limited," of London. Its capital stock was £2,500,000, divided into £1 shares. The morning the shares were issued fifteen hundred brokers began to bid for them, and they sold at premiums ranging from £3 10s to £4 each. How much real value there may be in the "Kaffir" securities no one can tell, but investors on this side of the water did not touch them. It is conceded, even in England, that their value is largely speculative, and during an attack made upon them in the London markets in the latter part of 1896, Barnato declared that he paid out $15,000,000 to maintain their price.

Barnato's palace in Piccadilly cost $1,000,000, and its furnishings and service are most sumptuous. Here it was he received all who came. At his office he was inaccessible, except to those with important business with him, but everybody could see him at his breakfast hour at home, and nearly everybody who knew him at all called him "Barney." His wife and a big bulldog helped him receive.

The story of his marriage is on a par with the others about his earlier life. Mrs Barnato is said to have been a barmaid when Barney was buying diamonds. It is dangerous to have unregistered diamonds in one's possession in south Africa, and he took the stones to the barmaid. In due time he went to reclaim them.

"You can have them, Barney," she is said to have replied, "but you must take me too"

The Barnatos had three children, all born within recent years. Barney was anything but a handsome person. He was about five feet tall, fat, and short legged. His most marked peculiarity of dress was that he always wore white silk stockings.—New York Sun.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure is internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Origin of the Word "HoHo."

Hobo is a common word among the Sioux or Dakota Indians. They use the word in referring to a man who has nothing to do, who ride around nights singing and yelling simply to attract attention. An old chief will correct a son for any such tendencies by saying, "You act like a hobo." So I think the word originated with these people and has come to mean a rowdy in English.—Mr y C. Collins, Missionary to Sioux Indians, St. Yates, N. D.

INCIDENT ON THE ALLEY "L"

Prominent Negro Passengers Subdued by a Friend of the Conductor.

On the alley "L" road one evening a trio of negroes boarded a southbound train and proceeded in a way to capture the car they were in. They stood in the aisle and obstructed the progress of people coming and going out at the different stations and were inclined to be disputatious and quarrelsome with anybody who ventured to criticise their conduct. One of them in particular, the largest of the three, was especially pugnacious, and finally, when the conductor ordered them to leave their seats the big fellow threatened all sorts of destruction to the official, and defied him openly to lay hands on him, says the Chicago Chronicle.

The conductor passed to the next car and enlisted the services of an acquaintance of his, a "bouncer" at one of the smaller theaters. This worthy weighed about 240 pounds and was a giant in strength and size. He walked into the car where the darkies stood, grabbed the big one, who was at least half a foot shorter than the bouncer, and dragged him to the door.

As the car was just then slacking up at a station the bouncer threw the colored man clear over the gate and on to the platform without waiting for the guard to open the gate. The darky sprawled all over the platform and his two companions slunk to seats as the bouncer looked back into the car. The train went on, the two remaining "terrors" very still.

Afterseveralstations had been passed one of them spoke in subdued tones to the other. All he said was: "Dat sholy was a strong man."

ELECTRIC LIGHTS AND EYESIGHT

Unprotected Lamps Found to Be Injurious to the Eyesight.

The question of injury to the eyes from electric light is being prominently discussed by scientists, oculists and laymen throughout the country. While opinions widely differ as to the ultimate injury likely to result from the rapidly increasing use of electricity, the consensus of opinion is that light from uncovered or uncolored globes is working damage to the eyesight of humanity. In a discussion of the subject a London electric light journal, in dealing its trade, feels called upon to make some important admissions. It says: "It is not customary to look at the sun, and not even the most enthusiastic electrician would suggest that naked arcs and incandescent filaments were objects to be gazed at without limit. But naked arc lights are not usually placed so as to come within the line of sight, and when they do accidentally, whatever may result, the injury to the eye is quite perceptible. The filament of a glow lamp, on the other hand, is most likely to meet the eye, but a frosted bulb is an extremely simple and common way of getting over that difficulty. The whole trouble can be easily remedied by the use of properly frosted or colored glass globes. In any case, however, the actual permanent injury to the eye by the glowing filament is no greater than that due to an ordinary gas flame."

THEY NEVER HEARD OF HIM.

Two Chicago Business Men Who Wondered Who George R. Davis Is.

Three men were chatting together in a Madison street cigar store. It was raining outside and neither was in a hurry to leave. One of them was a well-known politician and the other two were apparently successful business men. A military-looking gentleman with snowwhite hair, mustache and chin whiskers entered, says the Chicago Chronicle.

"Good evening," said the politician. "A nasty night," he added.

"Who is that?" queried one of the other two men of the politician after the man he had addressed as colonel had gone out.

"Why, don't you know him—Royal George Davis?"

"George R. Davis—don't know George R.?"

"What did he do?"

"Why, man, he was director general of the world's fair."

"Never heard of him."

The politician looked at the man in undisguised amazement. "Come, buy the cigars," was all he said.

And such is fame.

How Manufacturers Test Bicycles.

Unless one has visited a great bicycle factory it is not easy to appreciate the many delicate operations that the parts of a bicycle are subjected to, the many tests that must be passed, and the hundreds of careful inspections that the many parts must pass before they are considered worthy or good enough to be assembled into a bicycle of standard worth. Visitors to a big manufactory are surprised at the extent of the plant, the perfect appointments, and air of cleanliness which prevails throughout. It does not take the most inexperienced long to see why it costs so much to buy a good bicycle. The most exacting care is taught that the very best materials are necessary in every part; skilled labor of the highest order is essential to obtain the desired results, and if any part goes wrong the loss to someone and to the afterwards found imperfect, it is nothing short of marvelous.

A Remedy for Thinness.

A French paper tells the story of a dramatic instructor who had set a pupil a girl who was very poetic, but woefully thin. Thinness is no fault on the stage except where there is the part of a consumptive, or in the case of short parts, as in the case of those actresses of whom it is said that they prefer parts before most other to be executed a physician would be called in to prescribe for them. The physician inquired into the case beforehand. "Why?" asked the dramatic instructor. "Because," was the reply, "I understand how to prescribe for the parts?"

"For those years we have not been without Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in our house," says Mr. H. H. Hall, of R. H. Adams & Co., Indianapolis, Ind., and my wife would no more think of being without four or five bottles of that remedy in the house than she would of her cooking utensils. We have used it with all classes of our children and I never fail to recommend it to my friends, for I have found it to be the best. For sale by druggists.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

William Auldridge, Senior, the ancestor and founder of the family relationship of that name in our county, was a native of England. His mother, the late Mrs Elizabeth Johnson, near Marlinton, lived to be more than one hundred years of age. His step-father John Johnson, in attempting to go from Marlinton to Nicholas County for seed-corn got bewildered in Black Mountain and went nine days without food.

William Auldridge's wife was Mary Cochran, daughter of Thomas Cochran, who settled the lands now owned by parties in the Marvin Chapel neighborhood. Mr Auldridge built up a home at the Bridger Notch, and it is believed the old barn stood on the spot where one of the Bridger boys died. This place is now owned by William Auldridge, a grandson.

There were six sons and three daughters. Sarah, Elizabeth, Nancy; Thomas, William, John, Samuel, James, and Richard.

Thomas Auldridge, the eldest son, was considered when in his prime one of the strongest persons physically in west Pocahontas. The first revelation of his strength was at a log-rolling. The champion of the day attempted to take young Auldridge's handspike,—which was a fancy article of its kind. The young athlete picked up both the champion and the disputed pike and laid them on the top of the log-heap with apparent ease. Upon his marriage with Elizabeth Morrison, daughter of James Morrison, on Hill's Creek, Thomas Auldridge leased lands now owned by John R. Posge, near Clover Lick, where he spent most of his working days. He then bought of Jacob Arbaugh and Captain William Young, near Indian Draft and opened up the property now owned by his son, Thomas, junior, and family. The sons of Thomas Auldridge, senior, were James, William, Thomas, and the daughters were Sarah, Elizabeth, and Mary.

James Auldridge, Esq., the eldest son of Thomas Auldridge, senior, first married Mary Ann, daughter of the late John Barlow, settled on land now occupied by Nathan Barlow, Esq., and then moved to the home near Edray where he now resides. His children were Henry, Miriam, Elizabeth, Moffett, and George. He was sadly bereaved of his first family by the ravages of disease, one son George, alone was spared. James' second wife was Julia A. Duncan, a granddaughter of Colonel John Baxter. One daughter, Mary, now Mrs Lee Carter. George Auldridge, the survivor of the first family, married Huldah Cassell and lives on the homestead near Edray.

William Auldridge, of Thomas Auldridge, senior, married Elizabeth Moore, daughter of the late Aaron and Katie Moore, on the Greenbrier, four miles above Marlinton, and settled on part of the home estead. Their children were Malinda Hanson, and Eliza.

Thomas Auldridge, junior, married Catherine Moore, daughter of the late John and Julie Moore, near Marlinton, and lives on the old homestead. Two daughters, Margaret, who is Mrs James Hannah, and lives on Buck's Run, and Ida, who is now Mrs William McClure and lives on part of the old homestead.

Sarah Auldridge, daughter of Thomas Auldridge, senior, married the late J. Harvey Curry, near Frost. Her children were Ellis, William, Mary, Emma, and Bessie. Her life is believed to have been shortened by the exposure and exertion due to the burning of the home near Frost. Ellis Curry married Miss Rock, and lives near Dunmore. William Curry went to Missouri. Mary Curry married Benjamin Arbaugh and lives near Green Bank. Emma Curry married the late William T. McClintic, and lives near Beverly, West Virginia. Bessie married Kennedy Woodford, son of Stephen Woodford, Esq., and lives near Beverly, County, West Virginia.

Elizabeth Auldridge, daughter of Thomas Auldridge, senior, married Henry Moore, and lives near Driftwood. One son, Andrew Moore, whose first wife was Alice Wanless, daughter of Andrew Wanless, of Back Mountain; the second wife Miss Hill, of Hill's Creek.

Mary Ann Auldridge, daughter of Thomas Auldridge, senior, became Mrs William Moore, of Elk. One daughter, Ann Moore, survives her.

William Auldridge, second son of William Auldridge the ancestor, married Miss Nancy Kellison, and settled on the Greenbrier, 2 miles below the mouth of Swago. Their only child, Martha, married Geo. Hill, son of Abram Hill, of Hill's Creek. While he was in service in 1861 at Valley Mountain he contracted the measles. He came home and his wife took down also with the same disease, and the two died within a week of each other, leaving an orphan daughter who is now Mrs Robert Shaeffer. William Auldridge's second wife was a Miss Shaeffer. Her son, James Edgar Auldridge, lives on the homestead.

John Auldridge, of William Auldridge, senior, married Rebecca Smith, now of Ronceverte, who is far up in the eighties. She was a daughter of John Smith and Sally, daughter of Levi Moore, the Frost pioneer. The Smiths lived on land now owned by the heirs of the late Captain William Cochran. Mr and Mrs John Auldridge settled on Laurel Run, now owned by Nancy Newcomer, one of their daughters. Their children were Andrew, George, William, Clark, Sarah Ann, Nancy, Susan, Mary, Martha (Pattie.)

Andrew Auldridge married Mar. Moore, daughter of the late Dr Addison Moore, and now lives in Kansas.

George Auldridge married Caroline Duffield, and lives in Iowa.

The Auldridge brothers William and Clark died young.

Sarah Ann Auldridge married John Gay, settled first on Buck's Mountain, and now lives in Greenbrier County. Her children are Oliver, Adam, Enos, Nancy, now Mrs Fletcher McCollam, and Effie.

Nancy Auldridge married the late William Newcomer, settled on the old homestead, but now lives in Ronceverte.

Susan Auldridge was married to Loyd B. Carter, son of the late Dr Page Dameron Carter, and settled on Laurel Run. Her children are Marvin, Edward, Dennis, and Anna, who is now Mrs Otis Warwick, near Green Bank.

Mary Auldridge married Alva C. Carter, brother of Loyd, and settled on Laurel Run. Her second marriage was to Harvey Childers, and she now lives in Buckhannon, West Virginia.

Samuel Auldridge, son of William Auldridge the ancestor, married Miriam Barlow, daughter of John Barlow, senior, and settled at the Bridger Notch, finally on the Greenbrier River near Stamping Creek. His children by the first marriage were William, John, and Mary Ann. Mary Ann died young. John was killed in battle. William Auldridge, a well-known citizen, lives at Mill Point.

Samuel Auldridge's second wife was Susan, daughter of the late Charles Grimes. The children of the second marriage were Tilliston, Charles, Luther, McKendree and Elizabeth, who is now Mrs Clendennin, near Hillsboro.

James Auldridge, of William the ancestor, was a tailor by occupation, worked awhile at Frankford, West Virginia, and then settled in Missouri.

Richard Auldridge, youngest son of William the ancestor, married Hannah Smith, daughter of John and Sally Smith, of Stony Creek, and lived for a time on the old Smith homestead. Afterwards he settled in Bruton County. He was killed during the war. There were three children, John, Allen, and Alonzo. John was a Confederate soldier and died in battle. Allen was also a soldier, survived the war, and settled in Kansas. Alonzo, his sister Alonzo stung with a bee, and for her accurate aim he received the name of Alonzo Stung Bee. Alonzo was a Federal soldier, and settled in Kansas.

Richard Auldridge, junior, married Miss Jane Gay, daughter of Jacob Gay, settled on Buck's Mountain, and now lives in Greenbrier County. Her children are Oliver, Adam, Enos, Nancy, now Mrs Fletcher McCollam, and Effie.

Nancy Auldridge married the late William Newcomer, settled on the old homestead, but now lives in Ronceverte.

Susan Auldridge was married to Loyd B. Carter, son of the late Dr Page Dameron Carter, and settled on Laurel Run. Her children are Marvin, Edward, Dennis, and Anna, who is now Mrs Otis Warwick, near Green Bank.

Mary Auldridge married Alva C. Carter, brother of Loyd, and settled on Laurel Run. Her second marriage was to Harvey Childers, and she now lives in Buckhannon, West Virginia.

the effect that brother and sister were keeping house and prospering.

Sarah Auldridge, of William, the ancestor, married William McClure and settled on Greenbrier River below Beaver Creek. Their children were James, Rachel, Mary, and Bessie. Rachel became Mrs Jacob Pyles; Mary Mrs Geo. Overholt, on Swago; Bessie died in her youth. James McClure was married three times: first wife, Miss McComb; second, Miss Pyles; and third, Miss Frances Adkinson. He lives on the homestead.

Elizabeth Auldridge, daughter of William Auldridge, senior, married Jacob McNeill, a brother of the late "Little" John McNeill, and settled in Floyd County, Va.

Nancy Auldridge, the youngest daughter of William the eldest, was married to the late Moore McNeil, Esq., on Swago. There were three children, Clark, Phebe, and Mary. Clark McNeill died in youth. Phebe became Mrs Reuben Overholt and resides on the homestead. Mary was married to William H. Overholt, late of Hillsboro, now of Frankford, Greenbrier County.

Thus closes for the present the chronicles of this worthy man's family. The compiler would make mention of the assistance given him by James Auldridge and [illegible] son George.

The venerable man whose history we have been tracing as illustrated by his descendants was a very estimable person. He was a ever-busy, industrious, and exemplary citizen. His influence was ever for sincere piety, strict honesty, and quiet judicious attention to his own concerns. These sanqualities characterize many of [illegible] worthy posterity. Early in [illegible] manhood he was greatly disabled by a falling tree and was seriously crippled for life; and yet the work he and his children accomplished in opening up nice plentiful homes under difficulties is truly remarkable and worthy of special grateful appreciation. He loved to hunt when it did not interfere with more important matters, and upon one occasion came near being slain by a catamount from which he escaped with difficulty.

Mr Auldridge, owing to his disabled condition, became a school teacher and pursued that vocation for years. He was about the first teacher that instructed the late Captain William Young. The good he accomplished as a teacher will never be fully known. When Mr Auldridge died at an advanced age several years since the common remark was that "one of our best old men had gone from us."

DROOP MOUNTAIN COAL.

It requires a visit to the coal mine of Mr T. F. Callison to realize the importance of the late discovery of coal on the end of Droop Mountain, a few hundred feet above the Greenbrier. As those acquainted with this county know, Droop mountain is one of our highest elevations, split from top to bottom to allow the Greenbrier river to pass on, and the mineral wealth of its base is that which might belong to the heart of a mountain. The place where coal was discovered is on a small run, a short distance from the road towards the river. Signs of it were seen in the bed of the run, and on digging a few feet a strata was discovered. Last winter Mr Callison secured the services of two experienced coal miners and opened a considerable mine in the hillside. The coal seems to dip to the east and the excavation was made towards the mountain. The coal proper about the month of the mine makes it look in every respect like a regularly worked coal mine of the Pittsburg field.

With a regular miner's lamp, the proprietor conducted his visitors to the mouth of the cavern where the vein of fire damp and other explosive gases prevented the strangers from entering until the lamp had been carried to the entrance and all the inward, about eighty feet from daylight. They then advanced fearlessly. The mine is fifty-six inches from floor to roof, and the progress is painful and slow. The mine is well timbered and a tramway laid the entire length. The tunnel is about eight in width. Arrived at the the end of the excavation a good view of the coal vein could be had. On the floor was a vein of about a foot in thickness of good coal. On top of this was a layer of fireclay.

Fireclay is the special term for the gray clays of the Coal-Measures, intensified with, and generally in close proximity to, the seams of coal, in beds varying from a few inches to many yards in thickness. It is locally known as "clunches" and "underclays," and is supposed to represent the soil that produced the vegetation from which the coal was formed. As far as this coal is developed, the clay is from one to three inches in thickness and is easily removed from its resting place by means of the fingers. This leaves a crevice in which wedges may be driven to dislodge the coal. A little exposure to the air makes this clay as hard as stone, and Mr Callison has put in a number of back-grates in stoves with it. Above the fireclay to the roof of the mine are strata of pure coal, and coal that has too much foreign substance with it to be reduced to ash-

THE REASON WHY.

Editor of THE POCAHONTAS TIMES:

The question of low wages for teachers in this County is reaching enormous proportions, and justly it should. The teacher is made a tool of and he has so tamely submitted to this species of treatment so long that the Boards of Education have become educated to believe that this kind of treatment will forever be tolerated and endured.

It is a well established fact that there is no better way to get a good job done than to pay well for it. It is not this fact well established from everyday life? The public school teacher is invariably most poor, and seldom has sufficient money ahead to pay his Institute bill, or passable clothes in which to present himself in public.

Why are we continually losing the best teachers from the profession? First, because they are insufficiently paid. Second, because of the unthankfulness characteristic of the teacher's profession.

We are paid so little for so much that we must quit—I repeat it, we must quit—whenever we have capacitated ourselves to do business for men who will render us a just equivalent for our toils.

It is the fist of fate from which nothing, but better pay, can absolve us. But some small voice like said: "Better schools will get us better pay."—not so, is it? A man had as well starve himself to death to get a better appetite for his breakfast as to trust longer to this device to raise us from this deplorable condition of affairs.

Would a strike for better pay help us? It think not, however, and what is the incentive to that opinion, do you ask? I will tell you: I hear that we are too negligent in electing members of our Board of Education, and often elect men who would much rather educate their children privately than to do so otherwise, and who would look with pride at the state of things which would cause a revolt on the part of the teachers, which would be the means of rending to atoms the free school system—the pride of the poor man and an eyesore to many rich men. What then is to be done? Could that question be answered by the tongue of the orator, the pen of the poet, or the device of the evangelist we would ask them, or either of them, for the sake of the preservation of the cord that binds a brotherhood, to come to our rescue in the time of sore trouble. We must soon lose our most valued teachers under the influence of the present state of things.

"There is always work for willing hands to do," and "The hireling is worthy of hire." It is a well established fact that a successful teacher will make a successful business man—clerk, book-keeper, agent, or salesman—and when a first class business man cannot command more than $40 per month and board himself, he had better let his hair grow and turn to farming.

I wish to hear from others on this subject, and hoping that I may be so favored, and that no one will think that I am presenting myself too much, or that I am "cheeky" or "fresh," I am yours until no more again.

The Earthquake.

A Tazewell, Virginia, lawyer, who was attending court at Pearisburg, Giles County, at the time of the recent earthquake, thus describes the occurrence there, which seems to have been the centre of the seismic disturbance:

"Imagine the sharpest peal of thunder you ever heard nearest you, then increase this crash three fold and you will have some idea of the actual noise; sharp, strong, and appalling. It seemed as if the rock strata under the old town was being crushed to powder by some mysterious agency, and the noise was as great as if it were all grinding. The earth rocked, the buildings trembled, and that daft or crazy feeling that seizes one when awful and uncontrolable dangers are about, caught every soul. The houses cracked and reeled; the bricks flew from off the house; riding horses secured to the racks broke loose and fled and neighed; the dust arose from the rolling earth and trembling houses like the sweep from a simoon; men, in mantle consulting coolness, waltzed in such others arms; others leaped fences and held their hands over their heads; women screamed and fled with their little ones; and children cried and ran around aimless and helpless."

"July 18, 1896, our store, four dwelling houses and three barns were washed away by a flood. Soon after the community was visited by an epidemic of bloody flux. In a short time we sold ten dozen of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and in every case where it was used the results were all that could be desired; in fact our physicians admitted that it would do more toward bringing about a cure of flux than they could do."—BUSH & KNISLEY, Auburn, W. Va., Oct. 8, 1896. For sale by Hickett's & Co., Marlinton; Amos Barlow; Huntersville, Barlow & Moore, Edray; and R. B. Moore & Co., Academy.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Rockingham Register, a Mennonite minister and a gentleman of much intelligence, writes of a recent excursion to Pendleton and Randolph Counties. He states that it is very probable that a new county will soon be organized of sections from west Pendleton and east Randolph and about equal to Grant County in area, and Horton the proposed County house town. The northern boundary, Grant County, the eastern North Fork Mountain in Pendleton, southern Highland County and the western Mahlie Mountain, in Randolph County. If this be done, he thinks that the prospects of the new Randolph County house being being built at Elkins will be promoted. About the time of his writing, June 14, he says the rainfall was prevalent among the prostrated businessmen of that section, that a late rainbird deal had been effected, giving the C. & O. the control of the Dry Fork R. R. He was moreover informed that plans were being considered for an extension of this line hooking to a connection with the C. & O. at Covington, Va., thus opening an air line from Pittsburg to the South, which may become one of the main arteries of travel between the two great manufacturing centres of the North and South.

Hon. C. E. Bush, president of the Greene County (W. Va.) Court, says that he has lost three cows of Rex in his family, during the past summer, which he raised in less than a week with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He feels also secure, that in some instances there were casualty secured changes a day.—Greenville, W. Va., Pathfinder. This remedy has been used to also experience of Rex and cures of cholera infantum. It can always be depended upon for bowel complaints, even in the most severe cases. Many family should keep it on hand. For 50 and 25 cent sizes for sale by Kaiser & Co., Marlinton; Amos Barlow, Huntersville; Barlow & Moore, Edray; and R. B. Moore & Co., Academy.

The West Virginia Cyclone.

Sunday afternoon, June 13th, seems to have been a very calamitous one in Barbour County, along the Tygarts Valley River. We learn from the Philadelphian that at that time one of the heaviest wind and hail storms ever witnessed in that region occurred.

About four miles south of Philippi the track of the storm was very plain and from two to three hundred yards wide. At first the track was along the river, then deviated to the tops and sides of the hills, either twisting off or tearing up by the roots almost every tree that came in reach. It crossed the river above Belington and the Belingtonians had a chance to see and hear its horrors without any material danger.

About 3 P. M., as seen Belington, there was a hard rain and soon hail large as marbles began to fall. There was a lull in the storm and glass by the hundred, and frighten the people considerably. Upon the hail ceasing there was a brief calm, but before the people had become composed, they were startled more than ever by the terrific roaring that seemed to be coming nearer, and proved to be a genuine cyclone of the western type. By it trees were torn up by the roots and tossed high in the air, fences scattered and almost every thing leveled to the ground or blown away. It was in the shape of a funnel, black as night having a revolving motion, and seemingly charged with electricity.

So far as heard from, there has been no loss of life.

Mrs Andy Ware, living two miles from Belington, had a very narrow escape from instatnt death. A fence rail, which had been whirled into the air, fell end-wise upon the roof of the dwelling, passed thro the roof, ceiling and the floor on which the lady was standing, coming so close as to bruise the side of her face. Joseph Hart, two miles above Belington, had his kitchen torn down and his grain house, also, and the grain scattered around. A calf near this house was caught up and carried away and had not been found next day. At Custer, three miles off, two houses were thrown down, but no one was injured. At Elkins several houses were unroofed and other injuries done. Two hundred trees blown down in the grove around the mansion of Senator Elkins and a portion of its roof displaced. While wind had been seen to have been pretty general, Belington is about the only place that saw a cyclone.

This same wind passed up a valley this side of W. McClintic's camp on Williams River, and completely wrecking the forest for a narrow strip. About 450 trees had to be cut out of the road.

Weak Lungs

Hot weather won't cure weak lungs. You may feel better because out of doors more, but the trouble is still there. Don't stop taking your because the weather happens to be warm. If you have a weak throat, a slight hacking cough, or some trouble with the bronchial tubes, summer is the best time to get rid of it. If you are losing flesh there is all the more need of attention. Weakness about the chest and thinness should never go together. One greatly increases the danger of the other. Heal the throat, cure the cough, and strengthen the whole system now. Keep taking Scott's Emulsion all summer.

Scott's Emulsion

The Osborn SPRINGTOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping.

The teeth in this Harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other, Pulverizing the ground thoroughly.

The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malcable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break.

The peculiar shape of the teeth curling two-thirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening they are stronger than used on any other harrow.

By the levers, the depth of the work can be regulated while the Harrow is in motion.

The draft is steady and direct, as the Harrow has no side motion.

ALL THESE FEATURES COMBINED HAVE MADE THE OSBORNE CELEBRATED.

It has no EQUAL,—it never will have a SUPERIOR.

HOEING CORN.

In an article republished in the Central Presbyterian, taken from the American Agriculturist, we find some interesting thoughts about hoeing corn that are hereby laid before the reader. Two reasons are usually given for cultivating the soil. One is to prevent weeds from growing, which causes a drain on the soil moisture. The other reason is to overcome a compact condition of the soil which is continually induced by gravity. This compactness of soil increases the effectiveness of the capillary force, drawing the moisture to the surface where it is evaporated and lost to the soil and no longer nourishes plant life.

While these two reasons go very far towards explaining the importance of cultivation,—hoeing and plowing,—still there is much of something else to be explained. The velocities, the direction, and the general nature of the capillary currents in the soil, the relation of these currents to plowing and hoeing, and the bearing of these currents on the aeration and general physiological work of the plant-roots. These capillary currents run up and down as a general rule. When the surface is drying the capillary force draws the moisture up; but after a rain, when there is an excess of water in the surface soil, this seeps downward.

Now were it not for disturbing the roots of the growing plants the present system of plowing and hoeing might not be open to criticism or improvement, so it may be asked might not the present system be modified so as to affect the direction and increase the briskness of the capillary circulation. As corn is commonly cultivated the ground is stirred at intervals of from one week to eight or ten days. This operation violently upsets the working of the capillary currents in the moisture of the soil, as well as of the diffusion currents in the soil gases. Now if some method be devised by which the ground, by the same amount of work, could be stirred every second or third day in such a way that the capillary currents might be started afresh (but without any greater exposure of the moist earth to drought, and without causing any more injury to the roots,) this would in all probability be an advantage gained. Now this may be done by going over every third or every second row in the field at a time, taking the remaining one or two rows successively at intervals of two or three days, thus finishing each cultivation in the usual time. In this way the ground will be stirred just as much and just as effectively as at present row by row, but the activity of the currents in the moisture and in the gases of the soil will be revived three times instead of once. This ought to help the plant by adding to the available supply of plant life.

Woman.

"Woman's faith and woman's trust—
Write the characters in dust,
Stamp them on the running stream,
Print them on the moon's pale beam,
And each evanescent letter
Shall be clearer, truer, better,
And more permanent, I ween,
Than the thing those letters mean.

"I have strained the spider's thread
'Gainst the plunge of beast and head;
I have weighed a grain of sand
'Gainst the plight of heart and hand;
I laid my iron bow of fate beside
How her faith grew light and her word was broken.
Again her word and truth she plight,
And I believed those words are right."

—SIR WALTER SCOTT.

"July 18, 1866, our store, four dwelling houses and three barns were washed away by a flood. Soon after the community was visited by an epidemic of bloody flux. In a short time we sold two dozen of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and in every case where it was used the results were all that could be desired. In fact our physicians admitted that it would do more good in bringing about a case of flux than they could do."—Ellis & Eastley, Ashton, W. Va., Oct. 5, 1896. BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

JOHN JORDAN, the ancestor of the relationship of that name in lower Pocahontas, was a very worthy native of Ireland. By occupation he was a tailor, and when he once met a fellow member of the craft after a prolonged separation his friend was very demonstrative in the pleasure the meeting afforded him. In his joyful exhileration as a special manifestation of his delight he struck his friend Jordan on the back of his hand with a side blow of his own. This friendly lick was so powerful as to inflict a bruise so serious in its effects as to necessitate amputation of the arm just below the elbow. Nevertheless, he learned to use a hoe or an axe to a good purpose in after life.

Mr Jordan came to this region as a traveling merchant, dealing in Irish linens and other portable merchandise. He was a "hard money" man in his financial preferences, and converted all paper money he received into silver and gold. Miss Miriam McNeel, daughter of John McNeel, the Levels pioneer, found out in some way that the young merchant had about a half-bushel of coin, and it seemed to occur to her mind that if a person disabled as he was could make that much money he could certainly take good care of her. To the surprise of her friends that a nice sensible girl as she was should fancy a cripple, she did not discourage the attentions of the hustling young Irishman, and they were happily married.

At that period in our local history a young man's recommendation was his ability to clear land, split rails, and grub; but to marry a cripple in store-clothes was not to be thought of.

After their marriage Mr Jordan continued to prosper in making a living, and purchased some servants to wait on the girl that had made such a surprising venture as to marry him. He settled on the Mill Stone Run, between Hillsboro and Locust, opening up a property now in possession of Isaac M McNeel, Esq., whose wife, Miriam Nannie Beard, is a grand-daughter of the pioneer merchant.

There were five sons and three daughters, John, Jonathan, Isaac, Abram, Franklin, Jane, Nancy, and Martha.

John Jordan, junior, married Martha Burnsides, on the Greenbrier in view of the homestead, and settled near Hillsboro, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Their children were Christopher, Jonathan, Mary, Miriam, Nancy, and Jemima. Christopher married Elizabeth Wallace, daughter of the late Benjamin Wallace, of Bath County, but long a resident of Pocahontas. Jonathan married Lucinda, daughter of the late James Sharp, Esq., on Beaver Creek. He was a Confederate soldier and died at home while on furlough from the army. Miriam married Aaron Hill and settled on Hill's Creek. Nancy became Mrs George Hill, and died a few years since at Falling Spring, Greenbrier County. Jemima was married to Captain Samuel Gilmore, of Highland County, Virginia, where she now resides.

Jonathan Jordan, son of the pioneer, first married Elizabeth Callison, daughter of Anthony Callison, at Locust. She was a sister of Mrs Julia Poage, near Clover Lick. Her twin sons, John and Anthony, died young. Jonathan's second wife was Rebecca Edmiston, daughter of the late William Edmiston, near Hillsboro. Jonathan settled on Dry Run, now in possession of Sherman Clark, Esq. The children of the second marriage were Elizabeth, Rebecca, Miriam, William, and James.

Isaac Jordan, another son of the pioneer, married Mary Callison, daughter of James Callison, on Trunk Run, near Locust, and settled just west of Hillsboro at the spring now owned by J. E. Bright. He afterwards moved to Davis County, Missouri. Isaac Jordan's second marriage was with the widow of Captain William Rorick, Lafayette County, Missouri. He became a prominent citizen in his adopted State, was commissioner of the revenue and justice of the peace. His daughter, Elizabeth, became Mrs Samuel Beard, son of the late Josiah Beard Esq., of Locust, and he resides in Missouri at this time.

Abram Jordan married Jane Edmiston, daughter of the late Andrew Edmiston, near Locust. She was a sister of the distinguished judge Mathew Edmiston, of Weston, West Virginia. Abram lived a few years on the old Jordan Homestead, then moved to Davies County, Missouri; afterwards to Saline County, Missouri. Nancy and Lydia were his daughters. Nancy became Mrs Faulkner, and Lydia was married to William Renick, from Greenbrier County. Mr Renick was an extensive dealer in live stock, and was partner in trade with Colonel Levi Gay, during his sojourn in Missouri.

Franklin Jordan, of the pioneer, married Martha Edmiston, daughter of Andrew Edmiston, and went to Missouri. After her decease he married Mrs Ballenger, from Ashland, Kentucky.

Jane Jordan, eldest daughter of the pioneer, was married to the late Major William Blair add lived near Hillsboro. Her sons were Morgan, Claiborne, Doctor Franklin, Colbert, and John who died during the war. Morgan Blair married Ann Gay, daughter of George Gay, and settled in Iowa. Claiborne Blair married Lavinia Bruffey, daughter of Mr and Mrs John Bruffey, and went west.

Mrs Jane Blair's daughters were Frankie Blair, who was married to the late Isaac Clutter, and lived on the Briar Knob, head of Hill's Creek. Miriam Blair was married to William Hill, son of Isaac Hill of Richard Hill, the famous pioneer and scout, and settled in Iowa. Elizabeth Blair became Mrs John G. Beard, and lives on the Blair homestead, near Hillsboro. Martha Blair was first married to Peter Clark, and after his decease she became Mrs Abram Beard and lived in Renick's Valley, where she died not long since.

Nancy Jordan, the second of pioneer Jordan's daughters, was first married to Isaac Callison, of James Callison, on Trunk Run, and went west. Her son, James B. Callison, lives at Jamesport, Missouri. Her daughter, Miriam, was married to William Walkup, from Greenbrier County, and lived in Missouri, where she died. Mrs Walkup's son is a promising minister in the pale of the Presbyterian church. Mrs Nancy Callison's second marriage was with the late George Edmiston, near Locust, lived several years on the old Andrew Edmiston homestead, and finally went to Missouri.

Martha Jordan, the youngest of the Jordan sisters, was married to the late Joseph Beard, Esq., of Hillsboro. For several years they lived on Spring Creek in upper Greenbrier, and then resided at Hillsboro. Her son, John Jordan Beard, married Minerva Edmiston, daughter of the late James Edmiston, Esq., near Mill Point. Their daughter Mollie became Mrs C. F. Moore. Harry Beard, one of their sons, is a physician in Lewisburg, and J. Fred. Beard resides with his parents at Hunterville.

Lieut J. J. Beard was a gallant Confederate officer. He was severely wounded and greatly disabled by wounds received in battle in the lower valley. He served for two terms as clerk of both the circuit and county courts of Pocahontas. He has resided at Huntersville for the past eighteen or twenty years.

Margaret Jane Beard, her eldest daughter, was married to Capt in William L. McNeel, near Hillsboro. Mrs George Callison, Mrs J. Thrasher, Misses Mary, Pauline, and Maggie M. Noel are her daughters. Joseph McNeel and Henry McNeel, residing near Hillsboro, are her sons.

Miriam Nancy, Mrs Martha Beard's youngest daughter, was married to Isaac McNeel, Esq., at Mill Point, where they now dwell. Their son, Thomas Sansoms, has just graduated in law at the University of Virginia. Harvey Wilson has just graduated in medicine at the same place. Lanty McNeel is at home and Mary Gold, their only daughter.

Mrs Martha Beard is yet living over eighty years of age, (1897), and makes her home with her grandson, Joseph McNeel, near Hillsboro. A few weeks since she was greatly disabled by a fall that has perhaps disabled her from walking for the remainder of her life. Her many attached friends and relatives sympathize with her very sincerely, hoping and yraying she may be spared to them.

Thus far we have been able to record something in memory of a very worthy and rather remarkable person. If our readers have derived any pleasure from this sketch their thanks are largely due James McCollam and Mrs Nancy Callison, of Locust, upon whose retentive memories the writer has drawn for most of the particulars here given.

John Jordan, the pioneer, was one of the original ruling elders of the Oak Grove Presbyterian church. His house was open to Methodist and Presbyterian ministers without any apparent discrimination, and for years was one of the main preaching places for Methodist ministers. He donated the site for the Methodist church near his residence. This church was destroyed by fire, under suspicious circumstances, about sixty years ago. In its time this was the most comfortable building of the kind in Pocahontas County in possession of that sect. In his death Mr Jordan was greatly mourned, for so many felt they had been bereaved of a true and useful friend. The poorer people seem to have been especially grieved. He was buried near the ruins of the millstone Run Church, and his grave seems to have been nicely cared for. A neatly carved stone (the handiwork of the late John Bruffey) marks the place where a good man rests in hope. His life's duty is done, and with tears of genuine affection he was tenderly laid here under the trees, planted by the unseen hand of the God he served.

THE LINWOOD FISHING PARTY.

A fishing party composed of C. W. Showalter, J. H. Slanker, E. S., W. B. and A. W. Gatewood, J. S. Varner, Grant Higgins, J. H. Gibson, G. P. Beverage and Dr. J. H. Lynch left this place on the 22nd for a week's fish on Gauley River. After a half-day's hard walk we reached the Sharp Camp, but, finding the fishing not good near that camp, we concluded to extend our trip on to Camp Cogar, a distance about eight miles thro the mountains. On reaching it, we went into camp for the night. After a few moments rest, the veteran cook, Charles Showalter, proceeded to prepare supper for the party, while Dr Lynch administered a few doses of Lynch's "Golden Medical Discovery" to those of the party who were very much fatigued by the hard days journey, and which seemed to have the desired effect, inasmuch as it gave each of the convalescents a ravenous appetite, such as only a fisherman can have. In the twinkling of an eye, and before the cook could remonstrate, the supper of hardtack and mountain trout had totally disappeared from the eyes of man, whereupon Dr Lynch declared that such a course was in direct opposition to the long and well established laws of digestion. The doctor's opinion, however, being over ruled, we lighted our pipes and prepared to listen to the 'wild and wooly' anecdotes told by members of the party who had 'been there before,' where the cry of panther and the howl of the wolf was the only food for the ears of man.

After listening to the recital of the hair - breadth escapes of Dr Lynch, and some of Cook Showalter's record breakers, we turned in to enjoy, what proved to be, an undisturbed night's repose, such as cannot be indulged in outside of the mountain fastnesses, surrounded by the winds of nature and the fresh, invigorating ozonelace air of unpolluted purposes.

We awoke with refreshed appetites, empty stomachs and a determination to conquer some of cook Showalter's "hard to tackle" grub, which, had it not been for the ever ready Dr Lynch, the medical factotum, might have cost the lives of the whole party.

After being duly recuperated by an administration of Lynch's "Compound Cow-pumpkin Pills," the party set out for the unrivaled fishing district of Gauley, where you only bait your hook and jerk 'em out like lightning. Arriving at the river we proceeded to fish down stream to the lively tune of "Fisher's Hornpipe," which was nobly rendered by and from the musical recesses of Johnny Varner. As the day and cloudless sky were most suitable for the sport, the day's fishing was a howling success, the river having been followed to what is known as the Three Forks or 'Junction Box' of the Gauley. The catch numbered between six and seven hundred of the finest specimens of mountain trout.

The only mishap that befell the party during the day was the unwarranted catch made by Grant Higgins, in which he was the unenviable hero. Thereby hangs a tale: While fishing in deep water, Grant, unfortunately, in amateur fashion, jerked the hook too hard and too soon, being of the button hook pattern; it fastened itself—no man knew where—searching for the seat of trouble, they found the hook firmly anchored in the seat of Grant's breeches, upon which a surgical operation had to be performed by the worthy Dr Lynch, which, it is unnecessary to say delivered Grant from the "hooks and crooks" of Gauley.

After this heart rending accident above described, we returned to camp, where supper was quickly prepared from the fine catch and as quickly devoured by the hungry crowd of Linwood sports.

The night was being pleasantly spent in old encounters 'lived o'er' when suddenly to the despair of all the unearthly cry of the panther—which resembles the cry of a young child—was heard. He was quickly located—subject to optical delusion—in a laurel thicket not far from camp. Armed with pen-knives pogrums we sallied out to give battle, but were recalled by Eugene Gatewood and Johnny Varner who soon convinced us of the uselessness of giving battle with such a beast with such arms as we possessed. We soon turned in and next turned out, feeling very much refreshed. The panther scare had given us a shock as lasting and as beneficial as that of a galvanic battery. This same panther was seen by a Pennsylvania hunter last fall.

A part of the day was spent peacefully fishing on the Gauley, which at this point is a stream of considerable size. The weather being just right we made a catch of nearly five hundred. After which, bidding old Gauley an affectionate good bye, we turned our faces homeward, where we arrived safely, fortunately were the worse for the wear and tear.

That the anniversary of this trip may be celebrated in each succeeding year by each succeeding generation there all the years to come is the burden of our hopes.

LINWOOD BOOSTER.

"A little more than a year ago, my hair began turning gray, and falling out, and although I tried over so many things to prevent a continuance of these conditions, I obtained no satisfaction until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. After using one bottle, my hair was restored to a

How Old are You?

It makes no difference whether you answer or not. It is always true that "a woman is as old as she looks." Nothing sets the seal of age upon a woman's beauty so deeply, as gray hair. The hair loses its color generally from lack of nutrition. If you nourish the hair, the original color will come back. That is the way that the normal color of the hair is restored by

ESSAY ON "THE HOME."

This is one of the most beautiful of words. How many pleasant thoughts it suggests! Tender memories of father, mother, sister, brother,—all that are near and dear in life cluster around this word. Webster defines home as a dwelling place; it should be something more, an earthly paradise, where we are always sure of finding sympathy be our troubles what they may.

It requires not wealth to make a model: om ; a few good books and periodicals, a few pretty pictures that everyone likes to see, and flowers and music help to make home really attractive. Above all let there be kind words and loving deeds, charity for each others faults and praises for their virtues. What a contrast such a home presents to that where vice and ignorance prevail, where there are perpetual faultfindings, scolding, carboxing and hair-pulling. It is said that the home influence shapes the destiny of the child. The word "home" sounds dear to us all, be it a mansion or a cabin among the mountains. Others may have finer houses and costlier furniture, they may fare sumptously from dishes of silver and gold, but they are not to be compared with our own dear home.

A young man who has gone to seek his fortune in the world wanders far from home, at last grows weary, and like the prodigal says, "I will arise and go to my father." He returns to the old homestead, but the place is going to ruin, the fences are all down, the paths are overgrown with grass, and the beautiful flower - garden that his mother loved so well is now overrun with weeds and brambles. The father and mother, weary of watching and waiting, are now in their lowly silent graves, and the forms that he cherished are mouldering back to dust. Only the lettered stones now tell where they repose.

He is alone in the dear old home that was once so full of life, ringing with the laughter of merry girls and boys, but ah, where are those boys and girls now? Some are at rest in the churchyard forever that used to meet around this dear home-tree, while the living may be far away. As he stands looking at the familiar scenes around him a picture rises before his eyes and he sees his home as he saw it last, and himself again with father, mother, sister, and brother gathered around the fireside. There sits his mother in the old armchair with a smile on her beautiful face and her knitting in her hand. Opposite is his father (with his hair just beginning to streak with gray) reading the evening paper. Mary is playing a melody on the cottage organ while they all join in the beautiful chorus of "Home Sweet Home." The sweet music at last dies away, and he awakes from his memory dream saying, "I have learned for late that there is no place like home."

PERMANENTLY CURED.

"For about two years I have suffered with diarrhoea. I used a number of remedies and was treated by physicians, but received no permanent relief. After taking a few doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I believe that I am permanently cured," says Mrs. Julia Cravens, Tolson, Calhoun County, W. Va. This remedy is sold by Hedrick & Co., Marlinton; Arbogast Bros., Huntersville; Barlow & Moore, Dunmore and R. H. Baker & Co., Academy.

MISS BALDWIN, the principal of the Mary Baldwin Seminary for young ladies, at Staunton, and one of the leading women educators of the country, died in Staunton last Thursday, aged sixty-seven.

J. H. MILLER, of Hinton, has been suggested as the Democratic nominee for Congress next year. We would say that this arrangement would suit us if Mr Miller wants it. He is one of the best Democrats in the district, and a fine man in every respect.

THE Hinton-Independent Herald yields to strong emotions when Dr Turner is mentioned for President of the State University, and uses profane language. We would suggest that the editor be milder in his expressions of disregard or the ex-president will be reinstated. He votes for a foreigner, Dr Purinton. We would suggest Dr Reynolds as the best man for the place and the logical candidate.

AFFAIRS in the East are still of a threatening character. The Sultan is still sending troops into Thessaly, and the Greeks are on the lookout and reenforcing important points to prevent surprise. Several engagements have taken place between Mussulmans and their neighbor Christians in Crete, and many killed on both sides. The trouble seems to be about cow pasture and sheep range.

THE British naval demonstration at Plymouth, June 26, in connexion with Victoria's jubilee celebration was the most magnificent of its kind ever made. One hundred and sixty-five British vessels were in line, and thirteen foreign nations were represented. Marine experts admired the United States cruiser Brooklyn very much, and it attracted special attention. It seems to be one of the grandest ships now on the seas.

KRUPP, the renowned manufacturer of cannons, has just completed a number of paper field-pieces for the use of Germ an infantry. The calibre is about two inches, and the guns are so light that a soldier can carry one. They are intended to be used in situations where the use of field artillery would be impracticable. Paper artillery in battle sounds strange but scarcely more so than wheels for railway carriages or paper water pails.

THE Emperor of Germany is making himself obnoxious to the people by the prosecution of persons for lese majesty, or high treason. Last year over five hundred sentences were imposed for this crime. One man is serving a sentence for saying that the hunting engaged in by the Emperor was not real sport but butchery. This is as bad as in old English days when a man was executed for wishing that the "king had the stag, hide and horns in his belly." The Kaiser is too sensitive to criticism for a "wee-lord."

THE proceedings against J. S. McDonald, President of Kanawha County Court, have been delayed by a writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court on the grounds that malfeasance in office can only be considered by indictment and conviction, after which the office is vacant. This is a constitutional provision. The position taken by Judge Guthrie of the circuit court is that it does not prevent the legislature from making laws regulating the impeachment of officers to mean to us that the action of the constitution makes malfeasance in office an indictable offense which having been done would incidentally vacate the office.

THE GIELDSENSUPPE CASE.

Last week two pieces of a man's body were found in New York eight miles apart, each wrapped in a piece of oilcloth. The portions were those of a large man's body, one being the chest and arms from the neck to waist and the other the lower portion of the body. The legs were found later. The head is still missing. The man had been stabbed to the heart with a large knife and numerous other knife wounds inflicted. On the breast was a piece of skin cut away as tho to remove some mark. The police were able to identify the remains as those of William Gieldsensuppe, a German, who worked in a turkish bath room. His work being performed with body nearly bare, his associates were each able to identify the body. They arrested a woman named Nack, a midwife by profession, who had been the dead man's mistress. She is in a bad case, owing to the fact that she does not account for her time and has told so many lies in connexion with the matter.

The queerest thing about the whole affair is the position which the newspapers occupy in regard to the matter. The New York Journal would never have laid its head on a peaceful pillow again unless it had unraveled the mystery, and it established the identity of the body. Ever since it has reported the case fully, but about every third word said is in praise of its work. It accuses the World of conspiring to clear the Nack woman, out of jealousy to the Journal. The Sun reports the facts in a very unfeeling but sensible way, with caustic comments on yellow journalism.

THE HOUSE-FLY.

The house-fly (musca domestica) which these mornings awakes with the sun and swoops down upon the pleasant dreamer and walks over his face with calks in his shoes, is an insect too well-known to need description. It is widely distributed in both the old and new worlds. If it were not that they are so common there would be something unbearably disgusting in having our houses infested with flies depositing maggots to perpetuate their species. Well it is that what can't be cured can be endured.

The great American tickler is destroyed in numerous ways, but all the methods commonly employed are of doubtful benefit, inasmuch the flies are attracted by the trap or paper set to kill them, and while a room may be pretty well filled by a bit of sticky fly-paper it does not always catch the flies. Rough-on-rats or arsenic in pure water deadens the fly and makes him tumble over a ghastly corpse on the butter, but it is also bad for the baby. Black pepper taken in sufficiently large quantities is said to bring a fly to an untimely end. The flies up here do not take to black pepper, even when mixed with sugar, milk, and eggs.

The average life of the fly is about seven days, but in that time he manages to make an unmitigated nuisance of himself. They have a proboscis that is a good deal like a sulky plow. They alight on the countenance of a bald-headed man stiff legged. Their feet are equipped with their pads and claws. Standing on all sixes they let down their proboscis, like a patent glove, and deliberately run a furrow in the skin. On the double shovel are rough hairs which scrape and tear delicate surfaces. The fly works along in this way very much after the manner of a bog tearing up sod, until the victim awakes and hits out.

The flies at our house have become wonderfully tame and domesticated of late. There are several promising ones and hunting on a game of "shoofly" as I write about them. Of late too they have been very early risers and have hastened me for a little game in the morning about sunup. And you either have to play with them or get up. It is generally a getter, and in this manner they have contributed largely to industrious habits, but still if I could have my way every one of them should be taken out and shot.

To Remove Gates.

To the Editor of THE TIMES:

We ask, thro the columns of your paper, to correct a mistake, which so many people are laboring under. There will be a petition presented to the honorable County Court at the July term for the removal of all gates on the public road leading from Academy by the way Leteha and Jesse and extending to the County line near Lovettsville. A great many think that this petition will affect all the roads in this district, but that is not so. The law says to establish a gate on a public road it must be done by a petition signed by the voters of that section to the County Court. And we think this shows plainly that this petition has nothing to do with any other road in this district.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use of liquor, beer, or wine, and every one that suspects any necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

To Victoria, R.

Upon this day of Jubilee
I make you my best bow.
You've ruled right well on land and sea
I'll cheerfully allow.

You lost some real estate through us
A hundred years ago—
But what of that?—forget the fuss,
And let good feeling flow.

For this we'll say:—if we lost to Obey a Queen just so,
We guess we'd rather she were you
Than any one we know.

Hon C. B. Bush, president of the Gilmer County (W. Va.) Court, says that he has had three cases of flux in his family, during the past summer, which he cured in less than a week with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Mr Bush also states, that in some instances there were twenty bloody stools a day.—Glenville, W. Va., Pathfinder. This remedy has been used in nine epidemics of flux and one of cholera, with perfect success. It can always be depended upon for bowel complaint, even in its most severe forms. Every family should keep it on hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by Ricketts & Co., Marlinton; Stalnaker Bros., Huntersville; Barlow & Moore, Edray; and E. H. Moore & Co., Academy.

A Metamorphosis.

Oh he preached it from the housetops,
And he whispered it by stealth.
He wrote whole scales of stuff against
The awful curse of wealth.
He shouted for the poor man, and he called the rich man down.
He taunted every king an' queen who dared to wear a crown.
He hollered for rebellion, and he said
He'd head a band
To exterminate the millionaires, to sweep them from the land.
He yelled against monopolies, took shots at every trust,
And swore he'd be no anarchist, to purge this land of dust.
He stormed, he fumed and ranted, till he made the rich men wince;
But no uncle left him money, and he hasn't shrieked since.

The smallest book ever printed has just been issued by Messrs. Painault, of Paris. It is the story Perrault, little Hoop-de-Thumb. This diminutive fairy-tale contains four pages each measuring 1-16th of an inch square. It contains eighty pages of printed matter. The book is 1-16 inches long and 1 inch wide. The thickness of this volume is 1 of an inch and its weight 1 3-5th of an ounce. The Paris Exposition of 1900 the Universal Exhibition could be held on a postage stamp—the Columbian variety, by the way, but it is supposed by this gentleman of the French Press. It is a complete book in every respect, and the printing is perfect. The paper and binding have been specially manufactured and the type is so large and well cut that the reader will have no difficulty in reading it without the aid of a magnifying glass.

The Pennsylvania State Fair.

The Advisory Board of the State Fair met at the Merchants' Hotel on Wednesday, June 23d, at which President McDowells, of Washington, Pa.; Treasurer Rutherford, and C. H Berniger, Esq., of Harrisburg, representing the State Agricultural Society, and F. A. Cresswell, president; Dr. A. N. Wakefield, M. B. Stephens, Esq., and F. J. O'Connor, Esq., representing the Tri-County Agricultural & Driving Park Association, were present.

Mr McDowell was chosen President of the committee, and Mr. Cresswell, Secretary. The latter was also elected General Manager of the State Fair, to whom all correspondence should be directed.

It was decided to give $6,000 in premiums to the speed ring and in the neighborhood of $2,000 in other premiums. The dates have already been fixed, to be September 6th to 11th, inclusive.

The next meeting of the Advisory Board will be at Johnstown, July 6th at 8 P. M.

A Fair of greater magnitude than last year's successful one is almost assured, as local management is better prepared and Johnstown is alive to the interest in having a grant success.

Information can be had by corresponding with F. A. Cresswell, General manager State Fair, Johnstown, Pa.

Go After It.

Be prompt in our business engagements. Agree to do nothing that you cannot do and then do all that you do agree to do. Live up to your promises. If you say you will have a job done at 10:30 A. M. on a certain day, have it done if you have to sit up all the night before. It will not do at 10:33 A. M.

This is the way to do business, to retain business and get more business. Make exertion, and watch your trade increase.

Let people know that you are alive. Advertise. Do not put a little advertisement in a newspaper one day, and then sit down and expect to get rich from your dollar's worth of publicity. Follow it up. "Keeping everlastingly at it is the keystone to success."

Be sure that you have bargains to present, and then keep presenting them.

This is the way to prosperity in business—no matter what the business may be.

Do n't sit down and cry "hard times." Hustle out and make business, and business will come your way.—State.

King of Dudes.

The greatest dandy in the world is Prince Albert, of Thurn, Germany. This fastidious young man attires himself in a new suit of clothes every day, enough yearly to keep twenty experienced workmen going and to run up a bill of $15,000. Each suit of wearing apparel is highly perfumed with attar of roses at $55 an ounce. He wears no less than 1,000 neckties during the year, being an average of three every day. A laundry employing twelve people is kept specially for washing his soiled linen, which he never wears more than twice, and his cast off boots number 200 pair a year.

Origin of the Cravat.

A fierce military people called the Croats, or Crorates, lived at one time in the fastnesses of the Balkan Mountains. One of their dress fashions was to wear shawls or pieces of cloth wrapped about the shoulders and neck. It was a picturesque style, that pleased Louis XIV, of France, and he had several of his regiments adopt the neck drapery. It was much admired and the modern cravat is the result of this importation.—Philadelphia Record.

A FRENCH scientist has a theory that music has an effect upon the growth of the hair; that various musical instruments have a tendency to increase the growth of hair on the heads of players, while other instruments tend to bring on baldness. He has not yet worked it out much and he weighs 13 stone, to account for the fact, if it be a fact, that pianists and violinists usually have hair in plenty, while those who play on brass horns are usually bald as a billiard ball. Perhaps the Musical Trade Review, commenting on the matter, observes that "music has long been known to have therapeutic qualities and is useful in many nervous diseases, and now it seems that it may be useful as a hair tonic."

It is the many does not give one of to keep the hair from coming out and turning gray, but to keep it from coming out and gray. For hair health and beauty use Hall's Hair Renewer.

THERE is a peculiarity in the greetings of William J. Bryan by the people wherever he goes. The laborer drops his pick, the mechanic leaves his work bench, the farmer hastens from the field, the small retailer quits his counter, and the railroaders break ranks to take him by the hand and cheer him by endless words. This is the case wherever he appears—north or south, east or west. The same cheerful modesty and good fellowship is always in evidence in Bryan. As Artemus Ward puts it, "he never slops over," and yet he is all genial, hearty, and frank. He is discreet and sagacious from his own standpoint at all times.—Pittsburg Post.

THE attention of the German and French governments has recently been directed," says The National Druggist, to a brand of cigarettes that has become a fashionable favorite under the name 'Bouts Dores,' or 'Gilt Ends.' The end 'intended to go between the lips is covered with a metallic leaf which is claimed to be gold, but which analysis shows to be an imitation of gold attached to the paper by lead chromate. In another form called 'Bouts Argentes' [silvered ends], a false silver leaf is attached to to the paper by white lead. The manufacturers of these cigarettes must be as devoid of truth and conscience as General Weyler."

GATHERS SKULLS.

A Medical Student Who Risks His Life to Get Them.

About 2 miles below Portland, on the Oregon side of the Columbia, the broad expanse of water flows without a ripple, as deep and as still as death. The bank rises high above the water's level and stretches away back to the timber line. Just above this point is "Coffin rock," which was the startling name given by early hunting grounds of the various Oregon tribes of Indians, but the very high water of 1894 swept Coffin rock of all of its deposits to the point below. It is a lonely place, without sound, save the call of the cricket in the grass, or the hoot of the screech owl nestled in the adjacent timber. Here the ever-flowing waters of nearly a half-century ago lulled the remains of many tribes high and dry, literally moving the last resting place of their dead, for no Pacific coast tribe ever buried their dead below the surface of the earth. Some lodged them about with rocks, above the ground, leaving the bones upward and exposed, others put a turk covering over them, while others were suspended from limbs or left in the forks of trees. Time has obliterated them, and the winds and storms of the subsequent years have left only the whitened bones and bleached skulls.

Students, doctors and physicians are again in several troubles for active duties. So great is the demand that at least one man has for years followed the hazardous business of gathering skulls for the use of medical students. For the few remaining Indians still living right near the reserves of their dead, and so far caught in the act would mean a term in the penitentiary, so the gatherer of specimens, followed by a death of two lackeys, for no quarter of money could be shown to the owner, finds it necessary to go to the ocean. Such a one, Harvard Thomas, by name, nightly risks his life to gather these gruesome, whitened skulls, and many now and then a face of large and well-developed forehead brings from $10 to $20, as the various grand seats of medical and dental learning in the east.—San Francisco Call.

NOVEL PHOTOGRAPHS.

Extraordinary Combinations Produced by an Ingenious Arrangement of Mirrors—Some Curious Examples.

A French photographer has pleased Paris, always charmed with a novelty, by producing extraordinary photographic combinations through an ingenious arrangement of mirrors. The results he attains are novel, surprising and sometimes sensational, as, for instance, his bona fide photograph of a well-known Parisian being ridden in the street by his horse. Grotesque combinations such as this are, of course, familiar to us all, for photographers have long been able to produce very curious effects by embodying figures from several negatives in one print.

The beauty of this last photographic novelty is, however, that the prints do not "give away" the process, as the oldfashioned built up photographs invariably do by the stilted postures and incongruous discords of the composition, but appear to be single, instantaneous glimpses of real scenes of an altogether impossible nature. They are clever enough to deceive an expert, or to make a superstitious person almost believe in miracles.

All Paris is enthusiastic over one of his pictures in particular. It is a photograph of a gentleman in evening dress, during the course of his dances daintily poised on his immaculate shirt front. The girl's face seems to be as much a part of the man's figure as is his head. The whole picture stamped on the white linen bosom.

This feat is accomplished by posing the figures in such a way that they are reflected from the mass of mirrors directly into the eye of the camera. Sometimes the woman's face is reproduced in a smaller form, and in the shape of a heart, and is so arranged as to take the place of the organ in which the god of love is popularly supposed to dwell.

Photographs taken by the mirror process show people in every conceivable position. For instance, two brothers are photographed to appear as one balanced upside down on the other's head. As in the ball scene, evening dress, from patent leather pumps to crush hats, it is difficult to decide when one has the picture right side up. Pictures of animals in all conceivable positions are a fad of this photographer, whose art often takes a humorous turn. A very small snake in the act of swallowing an unusually large elephant is a favorite with those who have a sense of the ridiculous. Other pictures, however, lean to tragic rather than the comic.

A pyramid of babies, to the number of a score, is another picture which attracts a great deal of interest, for though the tots are still in the long clothes period of existence, they appear to balance themselves with all the sang froid of professional acrobats.

One large photograph which the Parisian camera jurgler lately exhibited at an exhibition of pictures, noted more for their oddity than the popular character of their subjects, was probably the most grewsome of any he has yet taken. This photograph portrays an exceedingly beautiful woman dressed as for a ball, throwing the body to the bare arm of a man is thrust, the hand clasping the handle of a sword that is dripping with blood, the woman's face is distorted, as though with pain, and she seems about to fall to the ground.—N. Y. Herald.

BALLROOM BICYCLING.

A Musical Ride at Lord and Lady Brassey's House.

The all-conquering bicycle has had many triumphs, but its latest conquest is its greatest.

It has invaded the ballroom and when Lord and Lady Brassey gave their ball of the season at government house, Melbourne, some weeks ago, a musical ride on bicycles was an important item in the programme. It was an adaptation of the musical ride of the Household brigade.

The ladies wore cycling costumes of pale blouses, with dark blue ties and dark blue skirts. The dress of the men was a return to knee breeches and stockings, and in color harmonized with the dresses of the ladies.

Some days before the ball a rehearsal was held in a large suburban drill-room with peculiarly appropriate environments, for a ball had been held the night before and the floor was so highly polished that French chalk had to be used to minimize that dread of all cyclists, side-slilding. Both the figures and the commands adopted a blend of the cavalry ride and the quadrille. Although one lady in particular some down several times, she did it so deftly that there was scarcely an interruption to the movement. Another lady in a Holland costume, turning sharply too near the wall, was unscathed, but remained quickly that only an expert cyclist could detect that the movement was not part of the rehearsal.

We have not yet heard how the real ball went off, but we shall not hesitate to pronounce the ball not having brought the account to hand.—London Mail.

A Shower of Ants.

A correspondent describes a remarkable phenomenon witnessed in Jerusalem at the beginning of May. A swarm of flying ants settled upon the city and filled the air from sunrise until noon o'clock. Visitors to the Holy Sepulchre were obliged to use their handkerchiefs constantly in order to keep the insects out of their eyes and nostrils. The gentleman asserted that this extraordinary flight of ants occurred on the occasion of an earthquake. Whether there was any real connection between the two phenomena or not, as a matter of fact two shocks of earthquake were felt in Jerusalem on the evening of the same day.—Chicago Times-Herald.

STARVING MINERS.

MOVEMENTS of more than ordinary interest are going on in the coal regions of ten States. The situation is such that no reflecting patriot can consider it without feelings of serious apprehension. There must be something of more than ordinary import that makes three hundred thousand laboring people restless and impatient. So far as they have given expression for the reasons of their discontent, they declare that if they continue to work at the wages now given, they and their families must go without the comforts of life and some of the necessities besides. It seems they have decided that if starvation is bound to be without striking, they may as well starve while doing what they can to improve their prospects for the future.

The miners complain that low as wages are, they are wronged, grievously wronged in the measurement of their work by screens of illegal width, and by being compelled to deal at 'company stores' and dwell in 'company houses,' exacting prices and rents are thus made. Being discharged from employment is the penalty for living or trading elsewhere.

In making these complaints, the miners are amply supported by what investigating committees sent out by various State legislatures have from time to time reported for years past.

And when we turn to the mine operators and consider what they have to say in this perilous discussion, we find it most vehemently asserted that they cannot pay more wages and do business at a profit, and they tell us too that those operators who do not resort to those devices of extortion, "company stores and houses," are at twenty per cent. disadvantage in competing with mine operators who have the stores and the houses.

Let all this be as it may, one thing is very certain, that in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Illinois, Indiana, Alabama, Iowa and Kentucky the working people in the coal regions are now living so near absolute want and suffering that desperation has become, to use a medical expression, 'chronic and confirmed.' And those people, be they Congressmen, Senators or leading citizens, who expect contentment, home building the proper education and training of children, and good citizenship under the conditions complained of, would be the right kind of persons to send to a thicket of thorn trees to gather baskets of grapes.

The situation seems charged with the elements of an insurrection or revolution, and the whole nation has a more than a common interest in it. Here are suffering citizens by the half-million, moving together in the belief that they are struggling for food and shelter, raiment and education for their wives and children and themselves. People in such a situation do not reason as lawyers would or as prosperous, well fed citizens do.

From what has happened in former strikes, of much less proportions, it is at least dreaded that if this contest lasts any length of time there will be deeds of extended violence and destruction. It looks as if the operators are of the impression, such might be the case, from the way deductions are said to be swarming into the disturbed localities. Let violent measures once open, then the militia will turn out, the Federal troops close in the rear, and then for scenes of blood and fire that will break all records. O, that the Golden Rule could be more in evidence there what it seems to have been, for then all controversies could be settled, or rather there would have been none to be settled, at such a perilous risk as now impends.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

The McCollams.

ONE of the oldest families in our county is that of the McCollam relationship. While it is not certain, yet there is good reason to believe that the pioneer ancestor was named Dan. McCollam. From some interesting correspondence had by James McCollam's family with a lady in New Hampshire there is no reason to question that he was of Scotch-Irish descent, and the son of a physician a graduate of the University of Edinburg, and lived in New Jersey. The name of the pioneer's wife cannot be recalled.

My McCollam the ancestor came from New Jersen in 1770, or thereabouts, and settled on Brown's Mountain near Driscol, which is yet known as the "McCollam Place," now in the possession of Amos Barlow, Esq. His children were Jacob, Daniel, William, Rebecca, Mary, and Sarah.

Jacob McCollam first settled on the "Jake Place," a mile or so west of Huntersville on the road to Marlinton; thence he went to Illinois, and was killed by a falling tree.

Daniel McCollam married Anna Sharp, daughter of John Sharp, the Frost pioneer, and settled first on the Bridger Place near Verdant Valley, thence to the Marony place near Buckeye, and finally settled in Noble County, Missouri. Two of his daughters remained in Pocahontas. Mary (Polly) who became Mrs John Buckley. Her son is the Rev Joshua Buckley, a venerable and greatly respected citizen of Buckeye. The other daughter, Jane McCollam, was married to the late Joseph Friel and lived on the Greenbrier about five miles above Marlinton, where some of her family yet reside. Rachel and Nancy went with their father to Missouri. Rachel became Mrs VanTassell and Nancy became Mrs Brown. Daniel McCollam set out to visit his former home, and while coming up the Ohio he was exposed to the smallpox. He at once went back and died of the disease in his western home.

Rebecca McCollam, daughter of the pioneer, was married to the late Robert Moore, senior, of Edray. Isaac Moore, Esq., Robert Moore, junior, and Jane Moore, the wife of the late Andrew Duffield, near West Union, were her children.

Sarah McCollam, daughter of the ancestor, was married to John Sharp, and lived on the place occupied by J. Wesley Irvine, near Verdant Valley, who is her grandson. Ellen, who became Mrs Anaziah Irvine; Mary, who became Mrs Josiah Friel; Rebecca, who was Mrs John R. Duffield; and Nancy, who was Mrs William Irvine, were her daughters.

Mary McCollam, daughter of the pioneer, was married to Thomas Brock and lived on the "Duffield Place," now held by Newton Duffield. Her children were Daniel Brock, who married a Miss McClung, of Nicholas County; William Brock, Robert Brock, and Margaret, wife of the late William Duffield, near the Warwick spring.

William McCollam, son of the original ancestor, married Sally Drinnen, daughter of Lawrence Drinnen, whose home was on Greenbrier River, on the upper part of Levi Gay's farm, very near the bank of the stream. It is to be remembered as the place where James Baker, one of the first school-teachers, was slain by an Indian warrior about 1786. Soon after his marriage he settled near the east mit of Buck's Mountain, about 1790, perhaps three hundred yards of the residence now occupied by his son, James McCollam, Esq. Traces of the old home are yet visible (1897.) His family consisted of five sons and six daughters. John, Lawrence, William, Isaac, James, Sarah, Susan, Nancy, Matilda, Rebecca, and Ruth.

John McCollam went to Lincoln County, Tennessee, where one of his descendants became an eminent Baptist minister.

Lawrence McCollam died in 1861.

William McCollam died in youth.

Isaac McCollam married Margaret Thomas, daughter of John Thomas, and settled in Randolph County. Fletcher McCollam, near the head of Stony Creek, is a son of Isaac.

James McCollam first marrried Anna Jane McCoy and settled on Buck's Mountain near the old homestead. George W. McCollam a well-known citizen, is his son.

James McCollam's second wife was Miss Mary Anna Overholt.

Sarah McCollam, daughter of William McCollam, became Mrs Absalom Morrison and lived on Hill's Creek. The late William Morrison, at Buckeye, was her son.

Susan was married to the late James Kellison, on Briar Knob, head of Hill's Creek, south-west Pocahontas. Daniel Kellison, Esq., at Mingo Flats, Randolph County, is her son.

The daughters, Nancy, Matilda, and Rebecca were never married. They lived to be elderly persons, and were much esteemed for their good character, industry, and ladylike deportment, and made themselves very useful in many ways. All of them were so kind and skillful in waiting on their sick neighbors.

Ruth McCollam was married to William Kee, Esq., near Marlinton. Her children were Eliza Kee a popular teacher of schools, and died in 1861. Her mother's heart was so much broken by the loss of her devoted daughter that she never appeared the same. She died last February very suddenly.

George M. Kee, a Confederate soldier, justice of the peace, and commissioner of the court, lives on part of the Kee homestead. His first wife was Jane Palser, and second wife Rachel Moore.

William L. Kee, Esq., married Miss Kate Phares, in Randolph County. He is an eminent lawyer and had a government position under the Cleveland administration.

Matilda Kee was married to Captain J. R. Apperson, and lives near Marlinton.

Thus far it has been placed in our power to illustrate the family history of these worthy people.

William McCollam was one of the original members of the Stony Creek M. E. Church, and while he lived was prominent in meetings and the official proceedings. Upon one occasion while the parents were absent attending meeting or visiting the sick, the house caught fire and was consumed with the most of its contents. At the time of the burning, John, the eldest son, was about eight years old; Lawrence was about two. In the confusion the baby boy seems to have been forgotten, and when John asked where is the baby he was told by one of the little girls that he was in the cradle asleep. John pressed through the smoke and heat at the risk of his life, and brought his little brother out alive, but in doing so both were so badly burned as to have scars upon their persons long as they lived.

This man toiled on, however, rebuilt his humble home, opened more land, and in the meanwhile eleven children had gathered around his table. At the time when his care and presence seemed most needed it seemed good to the God he loved to call him away from a responsibility so important. The sugar season had just opened, the morning was such as to indicate a heavy run, and much wood were needed to keep the kettles boiling fast enough to reduce properly the luscious syrup. On the fourth of March, 1818, he had morning prayer, sang a hymn of praise to Him that watches the sparrow when it falls, and went forth cheerfully to his work. A large roltock tree suited to his purpose was selected, which soon bowed and fell before his stalwart blows, but somehow a limb from another tree in its rebound smote him with such a furious force that he never seemed conscious of what had happened. This occured about a mile from home, near where James Hannah lives.

The all this was sudden, yet there has never been a misgiving about the suitability of his being called now from his honest toil and efforts to meet his Judge, the rest that remains for the people of God. He had learned from his Scotch-Irish ancestry to sing:

"The sword, the pestilence, or fire,
Shall but fulfill their best desire,
From sin and sorrow set them free
And bring thy children, Lord, to thee."

AN INDIAN CAPTIVE.

From an old history of Virginia we find the personal experience of one who was captured by the Indians.

About 1775, James Moore moved to Tazewell County, Virginia, and settled in Abb's Valley. His parents were of those driven from Scotland in the persecution of the Covenanters by Charles I., and and having settled for a while in the north of Ireland before emigrating to America, were known as the Scotch-Irish. He had moved from Walker's Creek in Rockbridge County.

On the 14th of June, 1786, his whole family was massacred by the Indians or taken captive. He had prospered greatly, and at the time of the raid he had 100 head of horses and a good stock of cattle. On the fatal morning a gang of horses had come in to the lick-blocks about one hundred yards from the house, and James Moore took his salt-bag and went to salt them. His two hands were reaping wheat. The Indians, about 30 in number, had been lying in ambush and rushed in and killed two children who were coming from the spring, and George Simpson, an old man in the house. They took the rest of the family as prisoners. The father hearing the shots tried to get to the house, but finding it surrounded rushed past it and would have escaped but stopped on a fence within rifle-shot as tho he would return. There he was killed, seven balls traversing his body.

Of the prisoners, John, a boy weak in mind and body, was tomahawked; the baby was fretful, so an Indian took it by its feet and dashed its brains out against a tree: when they reached the towns near the Scioto River Mrs Moore and her daughter Jane were slowly burned to death at the stake. Mary Moore was released from captivity and returned to Rockbridge County, and she afterwards married a minister of the gospel by the name of Rev Samuel Brown. Of her children five became Presbyterian ministers, one of whom, Rev Samuel Brown, died a few years ago near Millboro.

The child Mary Moore owed her release, probably, to her meeting with her brother James, who had been captured by the Indians in 1784, when he was 14 years old. It is of his personal experience written by himself that is so interesting.

On the 7th of September, 1784, nearly two years before the family was broken up by the Indians, James Moore was sent by his father to catch a horse to go to mill twelve miles away. The horse was at a waste plantation about two and a half miles from the house, but he had always been accustomed to going about the woods alone and had never minded it. On this day he claims to have had a strong and overpowering presentiment of impending evil. The thought of Indians was constantly in his mind and he was constantly looking back and trembling. He would have returned home but for fear that his father would be displeased with such an excuse. When near the field his fears were realized by three Indians springing suddenly from behind a log. It seems that being captured he lost his fear of the Indians. The party was composed of three Indians, the leader of whom was Black Wolf, a middle-aged man with a black beard. The others were about eighteen years of age. All were of the Shawnee tribe. They tried to make him catch a horse for them, but as they would come charging up as soon as he had his head on one, for fear of his mounting and escaping, the horse would break away. After a time they gave up the idea, and about one which they got their bridle and saddle and set out for the Ohio, as an authority on that subject.

Sweetness and Light.

Put a pill in the pulpit if you want practical preaching for the physical man; then put the pill in the pillory if it does not practise what it preaches. There's a whole gospel in Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills; a "gospel of sweetness and light." People need to value their physic, as they did their religion,—by its bitterness. The more bitter the dose the better the doctor. We're got over that. We take "sugar in ours"—gospel or physic—now-a-days. It's possible to please and to purge at the same time. There may be power in a pleasant pill. That is the gospel of Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

The walking was bad and they made only about eight miles that day. When the prisoner attempted to break the bushes or scrape the ground to leave marks he was threatened with the tomahawk, and he finally desisted. In the evening Black Wolf gave a tremendous war-whoop and in the morning about sunrise another. This indicated that they were returning with one prisoner. A different call indicated when they had scalps. This whoop was given every morning and evening during the whole journey. The first night out was rainy. The party crawled into a laurel thicket and slept without food or fire. After searching him for a knife, Black wolf tied a leading halter around his prisoner's neck and wrapped the other end around his hand. Moore says he slept tolerably well that night and that he was perfectly resigned to his fate.

The next day they journeyed down Tug River and crossed Tug Mountain. Here Black Wolf stepped to one side and brought a dutch oven which he gave to the white boy to carry. For three days they traveled without any sustenance whatever except some water in which poplar bark had been steeped. On the fourth day they killed a buffalo, took out the paunch, rinsed it a little, cut it up put it in the kettle with some flesh and made broth. Of this they drank very heartily, but ate no meat. After night another kettle was boiled and eaten, but no meat. This is Indian policy after fasting.

During the whole journey the prisoner was barefooted. He walked over rattlesnakes, but was not permitted to kill any, as the Indians regarded them as their friends. After this they killed deer or buffalo whenever they needed anything to eat.

They crossed the Ohio between the months of Guyandot and Big Sandy rivers, on logs lashed together with grape-vines. They reached their towns near where Chillicothe now stands twenty days after they set out. On the banks of the Scioto they remained one day, and left pictures representing three Indians and one prisoner. Two years after the others of the family who were brought this far were shown these pictures and the meaning explained by the Indians. The route taken by these three Indians and their boy prisoner must have lain through Mc Dowell, Wyoming, Logan (or Mingo), and Wayne Counties.

Young Moore remained with the Indians that winter and was sold to a detroit trader next spring for $80. His little sister was afterwards taken north and sold for a half a gallon of rum, and was found by her brother. The administrator of their father's estate, Thomas Fringe, came north to look for his estate. Martin Iringe, the kind girl who was also taken prisoner, and finding her and the surviving children of the pioneer of Abb's Valley brought them back to Virginia.

THE address made by Capt. T. H. Dennis, before the Building Association at Weston, on "Pet Law of Libel," is highly complimented by many of the editors, it being wide and timely. Moreover Captain Dennis is to be referred to

THE DELINQUENT TAX LIST.

Two weeks ago the names of those assessed with a capitation and on personal property, who had not "lifted" their tax tickets, were published in this paper. This has given offense to several of the parties, who justly consider it a disgrace not to have paid their assessment. In this county there were 344 names on the delinquent list, and they were all freeborn citizens of the soil and most of them voters. But still it is more to a man's credit to belong to the class which pays its taxes and supports the institutions of the community to which they belong than to have his name printed on the roll of dishonor.

Some of the names were those of dead men who are forever done with taxes, and it should be the duty of their friends to see that their names are dropped from the assessor's books, or if they have died within the year to see that their taxes are paid. Others have moved away, and are probably paying taxes elsewhere. But the majority of them are ready to swear that the sheriff never asked them for their taxes. This is no excuse. The tax payer is as much bound to forward his dues to the sheriff as the sheriff is to ride after him. In Virginia it is an unheard of thing for the treasurer to pursue an elusive capitation tax all over the county. If the tax payer really wishes to pay his tax, and sends it in after he has been published a delinquent, the County Court, sheriff, and solvent citizens of the county will honor him, and cause his name to be printed in bold faced type on the roll of honor in the same newspaper in which he was defamed.

C. W. Showalter writes to this paper that he at April Court offered to pay his taxes and that the sheriff said he did not have time at that moment to receive the money. He is very indignant that his name should be on the delinquent list, but we would suggest that the best proof of his sincerity would be to pay his taxes now,—when it would do the county as much good as formerly.

W. H. Beale also writes that he is a tax paying citizen, that he was assessed in Webster County last year, and he has the sheriff's receipt for it; and that it is not right he should pay his capitation tax twice the same year. We would remind him that the sheriff has either to place the delinquent's name on the list or lose the amount out of his own pocket—and that is too much to expect of a sheriff.

We have received other letters, each explaining why it is the writer's remain unpaid, but as they would occupy too much space we will not print them. The tax tickets yet remain in the hands of the sheriff for collection, and we have arranged with him to secure the names of all those who pay up and print them for the benefit of their reputation as tax paying citizens.

Another instance on the list is the name of a minor who was assessed, the officer thinking him over twenty-one. If his kids is thick enough to stand what others shrink from, it is no concern of ours. It might encourage others who do not know that the gentleman was erroneously assessed.

Delinquency is a bad state to be in, and it should be remembered that many of the men who refused to pay their capitation tax of $1.00 have worked the roads for for four days, paying a capitation road tax equivalent to $3.00. There is reason for this, for if they refused to contribute to the support of the roads the neighborhood would be the last to hold them. The best thing to do then, perhaps, is to give the fences fire to the sidehauled men who does not pay his tax, and see what effect moral suasion will have on him. In our county when the delinquent realizes that his neighbors hold his delinquency against him, he will come a-running with his taxes.

SINCE we are to have a tariff, it will be well to learn all we can about its provisions. July 24 the Senate agreed to the clauses for reciprocity and retaliation. The clause on retaliation provides that when any nation bestows an export bounty on any article the United States shall levy, in addition to the duties provided by the tariff law, an additional duty on that article equal to the amount of the bounty. By the reciprocity clause the President, by and with Senatorial consent, may make reciprocity treaties giving 20 per cent. reduction on specified articles, or placing articles on the free list. This applies to nations giving corresponding advantages to American products and only to such articles as are not produced in the United States.

VERY grand scenes of momentous import upon the religious future of our country have been witnessed in San Francisco from the 7th to 14th of July. Twenty thousand Christian workers, or Endeavorers as they call themselves, gathered in that city and have been holding vast assemblies and consulting as to the most effective means of interesting the youth of the country in seeking and receiving the saving benefits of genuine religion. They seemed to have been impressed with the idea that the second coming of Christ is near, and there is no use in claiming to be Christians without loving God with all the heart, soul, and mind and our neighbors as ourselves.

ON Tuesday, July 6, M. Tatin, a French aeronaut, at Carquenez, read a paper before the Academy of Science. Mr Tatin is in competition with Prof. Langley, of the Smithsonian Institution, at Washington. Prof. Langley has been experimenting with a steam flying machine on the Potomac flats, and M. Tatin is trying to emulate him with a French steam flying machine in France. The paper read, gave an account of the Frenchman's experiments. His machine was nearly three times heavier than Prof Langley's, having a double instead of a single propeller. The French machine attained a speed of 18 metres per second, as against Prof Langley's 10, but the length of the run was only 140 metres, as as against Langley's kilometer.

IT is reported a large number of coal cars were sent into the Fairmont (West Virginia) coal district by the B. & O. The operators of the Fairmont field notified the railway authorities they could furnish a thousand car-loads a day, and shipments to Ohio may begin soon to supply the trade in that State during the pending suspension. If this movement is attempted we may look upon that section of West Virginia as the storm centre of the threatened trouble. West Virginia has had a sad experience as a storm centre, in connection with the old State, and there will be more to follow unless all signs fail.

ONE of the most unpleasant things that has come to our attention of recent occurrence is the report that the largest lumber fleet that has entered the harbor of Toledo, Ohio, reached there a few days ago. There were thirteen vessels, loaded with seven million feet of sawed lumber. Lumber is being hurried over from Canada to skip the new proposed tariff on timber. Up to this time twenty-two million of feet have been brought over by one company at Toledo, and ten million more on the move.

ACTIVE measures are being taken, by the operators in coal mines north of the Ohio, to agree on some plan of arbitration. The receivers of some of the railroads and coal mines have appealed to the Federal Courts, and have secured the power of the United States against all violence or unlawful acts for a portion of Ohio and the United States Marshalls have received orders to protect miners and railway operatives in digging and moving coal. Thus complicating the situation.

GENERAL BEN. CLARK, of Fayette, will not lose his eyesight as reported. He has had good educators will be glad to know that complete rest and careful attention for several months is all he needs.

THE revised tariff bill has passed the Senate.

OBITUARY.

Mrs Mattie Beard.

Mrs Mattie Beard, relict of the late Joseph Beard, Esqr., died at the residence of her grandson, Geo. W. Cullison, near Hillsboro, last Friday night, July 9, 1897, aged 82 years, one month and three days, having been born June 6th, 1815. She was the youngest daughter of John Jordan, the pioneer merchant and his wife Miriam McNeel, daughter of John McNeel, the first settler of the Levels, who were married December 20, 1796.

Her children were Lieut. J. J. Beard, of Huntersville, Margaret Jane, first wife of Capt. Wm. L. McNeel, and Miriam Nannie, wife of Isaac McNeel, Esqr.

In all the relations of life, Mrs Beard was a very estimable person. In early youth she became a professing Christian and for sixty-six years lived a consistent, christian life in the pale of the Methodist Church. Many remarks made by her at various times in view of the nearness of death gave every assurance that here personally was the faith that worked by love, purified the heart and overcame the world.

Memorial services pertinent to the occasion were conducted by ministers Rev. Dills, J. C. Thrasher and D. S. Sydenstricker. Her remains were borne to the McNeel cemetery and placed by the side of her venerated husband, while surrounded by an immense throng of sympathizing friends and kindred, to wait the everlasting morning.

Mrs Nancy Callison.

Last Sabbath afternoon, July 11, Mrs Nancy Callison, the widowed wife of the late Josiah Cullison Esq, died at her home near Locust in the 79th year of her age. Heart trouble dropsical affection seemed to have been the immediate cause of her death. Mrs Cullison was a daughter of the late Thomas Hill, Esq., near Hillsboro, and was a very highly esteemed lady for her many excellent traits of character.

Mrs J. K. Bright, of Hillsboro, is her daughter; her sons Thomas, William, Richard and George are prosperous, well known citizens of Pocahontas, and all revere her memory as one of the best of mothers.

Mr Elisha Jacobs.

Mr Elisha Jacobs died at his home on Anthonys Creek, July 4th aged 88 years and 14 days. For many years he has been a member of the M. E. Church and was a very honest, industrious and patriotic citizen.

The Pocahontas Times.

JULY 16, 1897.

Local Events.

An eclipse of the sun, visible in North America, takes place July 29.

Rev. John T. McGraw, of Grafton, was one of the orators at the recent Tannaway celebration.

The singing on Laurel Run was largely attended last Sunday. It was conducted by Profs. Waugh and Carter.

An action at law for four million dollars has just closed out in San Francisco. The claimant gets one third of the estate and his counsel the rest. Good for the noblest of professions.

Those who chew tobacco want the best. Henry County, Virginia, tobacco is the best in the world when made by Penn & Watson. Try their leaders—we sell "Lord Henry."

Paul Golden.

Sunday, July 4, was made a sad day in the north of France by floods caused by excessive rain. Three hundred lives were lost, and damage to property two hundred millions of francs. As five francs count for a dollar, it would be forty millions of dollars.

A boy, incased in bullet proof cloth, was shot at with a 44 cal. revolver, at a distance of ten feet a number of times and received no injury. As soon as a suitable piece can be made, it will be tied on a man's breast and the experiment repeated.

Preparations are being made to erect a monument to the last victims of Indians in Nicholas County. With our County our endeavor, headed by the survivors, will be to have the Confederate dead interred in one cemetery where the graves can be cared for and preserved.

Tuesday morning it was discovered that the school-house at the cross roads between Dunmore and Green Bank had been burned in the night. The building was an old log structure, but comfortable. Apparently it was burned for no other reason than to have a new one built.

The convenient fishing camp at the Forks of Cranberry, erected by Charleston and Marlinton gentlemen, and which afforded shelter to fishers visiting those waters, was found burnt to the ground. It was the act no doubt of miscreants who had occupied the camp. The camp had been newly roofed with shingles. At this place the club house was burned in 1892, before it was quite finished.

A running stream is a safe place to drink because there can be no stagnation there. A safe place to buy goods is where goods are constantly being sold, and to all parts of the county, and where purchasers get the greatest possible value for their money. The Golden Stock aims to sell goods that will tell their own story, and the steady increase of my trade sales goes to show how popular they are in all sections of this county.

Among the many cows, belonging to the citizens, grazing on the beautiful commons of Marlinton, is one belonging to Dr Cunningham, more noted for starting worthless fads for her personal attractions. She is a fancy little, drab colored cow, about fifty per cent. Jersey. The Doctor recently told a native of East Virginia, that if he got home sick, he could come and look at this cow, and about then a sight of her has been prescribed for every homesick East Virginian that comes this way.

The Pocahontas Marble Company met and organized last Monday. This corporation is capitalized at $100,000, and now and control the marble for eight miles. Captain Wilford L. McNeel was elected President; Captain A. M. Edgar, vice-president; J. S. McNeel Treasurer; E. I. Holt, Secretary. L. M. McClintic, of this place, is their attorney. The meeting adjourned to be called to meet at the discretion of the President. There were no steps taken to develop or place on the market specimens of the superior marble of Pocahontas, but such steps may be taken soon.

A law suit was instituted by J. H. Poffet & Co. against Paul Gatton for $231, before Justice Crist last Wednesday. There was a merchant suing a merchant before a merchant. The suit arose over the hauling of some goods from Hillsboro that Hannah was the wagoner and he was under sealed orders. The case was done Court, and Poffet & Co. wanted some evergreen drawers and soft drinks. Gatton wrote the notes, and the jury discovered that the agent was dipped to the tune of twenty cents in one dollar and not have a full load. The result was that Gatton got a full load and Poffet & Co. had to wait a week. This was hardly the success and courage that Poffet & Co. had when Poffet & Co. the year ago.

Personal Mention.

Col. Sellers L. Roger, of Elkins, was in town Monday.

Fred Wallace, of Lewisburg, attended county court.

Rev J. C. Thrasher, of Steven's City, is visiting his father-in-law, Captain William L. McNeel.

Miss Lucy Kincaid is making a prolonged stay at Frankford, her former home.

Miss Orra Campbell, of Covington, is visiting her friends in Huntersville and on Douthard's Creek.

W. H. Dean and W. L. Irvine of Lobelia, were among the callers at this office during court.

There will be preaching at the upper church on Swago, 3d Sunday, July 18 at 3 P. M. by Rev W. T. Price.

Mrs J. H. Landes and Mrs Geo. Taylor, of near Edray, were in Marlinton Wednesday and visited the Times office.

Mrs W. A. Bratton returned to Marshall, Virginia, with her sister Miss Birdie Cologne and brother Edward Cologne.

Mrs Agnes Loury has returned from her visit to Union and Frankford, much benefited by the change of scene and the exercise of traveling by easy stages.

Marvin Carter is operating a binder in the Edray neighborhood. Most of the wheat in that vicinity promises a better yield than for several years.

Mrs J. B. Lockridge, of Driscol, is visiting Miss Emma Warwick at the home place near Edray. Maggie and Grace Moore, of Dunmore, are with their aunt at the same place.

James Berry, a well known and skillful woodsman, and his wife are at Mrs Carter's near Huntersville. Mr Berry has recently recovered from a long and tedious attack of sickness.

H. W. McNeel, of Mill Point, graduate in medicine from the University of Virginia, is attending a meeting of the State Medical Board in Charleston this week. He expects to practice his profession at Mill Point for the present.

T. S. McNeel, a recent law graduate of the University of Virginia, obtained the necessary certificate to apply for examination before the State Board, which meets at Morgantown on the first Wednesday in August.

From the Randolph Enterprise: Mrs Clay Crouch, of Elkwater, died, July 5, of cancer, aged forty years.—The assessed value of the personal property of Randolph County is $50,505.00 less for 1897 than 1896.—Two of L. Tuke's horses won purses at the Beverly races on July 3.

Mrs Jane Simmons, relict of the late John Simmons, is living with her son Robert at the Warwick Spring. She is totally blind, but bears her affliction with remarkable cheerfulness. Her memory of persons and local events is very retentive, and it is interesting to hear her tell of the former days and the personal history of the pioneers. She is a grand-daughter of the old Revolutionary veteran Timothy McCarty, one of the earliest settlers in the Hills, and we hope to tell our worthy readers something interesting about him and his descendants in the course of time.

As to Mail-route Contractors.

The mail route between Mingo and Marlinton is going begging at $600 per year. The work involves the carrying of the mail six round trips per week, of 54 miles each, across Elk, Middle, and Valley mountains, over the worst natural road in the State. It is a road that is both rocky and muddy. In the winter the snow drifts on the Old Field Fork of Elk are wonders of the world, and the winter's winds chill the mail carrier to the bone. Two streams are to be crossed that often get just high enough to be dangerous, but not keep the mail back. We hope no one will bid it in too low, as we like to see a good service well paid for; and do not believe in foreign contractors setting a price and deluding some simple minded citizens into carrying out his contract for less than living wages.

We have understood that the manner of proceeding by the foreign contractor is to take a large number of routes for a specified sum. He then adds all the bids together the lowest bids for each of the routes and if the lump bid is less than the sum total of separate bids the contract is awarded it. The jobbers then solicit the routes for the least money possible, and consequently they realize a very handsome profit. But does the blanket contractor, when he retires to his couch at night, think of the many miserable homes on his various routes that are anxiously awaiting their weary mails that night having had disappointed suppers? Does he see the sore backs and galled shoulders, on the brutal mail boys with their separated spans.

Does the mail contractor ever see the horses and mules with their separated spans.

The method of contracting has been carried on so long that the general citizens no longer think of getting a bid, and hence the need of citizens to fight it out amongst themselves.

Mary McDonald is now and prepared to give you a hair cut and shave.

County Court.

County Court met Tuesday with a full board. Claims were presented, and a greater or less number of them allowed.

The case of Chet Rogers and his wife concerning the custody of their children (which had been referred to the County Court from the Circuit Court) was heard, and the mother allowed to retain the care of the children.

The question of tollable roads was broached. The toll-contractors were bold in asserting that the legislature could not make a law impairing the obligation of a contract existing between themselves and the county court, but as the toll-payers were more or less affected by the law and were not parties to said contract, the obligation referred to would hardly oblige them. Some disposition will be made by the court of the matter.

The county is to be congratulated, and the doctors and road overseers pitied, on having such an economical court. The court strains at every five cents it spends, and the result is our thinly settled county is enabled to carry on home rule cheaper than most of the less populous counties.

Notice.

The School Book Board of Pocahontas County will meet at the court-house in the town of Marlinton, on Thursday, July 22, 1897, at 10 A. M. The object of this meeting is to adopt one text-book, or series, on each subject required to be taught in the free schools and not provided for by contract under the acts of 1895.

D. L. Barlow,
County Superintendent.

Dentistry.

I will be at Marlinton from 15th to 22d of June; Academy, 23d to 28th; Huntersville, 29th of June to 4th of July; Frost, 5th to 9th; Dunmore, 10th to 16th; Green Bank, 16th to 22d; and Travelers' Repose, 22d to 26th.

Editors, as a rule, are kind hearted and liberal. An exchange tells of a certain subscriber to a certain paper who died and left fourteen years' subscription unpaid. The editor appeared at the grave as the lid was being screwed down for the last time, and put in a linen duster, a palm leaf fan and a receipt for making ice.—Democrat, Defiance, Ohio.

Green Bank.

Wet weather, and wheat cutting is in order. There will be weddings soon.

Miss Maggie Gum and Laurence Ralston paid Mrs Dollie Ralston, of Greenhill, Va., a visit last Saturday.

Mr George Hoover's six months old baby died last Saturday and was buried yesterday.

Dr C. L. Austin has introduced a new method of locomotion into our town by purchasing himself, wife and daughter each a bicycle.

Harper Hudson is in from Rockingham on a visit.

Messrs Ward Hudson and Jesse McLaughlin are off to Horton, W. Va.

The hotels at Marlinton may justly expect every teacher to be at the Institute who can raise the money for expenses. But if school drafts continue to depreciate in value, the money will, we fear, have to be considered a lawful excuse for nonattendance instead of sickness, as heretofore.

Dunmore.

We have at this time some geographical surveyors in town.

H. M. Lockridge was in town this week.

Dr Cunningham and family passed here returning from Highland.

C. M. Achord, the watch fixer, is in town.

Miss Elva Jones, of Doe Hill, is visiting here.

Woth Nottingham started for Texas Wednesday for his health.

Adam Geiger was out in the State of Webster to buy calves.

A child of George Hoover, seven months old, was found dead in bed Sunday morning.

Mrs W. C. Mann is visiting her sister and daughter at this place.

Page Gay was in town Monday.

George C. Cooper is in from Addison.

E. N. Moore has built a large straw and stock barn.

Mr Sheets will start his thresher in the Levels next week.

Miss McLaughlin is better. Arsenius Russell is not as well as he had been.

Mrs L. M. Hannah, of Frost, has typhoid fever.

In a joking way some one set fire to the Cross Roads School-house, on the night of the 12th instant, and it was burned.

The planing machine is in operation at Sweeney's factory.

John Taylor and R. F. McElwee are going to Missouri this week.

Captain C. B. Brooks has a two-weeks' auction job at Addison, commencing the last of July.

C. B. Brooks has three of the best stocks of goods in Pocahontas County to sell. Call or write for bargains.

Jenkins & Cackley.

Dilley's Mill.

Wheat fine, oats short—the better than expected. Corn short but of a good color and hardy. There should be plenty of corn in the county.

A. L. Dilley is painting buggies at Mr Washington Moore's.

The festival on Knapp's Creek was very successful, and a neat sum was raised for the benefit of Reva Price and Parrott. The ladies who had the matter in hand deserve much praise.

Miss Lena Kinnison is visiting in this part.

The cherry crop is rather light.

George Rider, of Highland, was in this part looking after stock; also Adam Geiger, and many others. Dr Lockridge seems to be ahead in price of calves here.

Upton and Cliff Sharp have gone to Williams River.

There seems to be much "complaining" among the people, and bad colds are very prevalent.

The song of the locust is no longer heard in the land as a few weeks ago. There were not many here.

Rev Parrott will preach at Bethel next Sunday.

Professor James Reed will sing at Mt Zion the 25th. Come and bring your books.

Youre for Business.

Lobelia.

Warm and raining every day.

Wheat cutting about over. A good crop in this part of the county; corn fine, and oats also. Fruit crops not very good. Plenty of berries of all kinds. There will be about 4,000 bushels in the falling timber of New Mountain.

Elza McMillion, who got badly cut some time ago, is able to be out.

We understand that the Game Warden is in this part of the state, so be careful how you display your jerk or you may get some other kind of meat to eat.

W. B. Hill returned from Nicholas County Tuesday, and reports high water and destruction generally. Cattle are bringing big prices out there. W. B. Hill expects to have something of much interest to report from that county soon. He was reliably informed by a friend of the whereabouts of a gold mine, and while prospecting for coal will look after the other minerals of this or adjoining counties. He will start for Camden on Gauley Monday on special business.

L. C. McMillion had the best wheat your correspondent ever saw on Hill's Creek.

Mat Woods took in his cattle from the mountains. They did finely while out.

R. W. Hill has a fine lot of cattle on the Harper levels.

Edgar Sydenstricker, of China, who attended school at Fredericksburg, Va., last session, is the guest of J. C. Stalling and family.

Rev Thrasher, of Virginia is here to see his father in law, Capt W. L. McNeel. He preached at the M E. church Sunday evening.

Fred Wallace is at home from Lewisburg to see his father who has been sick for some days.

Winters McNeel is off to Charleston to stand his examination. We will have a new doctor soon.

Prof J. L. Sydenstricker is spending his vacation at home. He will return to Athens, W. Va., at the opening of the Concord Normal School. He will hold his position in that school for another year.

E. I. Holt and R. K. Barns made a flying trip to Lewisburg last week but Jake Beard made the quicker trip as he went for binder twine.

Mr Woods Luddington, of Ronceverte, spent Sunday with C. W. Beard and family.

Mrs Mattie Beard and Mrs Nancy Callison died in this neighborhood last week. They were two most excellent ladies and had reached ripe old ages. They leave a host of relatives and friends to mourn their death.

Depression of Spirits

so common in summer-time, accompanied by loss of energy, lack of thought-power, means a deficient supply of nourishment. The vital force is lost. It isn't a question of muscle and sinew, but of resistance and endurance. At any age, but especially in youth, it involves the risk of lung disease. Loss of flesh and a cough are threatening signs.

Scott's Emulsion

In Scott's Emulsion the taste of the oil is fully disguised, making it almost as palatable as milk.

CHURCH NOTES.

Sacramental Service.

The sacramental services at the Huntersville Church last Sabbath were attended by a very interesting congregation. Tho the people had assembled expecting to hear an esteemed visiting minister, who was providentially hindered from being present, yet they gladdened and cheered the heart of their old pastor by giving him close and patient attention.

The texts used in the services of the day were: "Blessed is he that readeth and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things that are written therein; for the time is at hand."—Revelation i. 3.

"For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commends his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us."—Romans v. 7-9.

The attention was all that could be desired, and very interesting accessions were made to the membership.

Festival Benefit.

The undersigned hereby most gratefully tenders his thanks to the promoters and patrons of the Sunset festival of July 7, for the liberal and much needed donation sent him by their agents, Mrs L. W. Herold and Mrs J. B. Lockridge. Very seldom, if ever, in ministry of forty years has a gift of this kind been more timely and useful. What Paul said to his Colossian friends he would say to you: "Notwithstanding, ye have well done that ye did communicate with my affliction. * * * But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." See Colossians iv. 9-20, an expressive of the feelings of your friend. May God bless you, every one, for what you have been and are to me.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

TIRES THAT LEAK.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages,

While punctures in it can be repaired with plugs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair

No. 2.

No. 3.

strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, as in cut No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "leak like a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they puncture. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether other tires last as long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask, also, what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright free repair shops, located in the principal cities.

N. B.—When you have a puncture, get right off. Riding a tire flat, when it has a tack or nail in it, may damage it considerably.

SERMONETTE.

Preserve me, O God, for in Thee do I put my trust. . . . Thou wilt show me the path of life, in Thy presence there is fulness of joy, at Thy right hand there are pleasures forevermore. PSALM xvi. 1, 11.

This psalm attracts special attention for many reasons. It is named the Michtam of David, that is the Golden Psalm of the sweet singer of Israel. Whatever is characterized as golden is to be estimated as the most precious of its kind. A golden opportunity is the best of opportunities, so a Michtam—a golden psalm—may be justly regarded as the precious one of the psalms.

In his famous sermon the day of Pentecost the apostle Peter quoted from this psalm in illustrating the fact of Christ's resurrection, and aroused their consciences to such a degree that thousands of persons became repentant, and inquired men and brethren what shall we do. At the most impressive part of his sermon the Apostle exclaims: "Ye men of Israel, hear these words. Jesus of Nazareth, a man of God approved among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know: Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken and by wicked hands have crucified and slain. Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that he should be holden of it. For David speaketh concerning him: 'I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for He is on my right hand that I should not be moved. Therefore did my heart rejoice and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope. Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell neither wilt Thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption. . . Thou hast made known to me the ways of life, Thou shalt make me full of joy with Thy countenance.'"

Peter proceeds to comment on these words from the Golden Psalm, and in his fearless and impressive manner convinces the people of their stupendous crime of rejecting the Lord of Glory and putting him to the shameful death of the cross. This same Jesus, nevertheless, hath God raised up, and therefore being by the right hand of God exalted and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, Christ hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear. Therefore, let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

Although the men that made up that vast audience were "Jews, devout men out of every nation under heaven"; yet we are informed that when they heard Peter's explanation of this psalm they were pricked to the heart and inquired of Peter and the rest of the Apostles "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Then came the reply. Repent and be baptised every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you and to your children and to all that are afar off—even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

No wonder such a psalm should be call a Golden Psalm, having such a history and used as such an effective purpose. Upon reading this Golden Psalm the thoughtful reader perceives that the Psalmist is very distrustful of his own personal merits—he has nothing to speak of in the way of good and meritorious deeds for which he could claim some merit. He expresses great abhorrence of idolatry, that is whatever prescription the mind and to make him forget full of his religious duties. With him religion was the chief concern and he wants the Lord to be the portion of his inheritance and of his cup and to maintain his lot so as to have the lines to fall in pleasant places and thus to have a goodly heritage such as would do him good in this life and in the resurrection life. And tho he has nothing to speak of as to his own meritorious doing, he has plenty to say about what God has done and is doing and will do for him, and he has this to say about the hope of his personal calling. He will bless the Lord for giving him counsel and thoughts so consoling and instructive to him in the "night seasons." Then as to the hope he has of the resurrection, he says: "I have set the Lord always before me; because He is at my right *hand I shall not be moved. There*fore my heart (mind) is glad and my glory (tongue) rejoiceth, my flesh also shall rest in hope. For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell (the grave), neither wilt Thou suffer Thine Holy one (Jesus the Son of God) to see corruption."

And then David says in reference to his hope for eternal life that God will show him the path of life, in God's presence there is fullness of joy, and at God's right hand there are pleasures forever*more.*

There is a hymn that may be regarded a golden hymn, because it is so full of the spirit and power of the Golden Psalm, and may it be one of the songs to make glad the house of our present pilgrimage, with our faces ever turned towards the everlasting morning and ever following the path of life as it opens before us.

The faint yet pursuing we go on our way,—
The Lord is our leader, His word is our stay;
The suffering and sorrow and trial be near,
The Lord is our refuge, and whom can we fear?

And to His green pastures our footsteps
He leads,
His flock in the desert how kindly He feeds,
The lambs in His bosom He tenderly bears
And brings back the wand'rers all safe from the snares.

The clouds may surround us our God is our light,—
The storms rage around us God is our might,—
So faint yet pursuing still onward we come,
The Lord is our leader and Heaven our home.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

JUNE 21st, Messrs Frank McClung, Joseph Meredith, and a seven-year-old son of Robert A. Curry were on the way from Fort Spring to Mr Curry's, who lives just beyond the tunnel. Going up hill the men got out, leaving the boy in the wagon. The horses run off and the boy fell out unhurt. After running some distance the horses became entangled and could not move. One was extricated unhurt; the other with the wagon rolled down a steep hillside and was stopped by a tree. The horse was not loose and had gotten on his feet, and while being led around a steep place he lost his footing and fell over a precipice two hundred feet into the river. He was not yet killed, but upon being taken from the river and led to an open field it soon was manifest that there was some internal injury, for while standing eating he suddenly fell dead. In the excitement while cutting the horse loose Mr Meredith cut off the end of his thumb.

How C. B. Hall, president of the Gilmer County (W. Va.) Court, said that for has had three cases of Gas in his family, during the past summer, which he cured in less than a week with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Mr Hall also states, that in many instances there were twenty persons under the influence of Gas at one time—Glenville, W. Va., Pathfinder. This remedy has been used in the same experience of Gas on our shores, with perfect success. It can always be depended upon for bowel complaints, even in its most severe forms. IN ROYALTY'S PRESENCE

A Peculiar Custom That Has Long Been Observed.

In Leaving the Royal Presence It Is the Correct Thing to Walk Backwards —Origin of the Custom It Still in Doubt.

If Mr. Labouchere continues with his average assiduity to search for the origin of customs that have come down by those days from prehistoric times, his successors in that interesting line of inquiry will have nothing to do but to pore over the pages of his unique publication, London Truth. Whence came this custom of walking backward before royalty? is one of the questions to the solution of which Truth has recently addressed itself with characteristic energy. We do not know that the prosperity or happiness of mankind or the advancement of civilization is involved in this inquiry. We could imagine the nations of the earth going on for ages to come, growing wiser and better in the future, as they have done in the past, and not caring a continental where or when or how that old habit got its start. Indeed, it requires no great stretch of the imagination or of the probabilities to picture a time when all royalties shall have walked or been walked off the stage, backward, or forward, never to return. Humanity has had to go on as it has been going on for some centuries in order to arrive at the end of the monarchical institutions. But, inasmuch as Truth considers this query worthy of consideration, we must conclude that it possesses some importance, some claim to human interest, even though that claim is not within our visual range.

One of Truth's correspondents gravely suggested not long ago that the custom of walking backward before royalty was due to an instinct in man implanted by Providence. In other words, nature is responsible for the habit. In a certain sense this is true. Nature endowed the earliest specimens of the human race with power to walk, and it must have given them that veneration for superiors which prompted them to noble backward before kings and princes. We suppose nature is, to some extent, responsible for toadyism in all countries. It is nature that makes the English people "dearly love a lord," and nature causes a great many Americans *to make fools of themselves and bur*lesque their own democratic government whenever they get a chance to pay homage to a titled aristocrat, real or bogus, from the old world. But it is perverted nature, and the growing democratic spirit of the age is getting the better of it.

Another correspondent of Truth, writing from the far east, where he is supposed to have seen much of savage life, makes a philosophical suggestion that seems to us to throw a great flood of light on this question. His notion is that the custom of always turning the face toward royalty originated in the stern necessities of rude and poor *people who had little skill in clo*thing. He says the first kings were rulers of savages whose clothing was extremely limited, and rarely consisted of more than a scanty garment modified on the primitive fig leaf. He respectfully suggests that when a subject thus apparelled had to present himself before royalty, courtesy, not to say decency, would suggest that he should present to the sovereign only that portion of his anatomy which was concealed by clothing. He therefore kept his back averted in approaching and retiring.

This explanation is highly creditable to the rough and simple people from whom modern notions have descended. That necessity long since ceased to exist, but *the custom of walking back*ward survives because etiquette now demands what decency called for when the world was younger.—Washington Post.

Iron Quarries.

Very interesting facts, not generally known, about the iron mines of Spain are discussed at a recent meeting of the Iron and steel institute of Great Britain. It is from northern Spain, in the neighborhood of Bilbao, that the greater part of Iron ore now imported for the use of the British steel makers is obtained. Steel is made by the basic process from iron ore containing phosphorous, but for the best qualities of steel, which is made by the open hearth process, a purer ore must be used, and it is that which England imports from Spain. "Nature seems to have designed the hills of northern Spain especially for the use of the steel makers." Until recently practically no effort has been made to manufacture steel in Spain, and most of the ore has been exported to England. The iron mines of northern Spain are described as being rather quarries than mines in the ordinary sense of the word. "The mountains themselves are just heaps of iron ore covered naturally with but a thin layer of earth. This is removed, and it only remains to break up the ore and load it into sitting receptacles, when it is conveyed down to the water's edge by its own gravity."—Youth's Companion.

Diamond Coal.

An English exchange says reliance is to that an audience of 2,000 people, listening for two hours to a concert, are not only cultivating and indulging their æsthetic tastes, but are engaged in the economical private occupation of producing on less than 100 cwt. of coal and 17 gallons of water from the inspiration and enjoyment of the music they hear, and they have the advantage of performing the same, instead of burning, this quantity would be usefully employed. It is for music what Tennyson says is for love, "a passion more common, and less prosaic, and more divine." Theatres at Blackpool then to breathe the air of a crowded and unventilated room, and have already proved to be a source of danger to the public health, on the principle that what the eye does not see the heart does not grieve over.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE KIDNEYS PURIFY THE BLOOD AND THEY ALONE.

If diseased, however, they cannot, and the blood poisons remain in the system, causing many of the diseases to the body goes through the kidneys, the sewers of the system, every three minutes, night and day, while in health.

puts the kidneys in perfect health, and purifies the blood.

The kidneys, charged with sending the blood to the liver, heart, brain, bladder, kidneys, nerves, skin, bones, muscles, and tissues, and charged with the duty of purifying the blood, are helpless when the blood is impure. Swift's Specific makes pure blood, and thus makes the kidneys do their work.

CHOW-CHOW.

In a recent issue of the Greenbrier Independent the Hon J. W. Davis advances the idea that the commonly used expression "cold slaw" is not correct but that the proper term is "cole slaw," the word cole meaning cabbage. We feel inclined to take issue with him on the question, and are unwilling to believe that we have been in error all our lives in the use and spelling of the term.

As used by people in general the word slaw denotes sliced or chopped cabbage, and all slaw is divided into two principle dishes by the housewife. That which is cooked and served warm and known as "hot slaw"; and that uncooked, distinguished from the other by the name of "cold slaw." Mr Davis is right, but if we accept his view of the case the autocrat of the dinner table will be compelled to say, "Won't you have some of the 'cold cole-slaw?'" And his equally punctilious neighbor will respond, "Not any, thank you; but I will trouble you for the 'hot cole-slaw?'" There might be others who would prefer their "hot cole-slaw cold,"—that is after it had cooled. Owing to these complications we will continue in error, as it will lead to intricacies to try to be too exact.

Last winter something happened in a school in this county that is told anew with great relish when anything occurs to bring the conversation around to it. The teacher was a man of considerable age whose hearing is defective. In the history class was a bright boy who generally had his lessons well. When the first question was asked the boy very gently and respectfully answered, "I don't know my lesson to-day, sir." The teacher, not understanding, and no doubt supposing from the readiness of the reply that it was correct, said: "That's right, Johny!" and passed on to something else.

When in the next round another question was asked him he said, "I told you before, sir, that I did n't know my lesson." The teacher was well pleased, and said again "That's right, Johny!"

The third and last question to Johny was promptly answered by him: "You can't hear anything at all, can you old man?"

"That's right," said the instructor, "you have been well prepared to-day, Johny."

The truth of this remarkable tale can be proven.

PERHAPS some of our readers, like the writer, have been puzzled about the meaning of the word 'capitulation,' in what is said of terms of peace between Turkey and Greece. Turkey demands the abolition of the capitulations. In virtue of the capitulations, Greek subjects, living in different parts of the Turkish Empire, share with the subjects of other independent powers the right to appeal from Turkish courts to their own consular courts. There are several million of Greeks in Turkey, many of them fine business men, and some of large means. Turkish courts have notoriety for oppression and corruption, and it would be a serious matter for those millions of Greeks to be left without appeal from the jurisdiction of the Turkish courts.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

Thomas McNeill.

The McNeill relationship, on Swago, trace their ancestry to Thomas McNeill, who came to Swago from Capon Valley, Frederick county, Virginia, between 1768 and 1770. His parents, whose names cannot be recalled, came from Scotland. Thomas McNeill's wife was Mary Ireson, from Franklin County, Virginia.

About 1770, Thomas McNeill entered three hundred acres of land and settled where Joseph Pennell now lives, (1897), and built the house occupied a few years since by the family of the late William McNeill, one of his grandsons. His family of sons and daughters were widely scattered in the course of years, but wherever they went became useful citizens. His sons were Jonathan, Absalom, Enoch, and Gabriel, and the daughters were Naomi and Mary (Polly.)

Naomi became Mrs Smith and Polly was married to William Ewing, and both went to Ohio.

Gabriel married Rebecca Stephenson and settled where Jonathan McNeill now lives, then moved to Jackson County, Ohio, where he became a well-known citizen. From information furnished by one of his grand-daughters we learn that he was the first surveyor of his adopted county, and one of the most prominent of the pioneers. Dr Gabriel McNeill was a civil engineer, machinist, chemist, botanist, farmer, physician, and preacher, and not a quack in anyone; so writes a drummer to the Jackson County paper, who had been on a visit to the neighborhood where Dr McNeill had lived.

Enoch McNeill, son of Thomas, the pioneer, married Jane Moore, a daughter of the pioneer Moses Moore, and settled on what is now known as the "Enoch Place," a section of the original homestead; but finally moved to Jackson county, Ohio.

Absalom McNeill married Comfort Smith, and also went West.

Jonathan McNeill, senior son of pioneer Thomas McNeill, married Phebe Moore, a daughter of Moses Moore, and settled at the Swago mill, now held by Withrow McClintic, Esq. He appears to have been an enterprising person. Milling, weaving, fulling cloth, and powder making were carried on under his supervision. Double coverlets woven by one Jones are still to be found.

Mrs Phebe McNeill survived her husband many years. She was born February 13, 1774, and claims to have been 13 years of age at the time of the Drinnan raid, when James Baker and the Bridger boys were killed. She died in 1867 in her 93d year. She was on a packhorse loaded with bed-clothing and supplies on the way to the fort at Mill Point, and was passing the Waddell place when the party heard the Indians shooting the Bridger brothers. At this time Moses Moore seems to have been living on Swago, not far from Mrs McClintic's residence. Traces of the Moore home are said to be yet discernable.

The sons of Jonathan and Phebe McNeill were John, William, and Moore, and Preston.

Preston, while a little boy three or four years of age, was drowned near the mouth of Dry Creek, and his body was found some distance below near the forking.

John McNeill married Miss Rebecca McNeill, from Franklin Co., Virginia, and settled on Dry Creek at the place now occupied by Charles McNeill, a grand-son. An extended sketch of Mr McNeill and his family appeared in The Times a few years since, and will not be repeated here, more than to say that he was one of the most useful citizens of his times. He was prominent in his church, the Methodist Episcopal; a member of the court, a faithful and competent school-teacher, and possessed knowledge of medicinal remedies, and at a time when physicians were no nearer than Frankford or the Warm Springs. His services freely given were of great comfort and relief to the suffering before regular medical attention could be had. Mrs Anna Moore, near Marlinton, the late Mrs Jane Kennison, on Dry Creek; Mrs Naomi Dilley, near Dilley's Mill; the late Washington McNeill, on Buck's Run, where Joseph B. McNeill now lives; the late John McNeill, junior, merchant at Hillsboro were his children. There were other sons and daughters, whose names are not in the writer's possession.

Moore McNeill first married Martha McNair, of Augusta County, and settled on Dry Creek near the mouth. His second marriage was with Nancy Auldridge, daughter of William Auldridge, ancestor of the Auldridge connexion in our county. By this marriage there were one son and two daughters. Clark McNeel died in early manhood. Phebe Ann was married to Reuben E. Overholt, and lives on the homestead. Nancy Jane became Mrs W. H. Overholt, of Frankford.

William McNeill married Nancy Griffey, from Franklin County, Virginia. She was the daughter of a Swiss soldier who came over with the Marquis Lafayette and remained to become a citizen of the United States. They settled on the Thomas McNeill homestead. He was a popular school-teacher, and among the earliest of his profession in the present limits of our county. He taught a 12-months school at the Marony Place, and he had for his scholars the late Mrs Martha Adkisson, Agnes Gay and Andrew Gay, brother and sister of the late John Gay, Esq. Martha Young boarded with her sister, the late Mrs Elizabeth Cochran. The Gays boarded at Jonathan McNeill's at the mill. The Buckleys went to this school also. William McNeill died a lingering and painful death of cancer. The sons of William and Nancy McNeill were Jonathan, James, Claiborne, and Moore. The daughters were Jane, Elizabeth, and Agnes.

Jane McNeill was married to John E. Adkisson, Esq., and settled on the head of Swago. She became the mother of a worthy family of sons and daughters, was much esteemed for her amiable character, and died a few years since sincerely lamented.

Elizabeth McNeill was married to Solomon Cochran, son of Isaac Cochran, on Drooping Mountain, and settled in Harrison County, West Virginia, where she died but recently, after several years of widowhood, greatly missed by attached friends and children.

Jonathan McNeill married Angelina Adkisson, daughter of the late Daniel Adkisson, at the head of Swago,—she was a sister of John E. Adkisson, just mentioned,—and they settled on a section of the old homestead near Buckeye, where he now resides. Mrs Aaron Kee, near Marlinton, and Mrs John Buckley, at Buckeye, are their daughters. Rev Asa McNeill, William, Daniel, Doc, Ulysses S., Enoch, and the late James McNeill were their sons.

Captain James McNeill, second son of William McNeill, the teacher, married Sarah, daughter of the late William Young, Esq., of Stony Creek, and settled on a section of the old homestead, where he now lives. After her lamented decease he lived in Nicholas County a number of years employed in home-joining. At the opening of the war between the States he enlisted in the Confederate service in a volunteer company at Summerville as a lieutenant. Upon the reorganization of the company he was chosen captain. He became a prisoner of war at the battle of Droop Mountain, and was kept at Fort Delaware a long and tedious time. His second marriage was with Mrs Fannie Perkins, and he came back to the old home near Buckeye. His son Douglas is a well-known teacher in the public schools and instructor in penmanship. For years Captain McNeill has been disabled by rheumatic affliction, but the worthy old veteran's heart is still warm with sympathy for the "boys at home." He has done something to relieve at intervals upon the past and the prospects of the future, in these words, which, in his own deep and sonorous voice, he oft repeats:

"The truth the crushed to earth will rise again;
The eternal years of God are hers,
While error wounded writhes with pain
And dies amid her worshipers."

Claiborne McNeill married Elizabeth Adkinson, daughter of Daniel Adkisson, and lives near Buckeye on the place bequethed him by his relative "Little John" McNeill. Their daughter Charlotte is the wife of Joseph Pinnell, who lives near them. Their sons are Joshua B. McNeill, Senator N. Clauson McNeill, of Marlinton; and D. T. McNeill, at Buckeye. Claiborne McNeill's second marriage was with Miss Margaret Griffin, daughter of the late Abraham Griffin.

Moore McNeill, the youngest son of William the teacher, became a preacher, and entered the itinerancy under the auspices of the Methodist Protestant Church, and traveled many years with marked success and acceptance in the counties of West Virginia bordering the Ohio River. His wife was Miss Eliza Jane Donaldson, of West Virginia. At the present time he resides at Smithville, in Ritchie County, a supernumerary minister in the pale of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is, however, still vigorous, and performs much ministerial service, in connexion with the duties laid upon him by the care of a large and growing family and the management of extensive farming operations.

Thus we have traced the history of Thomas McNeill, the pioneer of Swago, as exemplified by brief allusions to those of his descendants whose names have been communicated to us. His name deserves honorable recognition for his courage in penetrating the dangerous recesses of these forest wilds, at the time among the most exposed and dangerous points of the Indian frontier. He overcame difficulties and encouraged others to do the same and showed how it was done. Then when this place came to be too narrow his sons and daughters trained by him were fitted to make the best of the opportunities opened up on the Ohio frontier and were ready for them.

We trust it is not too much to expect or hope for, that from his descendants our community may look for a very exalted type of citizenship helping in the grand work of elevating and purifying society, and thus making our county a queen in the West Virginia sisterhood of counties, and become worthy of the name it bears,—Pocahontas,—the virgin queen of a virgin world. In a Sarcastic Vein.

The Jackson Whig chuckles because "we have another demonstration that high protective tariffs do not prevent nor cure strikes." High protective tariffs do not prevent or cure chilblains or hay fever or Charleyhorse or chronic silver sponting or plutophobia or the chicken stealing habit. The Jackson Whig wishes to lay too much work on protective tariffs. There is only one entire and perfect cure for all the woes that are or can be, and is the great 16 to 1 remedy. The application of that will not only prevent strikes, but will ultimately relieve from the necessity of working. What is the use of having so many people work? It is a habit which tends to make things cheap, and nothing should be cheap except money.—New York Sun.

Thy Will be Done.

Thy will be done, thy will, thy will,
Alike it may with anguish fill
My beating breast, I trust and say
Thy will be done, my God, to-day.

Thy will, thy will be done, O God,
Alike it lurks beneath the sod
And darkling of my heart and home,
Thy will, the will to be to come.

Thy will be done, thy will, thy will,
E'en the dim cavity front it still
The tones of my inmost heart
I trust my god while they depart.

Thy will be done, thy will, my God,
I bend submissive to thy rod;
Thou smitest, yours I look above,
And know, O God, that there art love.

Thy will be done, my will I yield
Until thy purpose be revealed,
Thy struggle now, O God, to part,
And peace abide with me in heart.

Submissive to thy will I'm blessed,
For thou will guide and shield, at best
Thy will be done, my God, I say,
Because to thee my heart I lay.

It makes no difference whether you answer or not. It is always true that "a woman is as old as she looks." Nothing sets the seal of age upon a woman's beauty so deeply, as gray hair. A Pair of Freaks.

"These, ladies and gentlemen," announced the dime museum lecturer, indicating with an appropriate gesture a couple of parched and juiceless forms confined in a glass case, "are two of the most extraordinary curiosities ever placed on exhibition.

"They're mummies, aint they?" queried the long-necked visitor from Waybehind, edging up as close as possible and glaring at the specimens with interest.

"No, sir!" replied the lecturer, dismissing the questioner with a wave of his hand. "The figure on the right, ladies and gentlemen, is all that now remains of a once prominent citizen, whose name, originally, was Brown. During the greater portion of his life he was considered by his fellow-men to be the possessor of much sound, practical sense, but, yielding at last to the solicitations of an ambitious wife—his own wife, understand—he took to spelling his name 'Broughne.' This idiosyncrasy aroused a retaliatory spirit in the bosom of a ribald and irreverent fellow citizen by the name of Jones—this is Mr Jones on the left—and the latter promptly proceeded to make game of the other gentleman by changing his own name to 'Joughnes.'

"When next they met Broughne assaulted Joughnes, and, after a sanguinary combat, like that indulged in by the Kilkenny cats of legendary fame, they slew each other. Thereupon the proprietor of this Museum and Palace of Wonders, with characteristic enterprise, secured the remains and had them stuffed in an appropriate and life-like manner and placed them here as a great moral lesson, showing conclusively to what a sad and solemn end excessive ambition, unchecked by good judgment, will drag its victims. Please pass now to the next platform, ladies and view the most pitiful and attenuated living skeleton ever on exhibition, the man who married his mother-in-law."—New York Journal.

John Sherman's First Meeting with Lincoln.

Secretary Sherman says he never will forget his first meeting with a President. It was shortly after Lincoln's inauguration, and he attended a public reception, fell into line, and waited an hour or two for a chance to shake hands with the great emancipator. "During this time," says Mr Sherman, "I was wondering what I should say, and what Lincoln would do when we met. At last it came my turn to be presented. Lincoln looked at me a moment and extended his hand, and said: 'You're a pretty tall fellow, aren't you? Stand up here with me, back to back, and let's see which is the taller.'

"In another moment I was standing back to back with the greatest man of his age. Naturally I was quite abashed by this unexpected evidence of democracy.

"'You 're from the west are n't you?' inquired Lincoln.

"'My home is in Ohio,' I replied.

"'I thought so,' he replied, 'that is the kind of men they raise out there.'"—Chicago Times-Herald.

CAPTAIN THOMPSON, of Putman, commenced his duties as Marshal on July 1. As he was on the point of appointing deputies from his party, he was deterred by temporary injunction from doing so, the grounds that the men on which they held were comprised in the civil service list and that they could not be discharged summarily. The question is to be argued July 8. It seems to be pressing this matter and the appointees will doubtless be settled by the action of the deputies in this district. Congressman Dayton is endeavoring to have West Virginia divided into two districts, in that case he would be in the position to deal with our courts held at Huntington.

It is the final. Dazzling smallpox, the nasty kind those who travel, and the kind made well-known by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Rubies by the Ton.

"Bauxite, a French mineral," says Cosmos, June 12, abstracting an article in Aluminium, "has just been used in a new and unheard-of way. For a long time, in certain industries, heated bauxite has been used to make very hard substances for the fabrication of artificial mill stones to be used in the manufactures. This was intended as a substitute for the emery of Naxos, with which the Greek Government by its pretentions had little by little disgusted many merchants.

"After the first trials, instead of calcining the bauxite, the idea occurred to some one to melt it, and thus was obtained a product harder still, diamantite, which was nothing else than aluminna melted in the electric furnace.

"But now comes M. Gin, a very distinguished engineer and inventor, to whom it occurred to volatilize the alumina, which is very easily done in the electric furnace, giving rise to the thick reddish-brown clouds, so inconvenient, and so well known to M. Moissan and his followers.

"By combining certain vapors with those of alumnina, which is the essential substance, M. Gin obtained rubies, not as Fremy obtained them, by pounds in a crucible, but by hundred weight and tons. A new industrial product is thus born, such as our fathers would never have suspected, for if any one had told them that we should one day vaporize alumnina—the most refractory of all substances—they would have laughted in his face.

"A curious detail: when Mr Gin took out his patents in Germany there was a great stir. The patent office demanded to see the products. They probably expected to receive a small laboratory crucible but M. Gin's answer was a large case of his primary products and a huge block of rubies. The astonishment of the patent officials may be imagined. The precious patent was at once sent to M. Gin.

"We are the first to be able to announce the arrival of a new French industrial product—ruby polishing-powder that will scratch even the famous carborundum.

IN Ohio there is an anti-riot law permitting persons injured or having property destroyed by a mob to recover damages from the County wherein the riot occurred or the lynching took place. In case of death the damages was fixed at one hundred thousand dollars. Owing to some defect in the wording it is declared invalid, not successfully. The wording will be changed to suit, and then lynching will be a costly business.

INTOLERABLE TOLLS.

At the recent session of the legislature the following act defining tollable roads was passed.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of West Virginia: That section 12 of chapter 56 of the Code of West Virginia be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows:

12. The said tolls may be demanded and collected of every person passing the toll-gate, for the section or fractional part thereof, whether he shall have traveled the whole or only a part of the section or fractional part thereof; Provided, that the said toll-road or turnpike be made so as to conform to the following specifications:

All toll-roads shall have a smooth solid roadbed, of not less than fifteen feet in width, exclusive of ditches, and shall be well side-ditched and drained.

All cross-drains shall be underdrained or riprapped when necessary.

All running streams requiring bridges of fifty feet in length, or less, and such others as the county court of a county may direct, shall have a bridge or culvert across the same sufficiently strong and sufficiently wide to insure the safe passage to all kinds of vehicles; Provided, further, That no toll shall be collected unless said toll-road or turnpike be constructed in accordance with this section.

All acts and parts of acts conflicting with this act are hereby repealed.

In this county those roads upon which toll was taken were let to contractors who put the roads up to a certain standard and then collected the tolls. It might be said that no section of five miles came up to the specifications of the above act. The toll contractors appeared at the last court with anxious faces, but the only consolation they received was the advice that they might have some one arrested for refusing to pay toll and see who paid the cost. Having here the ne plus ultra of the court they sadly withdrew to smoke it in their pipes.

Last Saturday toll was demanded on the road from near Buckeye to the Greenbrier line, and was refused by the writer; so we suppose that some are now paying toll and others not. It is hard enough to pay toll to our own county men, but the idea of paying tribute to Greenbrier County is intolerable. The road is in terrible condition for the first ten miles, and the writer resolved last week to do a little "yellow journalism," and refuse to pay toll and make a test case of it. Pocahontas wagoners have paid thousands of dollars toll on the miserable roads stretching between Pocahontas County and Ronceverte. They certainly should have the right to demand the worth of their money.

Last Friday we drove to Greenbrier. After crossing Droop the road down the mountain was rough, steep, and narrow; the cross drains were neither underdrained nor riprapped, which, we are told, means a long curving ditch about twelve feet from side to side with stone pounded in the bottom. A small stream in Renick's Valley was unbridged.

At the flat toll-gate we told the toll-gatherer, a little girl, that we could not pay toll, and left the correct name and address. The girl said she was sorry the road was not in a good condition, and seemed very much distressed. Her lip trembled, and we very nearly paid our toll, but hardened our heart and went on.

The road continued in a uniform bad condition to Falling Spring, and we again we refused to pay, but this time we did not escape unmolested. A lady came to take the toll, and when she heard our refusal (which was meant to be firm) she very promptly told me that the justice was in town and the constable and she would have me arrested. This was the thing I had been seeking, but at close quarters the prospect did not look so alluring; but having known several constables, from Joe Bunnell down-wards, the magic name did not completely rob me of my self-possession, so I gave my name and told the lady when I would be back. She promised faithfully to have the arrest made, and said some things to me that cut to the bone wherever they hit.

Continuing to Frankford, the road at places was very rough, steep, and narrow, but having a such an experience, and all the chance of having a test case made, I paid my fare and went.

In Lewisburg, in arming for the fray, it was discovered that nothing was on record in the clerk's office to authorize the contractor, a Mr Kinkaid, to collect toll; and it was evident that he had made the contract with special commissioners, but it had never been ratified by the court.

Returning to Falling Spring with visions of law and justice before mine eyes, it was found that the lady at the toll-gate wished to argue the matter furtoer and had not proceeded against me. Then we paid toll on the return trip to show that we could be both just and generous, and escaped to Pocahontas. We would not willingly hear that contemptous "I know you!" with emphasis on every word from anyone again.

It is certain that the road should be in a better condition before tolls are collected, and a good many dollars would be saved the citizens of this county every week if they refused to pay toll on a road that is not worth the money.

THE Monroe Watchman endorses the Wayne News in decrying the law passed by the last legislature in regard to the licensing new lawyers in this State. The action of the Supreme Court in constituting the lawyers who hold chairs in the State University an examining board for the State has called forth a vituperative attack on those gentlemen. But why should they not examine candidates for licensing as well as any other three lawyers in the State? The Dean is an ex-member of the Supreme Court, and yet the Wayne News froths at the mouth and calls him a "one-horse lawyer." The late law requires two years' study, at least, before they are admitted to the examining room; and, furthermore, they must go to Morgantown, which Wayne News says is an expensive journey, and therefore the "poor man has no chance!"

We would suggest that the journey to Morgantown is not a circumstance compared to what is required to establish a law practice. It is a thankless job and a superfluous luxury for the poor man. There are few prizes in the profession, and the 'poor young man' had better not apply. If he is a born lawyer then he will be a lawyer. "For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other creature" shall be able to keep him from his life's work.

If those journals would like to see a continuation of that era when a man might wrestle with Blackstone for a week and then be admitted to practice the profession as his means did not allow him to to make a more thorough preparation to make or break his clients—then we will not contend with them. But all those who would like to see only capable men licensed to the bar will admit that the new law will result in young men learning at school at their own expense that knowledge too often acquired at the expense of their unhappy clients.

If you put fire to flax it will burn; if you put a stone in the water it will sink; if you twist a cat's tail it will squall; if you tackle Sawyers of the Hinton Independent-Herald he will respond in a perfectly awful way. The newspaper men are talking about "runnin' him outen his neighborin' neighborhood, he cuts 'em so wif his tongue," as the old darkey says in one of Opie Read's books. He is amusing to all save his own family.

He says: "Pocahontas Andy" is always ready to "buck, kick, and object." We say we are more than ready to buck, kick, and object to him. He says that Professor Reynolds (several times Acting President of the University) has no more chance of election at the next meeting of the Board of Regents than 'Pocahontas Andy' has. That is unjust to us. We have not applied, and our business at present does not permit us to accept the "pemah." Some twenty or thirty years from now, when Sawyer's suppers have burned out, (if we have escaped by the skin of our teeth,) we will consider the matter, but just now the public sentiment from public life offered by the secession behind college walls does not appeal to us. William I. Wilson spoke sanctimony, but we have done nothing as yet to be ashamed either to the gentlemanly or to a professorship in a college. We are not in Dr Reynolds's way.

THE REASON WHY.

The serious man sat 'neath a tree
And talked in a wondrous strain,— said he:

"I love the record-breaking summer time, its drouths and thunder-storms;
I love to see the lightning's glare and other such alarms.

I love to hear the house-fly buzz upon my window-panes,
To watch the house maid's vicious air a-dashing out its brains.

I love to see the white duck fiend as he ambles through the town,
To hear the cyclist's wild 'hel he!' as he almost runs you down.

I love to hear the huckster man a-shrieking o'er the way,
And telling of his cherries ripe and the lovely raspberray.

I long to see the people rush a bargain great to drive,
While the weary housewives groan about this being berried alive.

I yearn to hear some vocalist sing all the "latest things";
I love to hear six mad dogs howl whene'r the church bell rings.

To hear the cats upon the fence put sleep, shy god, to flight,
By shrieking out their college yells at twelve o'clock at night."

"Tis music rare,' I thought, 'could I but stand within your shoes
And love the things that give me naught but the heart-breaking blues.'

With awe I gazed upon the man so different from our kind,
And then I saw the reason why,—
he was both deaf and blind.

In Memoriam.

It becomes our sad duty to record the decease of one of our most eminent, public spirited, and widely-known citizens, DR MATHEW WALLACE, of Mill Point. This mournful event at his residence Monday near the setting of the sun, July 19, 1897. He was about 76 years of age, and his entire life was mainly passed in Pocahontas County. He was the only son of the late Benjamin Wallace. His mother was a granddaughter of John McNeel, pioneer. In youth and early manhood he lived with his uncle, the late Colonel Paul McNeel. He acquired a good education under the tuition of the Rev John S. Blain, Williamsville, Bath County, Virginia, and the Rev M. D. Dunlap, of Hillsboro. Both of these good men esteemed him very highly and entertained high opinions of his intellectual endowments, and believed he would become a person of marked prominence in whatever sphere he might spend his life.

He chose the profession of medicine; spent some time in the medical office of Dr George B. Moffatt, at Huntersville, then graduated from the University of New York. He practiced at Hillsboro and then at Mill Point, where the most of his professional life was spent.

He married Miss Rachel McNeel, daughter of the late John McNeel, near Mill Point. Not long since he was bereaved of his wife and his son Penick. His daughters, Minnie and Anna, and sons Mott and Fred, survive him.

He united with the Hillsboro Presbyterian Church many years ago, and became a ruling elder, the highest honor in the gift of his fellow members to confer.

His health has been for three or four years in a very precarious state, largely superinduced by the influenza so prevalent of late years.

When he was borne to his last resting place one was impressed that it rarely falls to the lot of any one to be more sincerely mourned and honored in death—such were the manifestations of love and grief.

As a physician his career vividly recalls what was written by one of the eminent masters of our classic English literature.

In Misery's darkest caverns known
His useful care was ever nigh,
Where hopeless Anguish poured its groan
And lonely Want retired to die.
No summons mocked by cold delay,
No petty gains disclaimed by pride;
The meekest wants of every day
The toil of every day supplied.

Personal Mention.

G. W. Gregor, of Huntersville, is having his residence nicely painted by the Fisher brothers.

Henry P. Randolph, Esq., and son, Ward, of Richmond, are visiting their Marlinton friends.

Miss Lillie Curry, of Huntersville, accompanied by I. Brown Moore, Esq., were welcome visitors at our place last Saturday.

O. E. McKeever is using the old court house for a workshop, and is doing a good deal of work in his line. He is transforming the old jail into a commodious dwelling.

House Burned.

Last Friday night the comfortable home of Mr and Mrs Ewing Johnson, near Marlinton, was burned to the ground about midnight. During the previous afternoon the roof of the kitchen was found burning, ignited by the stovepipe. Mrs. Johnson, being alone, called to a neighbor, who came, and to all appearances the fire was extinguished. No fire was made in the stove after that, and as late as nine o'clock the roof was carefully examined. About eleven o'clock the house was discovered to be in flames and beyond all control.

But little of the household effects were saved and so it amounts to almost a complete loss, and a great calamity to the occupants. Friends and neighbors came in the next day and assisted in putting the granary in a condition to be occupied temporarily.

The County Institute.

The teachers' institute will be held at Marlinton, beginning Aug. 9, 1897, and will continue for five days. All teachers are required by law to attend at least one institute annually, and any teacher who fails or refuses to attend, unless such teacher shall have an excuse sufficient in the judgement of the Board of Examiners, shall not be entitled to examination. Trustees cannot employ a teacher who has not a certificate of attendance for FIVE DAYS on a teacher' county institute, held in this State since the first day of June of this year; or have an excuse for non-attendance at same properly signed by the board of Examiners. Excuses for non-attendance will be signed only when the Board is in session at the regular stated examinations. Frivolous and petty excuses will not be accepted.

EXAMINATION FOR TEACHERS.

Teachers' examination will be held at Marlinton, Monday and Tuesday, August 16 and 17, 1897.

Controversies at Frost.

Tuesday, Mrs T. J. Williams and Mrs Dr Gatton, of Frost, were arrested upon the warrant of Susan Houdyshell charged with stealing fruit jars.

The preliminary examination was held before Squire Bird at Marlinton and resulted in a dismissal of the charge. T. J. Williams, a Confederate Veteran by occupation, and N. C. McNeill represented the defendants, with L. M. McClintic for the State and H. S. Rucker for the prosecuting witness.

The State's evidence was that after the arrest of Susan Houdyshell in May, Mrs Williams and Mrs Gatton had come to the house and without permission searched it to see if some fruit jars which had been stolen were in the house, and having missed some fruit jars it was supposed they had taken them that day.

The defense said that they had gone to the house and that John Houdyshell, the owner, was there and that he had given them leave to search the house to satisfy themselves concerning the jars and having done so, took nothing away with them. The defense also impeached the evidence of the prosecuting witnesses by a number of disinterested citizens of Frost neighborhood. The trial excited great interest and was attended by a large crowd of people.

Railroad News.

It is reported that the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Camden system hold a meeting at the Hot Springs the other day and it was decided to follow the original scheme of joining the railroads at Marlinton, and that work would begin at once.

Two engineers arrived at this point last Monday from the Hot Springs, worked one day and returned to Hot Springs. Their whole attention was given to the bed of the River. They took the elevation at Marlinton, then at the Gilmer Place, about two miles up the river, which they said was thirty feet higher, then at the Boyd Place, a mile further on, which was 30 feet higher; they then returned to the road and drove to Frost on the Knapp's on the Knapp's above this point and took the elevation. The engineers assure us that the road bed will not be lowered. One of these said: "We never talk about our business, but I guess you know what we are doing."

The prospects for railroad development are certainly brightening and a good many of our substantial men in their homes that we are to have a railroad soon.

The Jail Delivery.

The jailer at Marlinton has been made a victim of misplaced confidence, and it is not likely that he will allow visitors to enter the cells to visit prisoners again. Wednesday morning it was discovered that George Roberts, arrested and committed for beating his wife, and Ervine Houdyschell, a confessed burglar, had escaped during the night. All that was left was the negro boy in jail for forgery, who missed the chance of his life in not giving the alarm. He claims to have done his best to arouse the jailer, but it is not believed. He says that Roberts has been working at cutting the bars of the steel cage ever since he (Doughas) has been there, (over a month), and that he had told him he was making a rat-trap. He also says that a bar fell out Tuesday morning, making a loud noise, and Roberts told him before the escape that it was caused by the falling of a bar. About dark Roberts was out of the cage and working at the brick wall. He made a hole under a stone window sill.

The appearance of the cuts in the steel indicate that they have been working at the job for a long time. One of the cut places in the triangular bar looked as tho it might have been made for weeks or even years. The others were more or less fresh. The tool used was a saw or knife, very narrow. About a month ago Roberts wrote to Captain Smith, of this place, asking him to give him a paper bill for a silver dollar. It is supposed he wished to order some instrument by mail at that time. This was after Captain Smith had refused to bail him out.

The jail has been open of access to everyone who desired to enter. The natural supposition then is that the prisoners secured what tools they needed and worked at the job of sawing the bars at their leisure. The cage is constructed on the latest and best plans, and is of Harveyized steel. There is no possible way of escape without the use of the best of tools and plenty of time in which to complete a toilsome task. The work of removing bricks from the wall was of course comparatively easy. The prisoners had laid a heavy piece of bed-clothing on the floor to deaden the sound of falling mortar.

The prisoners were alloted different cells but were not locked up in them. The hole was made in Roberts' cell. For several weeks whenever Roberts' had visitors he would walk to the opposite side of the cage in another cell and talk to them. [illegible] with him. He left an order with the negro boy on the jailer for fifty cents which he made the boy a present. The negro is much blamed for not giving the alarm, for had he shouted he could have been heard all over town. The darkey says Roberts told him that his axes were case-hardened, and that he had a chisel to work at the masonry. They had started to cut out in the right hand cell, but had given it up after sawing off one rivet.

$50.00. I will pay fifty dollars reward for the return of G. W. Roberts and Ervine Houdyschell, who escaped from the Marlinton jail on July 21, 1897.

WILLIAM SIPLE, Jailer.

A Close Call.

Our exchanges from Lewisburg and Ronceverte report that Trout Shue came near being lynced, on Sunday night, July 11th. A party variously estimated from fifteen to thirty persons organized at the Brushy Ridge camp ground, eight miles of Lewisburg. Sheriff Nickell was duly notified, and passed the camp about 9 o'clock, on his way to Lewisburg. He was overtaken by four of the parties, and he turned back and at the home of D. A. Dwyer, succeeded in persuading the lynchers to give up their purpose.

The lynchers had procured a new rope, were well armed with winchesters and revolvers and meant business.

In the meantime the jail authorities had been notified by a fishing party coming in from Clear Creek, who had passed the camp ground and had heard enough to make them think that violence was intended, and so the party informed Deputy Sheriff Dwyer, who at once took the prisoner to a place of refuge in the woods a mile or two from the town. On Tuesday officers Nickell and Dwyer set out for Moundsville with the prisoner.

Steps are being taken to round up the lynchers. On Monday [illegible] warrants were issued for [illegible] who were recognized by officer Nickell. Charley Lewis, a colored person living near the Camp Ground, has been detained in Lewisburg as an important witness, as he is believed to have recognized about all the persons who had gathered at the Camp Ground.

When Shue learned what threatened him, he was greatly agitated and could not get on his shoes and was on the point of making a run for it, and thus be prepared for [illegible].

It would seem that the yonkers down not meet the views of these people, some of the lynchers of our township hailing from there, generally [illegible] should have been inflicted.

About twenty bids were considered; there was one bid of 1½ cents per page, which would have brought the bidder about five cents per day, so it was refused. Such books are to be copied as S. L. Brown and L. M. McClintic, special commissioners may think necessary.

F. R. Hill was appointed deputy for R. W. Hill, Sheriff.

C. A. Yeager given wood contract at $1.60 per cord.

Sheep Statistics.

Mr A. M. McLaughlin, of near Lewisburg, has always been one of the most successful sheep raisers in the country. We recently obtained some statistics from him in regard to the profit which might be expected from sheep in one season.

He had nineteen ewes out on shares last winter. This year the wool and increase has been sold for $141.21. In addition to this there was an unusual loss of five lambs. The wool brought $20 and twenty-eight lambs, at 92½ lbs., brought $121.21. Supposing that the capital invested in these 19 ewes was [illegible] per farms them out at half shares, being at no father expense or trouble, this year he could return the ewes back and $70.60, or nearly 100 per cent., and that with wool cheaper than cotton.

Another bird on the Johnson Place, near Marlinton, of 65 yearling sheep of Mr McLaughlin's own rising clipped an average of 7 lbs. each of wool.

In a field by themselves at his home farm in Greenbrier is a herd of 34 ewes which have 66 lambs. From these 34 ewes, produce to the amount of $300.22 has been sold this year. The lambs average 87 lbs. each. This was a profit of $8.83 each on those ewes.

A Fable.

A Bicyclist recently met a Man on the Road on Horse-back, 'tween Here and Ronceverte, and Scared his Horse. Said the Man, Why did you not get off your Wheel did you not get off your Wheel when you saw me Coming? Said the Bicyclist, Why did you not get off your Horse?

MORAL: The bicyclist has a right of way over the public roads.

"The Vampire" Localized.

Rudyard Kipling's recent poem, "The Vampire," which has been widely noticed and read, is thus parodied by Mr J. Angus MacDonald, in Brains:

A fool there was and he wrote an ad
(Even as you and I)
To the rich and the poor, the good and the bad,
(To tell them his store and his goods were the rad)
But this fool neither wit nor experience had (Never as you and I).

Oh the cash some waste and the space some waste:
And the work of head and hand
To let it become they don't know, you know,
(And well we know then never can know)
They d.) not understand.

A fool there was and his goods he spent
(Never as you and I)
His coin and work and his good intent
(But no body ever knew what he meant)
For a fool must follow his natural bent
(Never as you and I).

Oh the to t he lost and the spoil he lost
And the anxious schemes he planned,
But all is wise—fools never know why
(And well we know they'll never know why)
They do not understand.

The fool was stripped to his foolish hide
(Never as you and I)
From the business whirl he was cast aside
And nobody really cared if he died
To advertise wisely he vainly had tried,
(Never as you and I).

And it isn't the blame and it isn't the shame
That stings like a white-hot brand,
It's coming to know that some wiser know why

Personal Mention.

G. W. Ginger, of Huntersville, is having his residence nicely painted by the Fisher brothers.

Henry P. Randolph, Esq., and son, Ward, of Richmond, are visiting their Marlinton friends.

Miss Lillie Curry, of Huntersville, accompanied by I. Brown Moore, Esq., were welcome visitors at our place last Saturday.

O. K. McKeever is using the old court house for a workshop, and is doing a good deal of work in his line. He is transforming the old jail into a commodious dwelling.

House Burned.

Last Friday night the comfortable home of Mr and Mrs Ewing Johnson, near Marlinton, was burned to the ground about midnight. During the previous afternoon the roof of the kitchen was found burning, ignited by the stovepipe. Mrs Johnson, being alone, called to a neighbor, who came, and to all appearances the fire was extinguished. No fire was made in the stove after that, and as late as nine o'clock that roof was carefully examined. About eleven o'clock the house was discovered to be in flames and beyond all control.

But little of the household effects were saved and so it amounts to almost a complete loss, and a great calamity to the occupants. Friends and neighbors came in the next day and assisted in putting the granary in a condition to be occupied temporarily.

The County Institute.

The teachers' institute will be held at Marlinton, beginning Aug. 9, 1897, and will continue for five days. All teachers are required by law to attend at least one institute annually, and any teacher who fails or refuses to attend, unless such teacher shall have an excuse sufficient in the judgment of the Board of Examiners, shall not be entitled to examination. Trustees cannot employ a teacher who has not a certificate of attendance for FIVE DAYS on a teacher' county institute, held in this State since the first day of June of this year; or have an excuse for non-attendance at same properly signed by the board of examiners. Excuses for non-attendance will be signed only when the Board is in session at the regular stated examinations. Frivolous and petty excuses will not be accepted.

EXAMINATION FOR TEACHERS.

Teachers' examination will be held at Marlinton, Monday and Tuesday, August 16 and 17, 1897.

County Superintendent.

Controversies at Frost.

Tuesday, Mrs T. J. Williams and Mrs Dr Gwinn, of Frost, were arrested upon the warrant of Susan Hondybell charged with stealing fruit jars.

The preliminary examination was held before Squire Bird at Marlinton, and resulted in a dismissal of the charge. T. J. Williams, a Confederate Veteran by occupation, and N. C. McNeil represented the defendants, with L. M. McClintic for the State and H. S. Rucker for the prosecuting witnesses.

The State's evidence was that after the arrest of Susan Hondybell in May, Mrs Williams and Mrs Guinn had come to the house and without permission searched it to see if some fruit jars which had been stolen were in the house, and having missed some fruit jars it Sunday night, July 11th. A party variously estimated from fifteen to thirty persons organized at the Brushy Ridge camp ground, eight miles of Lewisburg. Sheriff Nickell was duly notified, and passed the camp about 9 o'clock, on his way to Lewisburg. He was overtaken by four of the parties, and he turned back and at the home of D. A. Dwyer, succeeded in persuading the lynchers to give up their purpose.

The lynchers had procured a new rope, were well armed with winchesters and revolvers and meant business.

In the meantime the jail authorities had been notified by a fishing party coming in from Clear Creek who had passed the camp ground and had heard enough to make them think that violence was intended, and so the party informed Deputy Sheriff Dwyer, who at once took the prisoner to a place of refuge in the woods a mile or two from the town. On Tuesday officers Nickell and Dwyer set out for Mooreefield with the prisoner.

Steps are being taken to round up the lynchers. On Monday bench warrants were issued for the six who were recognized by officer Nickell. Charley Lewis, a colored person living near the Camp ground, has been detained in Lewisburg as an important witness, as he is believed to have recognized about all the persons who had gathered at the Camp Ground.

When those learned of what charges had been preferred against them, they were greatly agitated and could not put on his shoes and was on the point of making a confession, and thus be prepared for prosecution.

It would seem that the sudden done not meet the views of those in charge of the Greenbrier co. penitentiary under the death penalty should have been inflicted.

The Jail Delivery.

The jailer at Marlinton has been made a victim of misplaced confidence, and it is not likely that he will allow visitors to enter the cells to visit prisoners again. Wednesday morning it was discovered that George Roberts, arrested and committed for beating his wife, and Ervine Hondyschell, a confessed burglar, had escaped during the night. All that was left was the negro boy in jail for forgery, who missed the chance of his life in not giving the alarm. He claims to have done his best to arouse the jailer, but it is not believed. He says that Roberts has been working at cutting the bars of the steel cage ever since he (Douglas) has been there, (one a month), and that he had told him he could use making a rat-trap. He also says that a bar fell out Tuesday morning, making a loud noise, and Roberts told him before the escape that it was caused by the falling of a bar. Then dark Roberts was out of the cage and working at the brick wall. He made a hole under a stone window sill.

The appearance of the cuts in the steel indicate that they have been working at the job for a long time. One of the cut pieces of the triangular bar looked as tho it might have been make for weeks or even years. The others were more or less fresh. The tool used was a saw or knife, very narrow. About a month ago Roberts wrote to Captain Smith, of this place, asking him to give him a paper bill for a silver dollar. It is supposed he wished to order some instrument by mail at that time. This was after Captain Smith had refused to bail him out.

The jail has been open of access to everyone who desired to enter. The natural supposition then is that the prisoners secured what tools they needed and worked at the job of sawing the bars at their leisure. The cage is constructed on the latest and best plans, and is of Harveyized steel. There is no possible way of escape without the use of the best of tools and plenty of time in which to complete a toilsome task. The work of removing bricks from the wall was of course comparatively easy. The prisoners had laid a heavy piece of bed-clothing on the floor to deaden the sound of falling mortar.

The prisoners were allotted different cells but were not locked up in them. The hole was made in Roberts' cell. For several weeks whenever Roberts' had visitors he would walk to the opposite side of the cage in another cell and talk to them. [illegible] with him. He left an order with the negro boy in the jailer for fifty cents, of which he made the boy a present. The negro is much blamed for not giving the alarm, for had he shouted he could have been heard all over town. The darkey says Roberts told him that his saws were case-hardened, and that he had a chisel to work at the masonry. They had started to cut out in the right hand cell, but had given it up after sawing off one rivet.

$50.00 I will pay fifty dollars reward for the return of G. W. Roberts and Ervine Hondyschell, who escaped from the Marlinton jail on July 21, 1897.

William Siple, Jailer.

A Close Call.

Our exchanges from Lewisburg and Ronceverte report that Trout Shue came near being lynched, on Sunday night, July 11th. A party variously estimated from fifteen to thirty persons organized at the Brushy Ridge camp ground, eight miles of Lewisburg. Sheriff Nickell was duly notified, and passed the camp about 9 o'clock, on his way to Lewisburg. He was overtaken by four of the parties, and he turned back and at the home of D. A. The lynchers had procured a new rope, were well armed with winchesters and revolvers and meant business.

Steps are being taken to round up the lynchers. On Monday bench warrants were issued for the six who were recognized by officer Nickell. Charley Lewis, a colored person living near the Camp ground, has been detained in Lewisburg as an important witness, as he is believed to have recognized about all the persons who had gathered at the Camp Ground.

Sheep Statistics.

Mr A. M. McLaughlin, of near Lewisburg, has always been one of the most successful sheep raisers in the country. We recently obtained some statistics from him in regard to the profit which might be expected from sheep in one season.

He had nineteen ewes out on shares last winter. This year the wool and increase has been sold for $141.21. In addition to this there was an unusual loss of five lambs. The wool brought $20 and twenty-eight lambs, at 9½ lbs., brought $121.21. Supposing that the capital invested in these 19 ewes was [illegible] er farms them out at half shares, [illegible] at no father expense to be, this year he could get 19 ewes back and $70.60, or nearly 100 per cent., and that with wool cheaper than cotton.

Another herd on the Johnson Place, near Marlinton, of 65 yearling sheep of Mr McLaughlin's own raising clipped an average of 7 lbs. each of wool.

In a field by themselves at his home farm in Greenbrier is a herd of 34 ewes which have 66 lambs. From these 34 ewes, produce to the amount of $300.92 has been sold this year. The lambs average 87 lbs. each. This was a profit of $8.83 each on these ewes.

A Fable.

A Bicyclist recently met a Man on the Road on Horse-back, tween Here and Ronceverte, and Scared his Horse. Said the Man, Why did you not get off your Wheel when you saw the Coming? Said the Bicyclist, Why did you not get off your Horse?

Moral: The bicyclist has a right of way over the public roads.

"The Vampire" Localized.

Rudyard Kipling's recent poem, 'The Vampire,' which has been widely noticed and read, is thus parodied by Mr J. Angus MacDonald, in Brains:

A fool there was and he wrote an ad
(Even as you and I)
To the rich and the poor, the good and the bad
(To tell them his store and his goods were the fad)
But this fool neither wit nor experience had (Never as you and I).

Oh the cash some wrote and the space some wrote:
And the work of head and hand
Is to t because they don't know, you know,
(And well we know them never can know)
They d) not understand.

A fool there was and his goods he spent
(Never as you and I)
His coin and work and his good intent
(But no body ever knew what he meant)
For a fool must follow his natural bent
(Never as you and I).

Oh the to't he lost and the spoil he lost
And the asinine schemes he planned,
But all in vain—fools never know why
(And well we know they'll never know why)
They do not understand.

The fool was stripped to his foolish hide
(Never as you and I)
From the business whirl he was cast aside
And nobody really cared if he died
To advertise wisely he vainly had tried.
(Never as you and I).

And it isn't the blame and it isn't the shame
That stings like a white-hot brand,
It's coming to know that none never know why
When in advertising they falter and die
(Never as you and I).

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use of liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up several times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. TIRES THAT LEAK.

strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, as in cut No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "leak like a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they puncture. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether other tires last as long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask, also, what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright free repair shops, located in the principal cities.

R.—When you have a puncture, get right off. Riding a tire flat, when it has a tack or nail in it, may damage it considerably.

SERMONETTE.

And the Lord took the man and put him into the garden of Eden to dress and to keep it.—GENESIS ii. 15.

The aim of this sermonette will be to illustrate what an honorable thing it is to have some useful occupation. Since the Lord put man to dressing and keeping the Edenic plantation the inference that labor is honorable and the most honorable of all kinds of occupation in God's opinion is filling and beautifying the earth.

The highest term of honor is that of king, and yet it is interesting to remember the word king—this term of highest honor—comes from a word that means both in Scotch and German "I can" and "I know." Hence the kingliest of men,—the most truly worthy of honor due to kings,—are those citizens who both know how to do and who can do.

How very far our humanity has differed from God's opinion may be seen in the fact that there is not a trade or profession, except that of the soldier, that has not been in some age or country, (as shepherds were in Egypt), "an abomination." In nations not imbued with christianity, but mere churchianity, war and conquest have usually been regarded the only paths to honor. The high-minded Spartans left it to their slaves to do the plowing, planting, and reaping. Kleon, the tanner, and Hyperbolus, the lamp-maker, were ridiculed by Aristophanes for presuming to take an interest in politics. Barbarous tribes of people, like the American Indians, usually left manual work to their women, while the "braves" would smoke, sleep, hunt, and fight thus deeming these the only pursuits worthy of men.

The Persians, at one time the rulers of the world, regarded the business of buying and selling a mean, low practice; as it was thought among them a thing impossible to be carried on without lying and cheating. Some business men in Pocahontas must agree with the Persians in this opinion, for a well-known merchant has it on his sign in large letters, "Don't Go any Further to Get Cheated." When Cyrus, the greatest of the Persians, had learned that the Lacedemonians kept a market he despised them. And when the Lydians raised a rebellion Cyrus was advised by Croesus to compel the Lydians to wear store clothes, practice music, and sell goods, so that they might be made too contemptible for anything, and thus get what they deserved for their meanness in rebelling.

Ulhorn, a famous historian, says that the Greeks and the Romans, who became the world's rulers after the Persians, despised all who worked for wages, except those occupied in medicine and commerce, war being still more honorable than these.

And, strange as it may seem to us, literary people have been slightly esteemed. In Rome there was an order of slaves who studied and wrote for their masters. These slaves were called librarii, and at that time by no means a term of honorable import. In times as modern as when Walter Scott was sending out his charming books he was obliged to conceal his business partnership in the printing house of Constable Bros., in order to keep his respectability and social position.

Something of this barbarism still lingers and keeps young people of talent and good education from trying to earn one cent by what they love their plots in the attorneys. Truly there is something out of tune, and that badly, in people's perceptions when they call that person a "working man" who uses a spade or heavy hammer, in distinction from him who uses a pen. What sense can there be in a think that he is a "working man" who uses his hands for his bread a day any more than he who uses his hands and mind, at once, for bread for his family? Labor is honorable and ennobling, and soothing to turn from such weakness of perception and from such man-made foolishness that has been going on throughout all historic time and pick up the Bible and learn what God thinks to be respectable. In this book we find God's original plan, and as long as the plan was carried out we find the perfect man, and see man in honor, man in bliss, man in his highest and best social position at work. "The Lord took the man and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it," as the text says. Well might one of the poets put this question:

When Adam delved and Eve span,
Who was then the gentleman?

If there is a book on earth that industrious people ought to be fond of reading it is the Bible. When we read it through we learn that God's greatest friends and servants came into his service from the busy walks of life, Abel, Joseph, Moses, David, and Amos were shepherds, leaving their flocks for thrones on earth or for their places in glory. Noah was a shipbuilder; Abraham and Jacob handled livestock; Isaac, Job, and Elisha were farmers; Peter, James, and John were fishermen; Mathew was a revenue officer; Luke a physician, and Christ a carpenter.

Among God's peculiar people, the Hebrews, wealthy and literary parents had their children to learn a trade instead of cherishing in their sons and daughters a contempt for honest labor. The parables of Jesus, who taught as never man taught, put high honor on honest labor. The Father is The Husbandman; the Son is the Shepherd, the Lord of the Vineyard, and the Advocate. Grand and glorious tho it be, the kingdom of heaven is likened to a housekeeper putting leaven in her fine flour; to a farmer sowing and reaping; to a fisherman culling fish; to a merchant seeking goodly pearls.

The whole Bible seems to be thus interwoven in the closest sympathies with active business life, and that too in a period of human history when in all other lands [illegible] spectable, but despised as the very [illegible] or sordid meanness.

Our housekeepers as they remember amid their cares the widow's cruse and who kept it from failing, and the miraculous supply at the Marriage feast of Cana of Galilee, may realize the sympathy of God in their work and cheer their labors with song and thoughts of Him who has taught us to pray "Give us this day our daily bread" and who has given the promise "God will provide."

What a blessed thing it would be for all of our people to become so impressed by the spirit and the power of the Bible as to get rid of that false and unbiblical sentiment that tends to make peculiarity of *employment, rather than excel*lence of achievement, the badge of honor; that asks where we work and not how as the test of social position. A distressing instance of this folly was in the suicide of a young man who left a note saying that he was made by God to be a man but doomed by man to be a grocer. Had that unhappy man been properly imbued with the Bible influence he would not have regarded it as a mark of prerogative of high position to have nothing to do.

Whenever the Bible has free course and generally believed and the great predominating masses of the people influenced by its ideas, then we shall have the best of tenants to thank God for a nation of working men. A nation where the professional man and the merchant as well as the day laborer "by something attempted, something done have earned a night's repose."

O, that we all could get rid of the idea that it is kingly to have nothing to do. Why it is only to the diligent in earthly and heavenly work is given the promise to stand before kings in this world, as Joseph, David, Daniel, Mordecai, and Paul. The faithful and diligent have the promise of standing before The King in the age that is coming as fast and as sure as "he that faithful over a few things and I will make thee ruler over many things."

It would seem from the fact that God would complement men by allowing him to give the faithful laborer to his good creative work. The artist was complimented as one more highly than observing how he got on the finishing touches to a picture. So let us not look upon useful work as disgraceful, and to entertain such an idea endangers our happiness in this life and the life that is coming.

Someone who has the right kind of views on the subject discussed in this sermonette very pertinently says: "When you can dig fields with toothpicks, blow ships along with fans, and grow bread in flower pots, then it will be a fine time for dandies. There is plenty to do in this world for every pair of hands placed upon it, and we must so work that the world will be the richer because of our having lived in it." SENEX.

FOR CONSCIENCE SAKE?

It is hard for Southern people to look upon the question of "free silver" as a political matter and not to be regarded too severely, to realize the intolerance with which it is regarded in the North. Shareholders, before the war, were not regarded as being so obnoxious by the abolitionists than do their descendants regard that reprehensible who takes a view that silver could be coined free at the ratio of 16 to 1. This is one of the great economic questions shared by a large proportion of the white people of the United States.

Last Thursday, the Board of Trustees of Brown University, in Rhode Island, met and by written resolutions offered to retain Dr. Andrews, the President of the University, if he would renounce his free silver heresy. They set forth that it had injured the university, and that he would either have to leave the university or keep his mouth shut. This being pretty much against the spirit of American independence and freedom, it is to be presumed that all of the poor President could do was to resign and join the ranks of the unemployed.

Dr Andrews is not the first martyr to the doctrine of free silver. It is distinctly not a Bryanite, for there may be such a thing as Bryanism, but we trust there are few Bryanites. We appreciate the fact that no[isy] statesman has absorbed the party in the eyes of the nation, but with him out of the way we have the clean-cut, well-defined economic principle of free silver, held in the minds of some of the greatest men since Bryan were unknown, and Dr Benjamin Andrews is one of them.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

The school book board met last week and adopted the books of the American Book Company, which have been subjected to so many bitter attacks by persons interested in education. The charges they prefer are not unfounded, but we would uphold the choice made by the county board in the present instance. There is no doubt but all the American Book Company produces the cheapest books. The worst enemies of this gigantic trust admit this. This appeals to the people very strongly and the fact of better bindings and more expensive literary work does not enhance to any great extent. The trust publishes the books already in the hands of the scholars in Pocahontas, and, as it would cost several thousand dollars to change books, it was held by the board fortunate that the lowest bid received was for the very books wanted. It might pay to change, if it would cost too much in cash. McGuffey's readers may be old, but the student is new, and not having received a hereditary knowledge, as part of what McGuffey's readers contain, the book is as much of a novelty to him as the last reader published. McGuffey's readers have done a world of good, and long may they continue.

No doubt many noted a long article in the Greenbrier Independent, last week, charging McGuffey, with heresy in his Fifth Reader, because he ascribed to Benjamin Franklin that credit which was after coming to George Washington or Thomas Jefferson. This is a serious charge against Professor McGuffey and the firm that prints his book. We would like to know further this awful denunciation was made by some disappointed rank agent. It sounds so much like that kind of mud slinging that no writer was given the credit by its readers.

The American Book Company and what we wanted, at the cheapest price, and that we failed to deal with a trust, there seemed to be nothing else to do, unless it would have been to change the books of the county for new works of a different kind and higher price.

Free school levy being so high this year, taxes in all the districts, except the Levels, will be as high, if not higher, than last year. The levy for State, School and County taxes will run from $1.11 to $1.50 in various districts.

Owing to the fact that the Circuit Court of October is held on the first Tuesday, the term of the County Court is changed from the first Tuesday in October to the fourth Tuesday in September; also the levy term from the second Tuesday in July to the fourth Tuesday in June.

AIRING HIS ILLS.

"Extract from Green Bank letter: 'Pocahontas County is at last in a state of bankruptcy,—not so much the county as the people,—a large per cent having been returned delinquent, many of them because they could not get to see the sheriff.'"

The above paragraph is printed in the Highland Recorder. It is all that seems to have been published of the letter. Tho the above passage is somewhat obscure, we take it that it is intended as a deadly blow at our late sheriff. We had a sheriff who did not make large delinquent lists, but cheerfully paid for it out of his own pocket, and lived to regret it.

There is only one way to prove sincerity on the part of him turned delinquent; and that is, to pay up now, for there is more rejoicing over a tax ticket collected this way than over the hundreds whose credit is good.

On the fourth page of this paper will be found an article by Hon W. T. Willey, of Monongalia county, which will be interesting to all West Virginians as it shows what arguments were used to bring about the formation of this State. The writer has never met a West Virginian who would willingly have seen West Virginia become a part of Virginia, and the regret of many of the people of the Valley is that the line is not on the Blue Ridge. Mr Willey was in the senate at the time. After the war he was for several terms clerk of the county court of Monongalia. His distinguished son, Professor W. P. Willey, of the law school of the University, is a democrat. In the cemetary at Morgantown are two small headstones erected by Senator Willey. One is over the grave of his wife, and the other bears his own name with the date of his death left blank. Mr Willey is very much loved and respected by those who know him best.

We will give as a reward Benjamin Moth's prize chromo "A Country Editor Eating Soup with a Splinter" to any one who will explain what is meant in this passage recently printed in the Greenbrier Independent:

"Dog days have arrived and as every day has his day, the editor of the Hinton Independent-Herald can have full scope until August 28."

Sawyers of the Independent-Herald thinks it is disparaging to him and he "doesn't do a thing" to the Greenbrier Independent in his last issue. We make the offer to clear up the dark mystery surrounding the sentence. We have been bothered by a good many questions as to its meaning.

PATENTS have been issued to West Virginians as follows: P. C. Barlow, of Buckhannon, churn-dasher; D. G. Booth and and C. E. Davison, Mount Clare, lock; H. H. Hunter, Berkely Springs, folding bicycle support; G. A. Kemper, Newburg, pruning shears; C. J. Michaelson, Charleston, rocking chair.

THE tariff bill passed the Senate last Saturday by a vote of 40 to 30 and being signed by the President is now an out-standing fact. Congress has adjourned until December. It remains to be seen whether or McKinley's Special Congress will accomplish as much bad as did Cleveland's.

THE West Virginia Congressmen are on the following committees: Dorr, railroad bills and public buildings and grounds; Dayton, mines and mining; Payne, naval affairs; Miller, judiciary and militia.

Marlinton, Friday, July 23, 1897.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

FOR CONSCIENCE SAKE!

It is hard for Southern people who look upon the question of "free silver" as a political matter and one not to be regarded too seriously, to realize the intolerance with which it is regarded in the North. Shareholders, before the war, were not regarded as being more obnoxious by the abolitionists than do their descendants regard that copperhead who takes the view that silver could be coined free at the ratio of 16 to 1. This view of the great economic question is shared by a large proportion of the white people of the United States.

Last Thursday, the Board of Trustees of Brown University, in Rhode Island, met and by written resolutions offered to retain Dr Andrews, the President of the University, if he would renounce his free silver heresy. They set forth that it had injured the university, and that he would either have to leave the university or keep his mouth shut. This being very much against the spirit of American independence and freedom, it is to be presumed that all the poor President could do was to resign and join the ranks of the unemployed.

Dr Andrews is not the first martyr to the doctrine of free silver. He is distinctly not a Bryanite. There may be such a thing as Bryanism, but we trust there are few Bryanites. We appreciate the fact that that noisy statesman has absorbed the party in the eyes of some, but with him out of the way we have the clean-cut, well-defined economic principle of free silver, as held in the minds of some of our greatest men since Bryan wore pinafores, and Dr Benjamin Andrews is one of them.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

The school book board met last week and adopted the books of the American Book Company, which has been subjected to so many bitter attacks by persons interested in education. The charges they prefer are not unfounded, but we would uphold the choice made by our county board in the present instance. There is no doubt but that the American Book Company produces the cheapest books. The worst enemies of this gigantic trust admit this. This appeals to our people very strongly and the talk of better bindings and more expensive literary work does not influence to any great extent. The trust publishes the books already in the hands of the scholars in Pocahontas, and, as it would cost several thousand dollars to change books, it was held by the be very fortunate that the lowest bid received was for the very books wanted. It might pay to change, but it would cost too much in ready cash. McGuffey's readers may be old, but the student is new, and not having received a hereditary knowledge of, yet, of what McGuffey's readers contain, the book is as much of a novelty to him as the last reader published. McGuffey's Readers have done a world of good, and long may they continue.

No doubt many noted a long article in the Greenbrier Independent last week, charging McGuffey with heresy in his Fifth Reader, because he ascribed to Benjamin Franklin that credit which was either coming to George Washington or Thomas Jefferson. This is serious charge against Professor McGuffey and the less that grants his book. We would like to know whether this awful denunciation was made by some disappointed book agent. It sounds so much like that kind of mad slinging that the writer was given the credit by his readers.

The American Book Company had what we wanted, of the cheapest price, and that we failed to deal with a trust, there seemed to be nothing else to do, unless it would have been to change the books of the county for new works of a different kind and higher price.

COUNTY COURT.

The levy term of the County Court ended last Saturday. The levy had was 40 cents on the $100 valuation. This is a decrease of 10 cents on the levy of last year, and of 40 cents on the highest "grand home levy." Owing to the free school levy being so high this year, taxes in all the districts, except the Levels, will be as high, if not higher, than last year. The levy for State, School and County taxes will run from $1.11 to $1.50 in various districts.

Owing to the fact that the Circuit Court of October is held on the first Tuesday, the term of the County Court is changed from the first Tuesday in October to the fourth Tuesday in September; also the levy term from the second Tuesday in July to the fourth Tuesday in June.

WANTED: A male teacher at the Upper School in the Levels. Apply to the trustees.

We are informed that the Marlinton end of the Marlinton and Durbin telephone line will be at once.

The Pocahontas County bonds its recent election on October 5, the result is uncertain, but Elkins certainly has a fighting chance.

The appearance of the meadows and pastures in the Elk region is phenomenal. The poverty grass, in is yielding a remunerative to, cutting a good swathe.

The appointment of Henry A. Acker, a colored man, as Collector of Internal Revenues for the district of Georgia has cast a good deal of gloom over that State. The aggressomen prayed for a white man, but the President was firm and appointed the negro.

Why should the C. & O. R. R. have promised to help build the telephone line from Hot Springs to Marlinton if they do not propose to complete the road from Hot Springs to this point? We are reliably informed that it only requires a little waiting on the requirements of red tape to have the subscription assured.

Nothing definite has been heard of George W. Roberts and Ervine Sandybschell, who broke jail last week. Jailer Siple has resigned, and there is a wild scramble for the place. It is said that Houdyschell was seen near Jack Hook's, and the Frost neighborhood from hence he came. Roberts lives in Pennsylvania. He is of good family.

The lumbermen from the wooly Williams River country were in town Saturday. We noticed Dick English, the Pennell brothers, Edmiston, Waitess, Trainer, Black and McDonald, the Desperado, and others. A Swago man got drunk as a biled owl, and started at for his ol and to round up the town. He was cured off to jail for a few hours.

Teachers and trustees should remember that it is an necessary under the new law to have the certificate of attendance of an Institute as to have the regular teacher's certificate. Superintendent Barlow says that he will see that the law is enforced as he does not think it right to discriminate in favor of those who stay away by giving them the same privileges accorded those who attend the Institute.

Last Friday about five o'clock in the evening, a big hail storm occurred at this point. The hailstones were about half as large as the end of a man's thumb and could have been picked up by the bushel *after the storm. The same after*noon Hinton was badly done up by a wind storm. It utterly demolished the new Episcopal church and other buildings doing damage to the amount of $60,000. There was no loss of life but many narrow escapes occurred.

A singular phenomenon is interesting the people of upper Elk. Last Saturday the water below Gilmore ceased to flow and upon examination it appeared that a gulf had opened into which the water poured with the noise and rush of falling water and disappeared into the depths of the earth. This seems to be something entirely new in the history of this stream, so far as can be remembered, and it is worthy of special attention as to what subsequent results may be.

Last week, James Cochran, of this county, an elderly man, started on his way to McClintic's camp on Williams River. He left Arbogast Stevenson after dinner and had nearly reached the camp when night overtook him. He lay down in the woods and slept the night, and on starting next morning got confused and took a road leading to Pocahontas. He walked the whole day, and was so weak from fatigue and hunger that he lay down perfectly exhausted. He was found near the Barlow Hacking and brought out nearer dead than alive.

A race between A. M. Oliver and W. McClintic was decided last week by E. A. Smith, L. M. McClintic, and H. S. Kacker, arbitrators. The race grew out of a contract for cutting logs by A. M. Oliver for W. McClintic, Stanley Company's lands on Williams River. The contract was that the timber on Leased Run, estimated at about 4,000,000 feet, at $3 per thousand, and the cutting of logs, to be finished when the timber was cut off. Oliver claimed that there was between 5,000 and 6,000,000 feet on the tract. The defense objected to the payment on the grounds that the work was not done in a workmanlike manner, owing to a shortage of logs and to the cutting of small logs and leaving many logs in the woods. The arbitrators met on the ground and made out lists of all logs cut by Oliver, and each party supplied to get the logs.

Married: By Rev. B. L. Parrott, at the Yeager hotel, Monday last, Mr Robert Griffin, of Travellers Repose, and Miss Mary Barnett, of Driftwood.

July 26, '97. Wm. Siple, Jailer.

Burke McCall, Rockingham, County, Virginia, an experienced horse trader, camped near Marlinton for a few days last week. In summer he travels with his family with a wall tent and two covered wagons, a cooking stove, a negro cook, a hostler or two, and about a dozen horses. They pitch their tent by some stream, and tie up the horses near the tent. The local traders accept the implied challenge and rush in to contend with him. McCall has helped many a young trader to cut his eye teeth.

This County owns a poor-farm as is required by the laws of the State. This farm is situated near Hillsboro, in the Levels, and was purchased for about $8000. It is the farm formerly owned by Grattan Miller and is a very valuable tract of land. At the present time there are three paupers on the place and this is about the usual number. The farm rents for $353. This rent is paid partly by keeping the three paupers and improvements. It would seem a very poor investment to own an expensive a farm as this to maintain three indigent people who could be kept without this large sum invested in land, but the County Court argues that in case we did not not have a poor house there would be drains on the public treasury from a hundred persons where there is one now. The rule seems to be, when a poor person applies to the overseer for help, for the overseer to offer him a pass to the poor house, and that word has such an effect on him that he will beg, borrow, steal or work before he will go there. They have a holy horror of being consigned to the poor-house. The poor farm lacks a dwelling house, and the court at a recent term laid a levy to build one.

Personal Mention.

L. M. McClintic is in Monterey taking depositions, this week.

W. B. Hill of Lobelia was in town Tuesday.

W. A. Bratton is in Marshall, Virginia.

Larry May has returned from Anthony's Creek and resumed his role of hotel hermit.

John A. Warwick has sold his farm at Linwood to R. Tuke and has gone back to Virginia.

Miss Allie Clunen is visiting her friends on Elk. For several years she has lived in Indiana, and expects to return in a short while.

Luther Sharp is spending the heated term at Addison in quest of health that has been impaired by too close attention to his diversified business affairs.

Miss Bertie Gibson, of Frost, spent several weeks with her friends on Elk, and has just returned home. Much sympathy is felt for this worthy young lady in her prolonged invalidism.

John Hamilton, Esq., of Atlanta, Georgia, is spending sometime with his Pocahontas relatives at Linwood and Knapp's Creek. He is a rising member of the Atlanta bar and has married in an influential family, and his prospects are encouraging.

It is General Gatewood now. A few days since Colonel A. C. L. Gatewood, of Linwood, received by express his commission as Adjutant General of the West Virginia Division of Confederate Veterans with the rank of Brigadier General. It is duly signed by General J. B. Gordon, and is issued from New Orleans.

Mrs Isabella Varner, the aged widow of the late John Varner, Esq., of Split Rock, still lives on the well - farmed old homestead that she and her husband reclaimed from the dense and rugged forest that is such a feature of the Elk region. She is eighty-two years of age and possesses striking energy and will not keep from work. Only a year in spite of all persuasion to the contrary, she worked in her garden, and as her cancer was too much inspirited to see the woods, in a standing posture, she worked on her knees. This year she cannot do so much, but she tends her garden and gathers vegetables from garden plants, even on her knees. She has recently given up her loved duties in the garden, and exercises her energy and other useful traits about the dwelling. She is the daughter of Hugh Beard, one of the pioneers of Elk and a soldier of the war of 1812. He settled on the place where William Gibson, Esq., now lives.

The Case from Frost.

Instead of printing a communication received, we will say that the case preferred against Mrs H. J. Williams and Mrs De Gruin was an unwarranted affair, and that the evidence before the justice exonerated them completely. One justice, Mr W. H. Grose, had thought it best to refuse the warrant, and circumstances afterwards proved him right. The warrant issued by Justice Bird was willingly answered by both ladies and no arrest was necessary. It was simply a case of perfectly respectable persons charged with an offense of which they were innocent, and to which any person may be liable. Anyone who knows the ladies or anything about the case knows the foregoing to be so, and it is unnecessary to say more about it.

As to the prosecution, this paper has nothing to do with it, and we refuse to discuss that side of the case.

The School Book Board.

In pursuance of a call by the County Superintendent, the school book board of Pocahontas County met in the court-house at Marlinton on Thursday, July 22. Those present were: S. B. Hannah, P. D. Arbogast, Green Bank District; H. S. Rucker, George E. Moore, Huntersville; Isaac McNeel, C. B. Grimes, Levels; George P. Moore, M. G. Mathews, D. L. Barlow, Edray. Mr Moore, of Edray, was elected chairman, by acclamation.

The Board fixed the retail price at which books adopted shall be sold at twenty per cent. advance on the net contract price; and in adding the per cent. the custom of disregarding the mills if they are less than five, and to call them one cent if they are more than five, shall be followed.

The following text-books, with prices of same, were adopted by the Board:

A. F. Carpenter is off to Staunton for goods for R. L. Nottingham.

J. P. Woodell, Sidone Davis, James Wanless, Sid, and Auctioneer Sweeker are all off this week to Pocahontas County.

Professor Emery and Mr James Smith took in the entertainment, as did also Mr and Mrs George Wagoner and C. E. Steinmeyer, of Huntersville.

Reed Chesterfield and Stonewall had business in Marlinton last week.

The people are not much excited over the railroad survey. It might mean something else.

J. D. McElwee was kicked in the head by a horse but not seriously hurt.

Colonel E. C. Ferguson, well-known in this county, died at Horton, last week, where he had been working at the lumber camp. He came to this county about eighteen years ago with Captain Smith. He was the best harness maker in the country, and a good harness man. He was about sixty years old.

Howard Bailey, son of A. J. Bailey, died at his home, on Sunday night, of typhoid fever, aged 18 years. Jake.

Rev. A. M. Fraser will preach in New Hope Church August 1st at 10:30 a. m. and Rev. M. A. Auvil will preach at 4 P. M. (third Sunday.)

Green Bank.

We are having some very fine growing weather, and everything is growing nicely, but it is difficult to get the wheat stacked and the corn worked; haymaking is in order, but wet weather makes many days in the straw.

Otho Gum, the photographer, is at Dunmore and will be at this place next week.

Tom Beverage and Allen E. Burner were visitors at Green Bank.

The base ball arrangement is suffering from a relapse of some kind which threatens its total destruction.

George C. Cooper, of Addison, is painting in this neighborhood.

Our town has several severe cases of whoopingcough, and the neighborhood is not very healthy.

W. H. Wigler, of Millboro Springs, was in this district delivering enlarged pictures, last week. His patrons seem to be well pleased with his work.

C. P. Kerr is running our mail *route to the satisfaction of every*body.

Lobelia.

Raining every day. There was a bad storm here on Friday. Hailstones as large as a big marble—some 3 x 2 inches square. The wind did much damage to corn in this and Greenbrier County. We learn from Mr Peter Hill, of Jacox, the hail skinned some of the cattle in Greenbrier County.

L. C. McMillion is on the sick list, and many others in this section.

The Missionary Baptists will build a church at Lobelia, (near the creek).

Samuel McCarty, Jr., is off to see his betsy.

H. L. Cassbolt will go to Nicholas County soon to buy cattle.

We would be glad if the two counties would open the New Mountain road, and we could then export some of our grain to Nicholas, where we could get good pay for it.

Your correspondent saw 27 wild turkeys in one flock in a wheatfield yesterday. Some bear sign in the mountains.

Jacob Shue has gotten a job at Donahue's camp on William's River at $1.50 per day. Shoeing horses and carrying lunch are the duties required.

We feel that prosperity is almost in sight. Good calves are bringing from twelve to sixteen dollars down here; and every other man you meet is a buyer.

Somebody said: "Let us go out and kill—something to eat!"

Reunion Notes.

Moffett Poage Camp No. 949 U. C. V.s. is called to meet at the court-house in Marlinton on Saturday, August 14, 1897, at 1 P. M. to take such action as may seem best in regard to the reunion of Confederate survivors to be held about September 1. All committees heretofore appointed by this camp are requested to make their report for the action of the Camp at said meeting. All members of the organization are earnestly requested to be present on that day. Members of other camps are invit*ed to be present and co-operate* with us.

Hon C. B. Bush, president of the Gilmer County (W. Va.) Court, says that he has had three cases of flux in his family, during the past summer, and he could not afford to be a week with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Mr Bush also states, that in some instances there were twenty hemorrhages a day.—Glenville, W. Va., Pathfinder. This remedy has been used in nine epidemics of flux and one of cholera, with perfect success. It can always be depended upon for bowel complaint, even in its most severe forms. Every family should keep it on hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by Ricketts & Co., Marlinton; Amos Barlow, Huntersville; Barlow & Moore, Edray; and E. H. Moore & Co., Academy.

DON'T MURDER YOUR BEES!

It is a very poor return for the work of a hive of bees to kill them, to get one season's crop of honey.

Use the Ware Hive.

Get acquainted with your bees. Help them to fight the worm but destroy them, and they will reward you with the best of honey in marketable frames,—and you can set your honey and have a clear conscience.

Gold in Alaska.

The gold fields of Alaska are drawing thousands of people from all parts of the United States, and it seems that California in its palmiest days could not be compared to the Klondike fields for richness. The gold is in British territory, on a branch of the Yukon River. The workings so far have been in the gravel beds of the mountain streams. It is only possible to work some of the mines in the winter time. In the summer the gravel is too loose to form a wall. When it freezes, large fires are built on the surface and as it thaws the ground, the miner digs a shaft until he reaches the gold bearing sand at the bottom. This is of unparelle l richness. Large nuggets are found, and the sand when washed out leaves large quantities of gold dust. One gainful netted the owner $700. A lady went out to her husband's claim, washed out a panful of sand and secured $154 worth of pure gold. At this time of year they have no night. The sun sets at 10 P. M. and rises at 3 P. M., but it does not get dark even at midnight. Large towns have sprung up. The people live mostly under canvas. Lumber is worth $150 per thousand. Beef 75 cents per pound, and bacon fifty cents. To get a shirt washed costs $1. Saloons and gambling houses are in full force. Miners are paid $15 per day.

The New Tariff Bill.

The extraordinary session of Congress called by President Mac-Kinley two days after he took his oath of office, met on March 15. Three days after the session opened the Tariff Bill was reported to the house and 13 days later, March 31, 1897, it passed the House. It went to the Senate, was referred to the Committee of Finance, the Republican members of that committee spent a month and three days in its consideration, and in prepar*ing amendments which were sub*mitted to the Senate, May 1. Exactly two months later, July 7, it passed the Senate with 872 amendments.

The Bill then went to conference where, after ten days struggle, a complete agreement was reached, by which the Senate receded from 118 amendments and the House from 511. The others, 243 in number, were compromised and a conference report was adopted by the House, July 19, at the conclusion of twelve hours continuous debate. *The report was tak*en up in the Senate July 20, adopted July 24 and signed by the President the day.

The C. & O. has agreed to assist in the erection of a telephone from the Hot Springs to Marlinton, and it is likely that this will be the first telephone to be built. The proposed line to Renovo seems to be abandoned. It would seem that it would be greatly to the St. Lawrence Co.'s benefit to have the latter line built, but, so far, they have failed to respond.

July 18, 1896, our store, four dwelling houses and three barns were washed away by a flood. Soon after the community was visited by an epidemic of bloody flux. In a short time we sold ten dozen of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and in every case where it was used the results were all that could be desired; in fact our physicians admitted that it would do more toward bringing about a cure of flux than they could do."—Bush & Bentley, Auburn, W. Va., Oct. 5, 1896. For sale by Ricketts & Co., Marlinton; Amos Barlow; Huntersville, Barlow & Moore, Edray; and E. H. Moore & Co., Academy.

Poor Blood

is starved blood. It shows itself in pale cheeks, white lips, weak digestion, no appetite, exhaustion, lack of nerve force, soft muscles, and, chief of all, weak muscles. Your doctor calls it Anæmia. He will tell you that the weakening weather of summer often brings it on.

THE INSTITUTE.

During the coming week, the teachers of Pocahontas county will be among us, and their presence is hailed with more than ordinary pleasure and interest.

Impressions will be made and influences will be set in motion that will be as far reaching as the immortal in humanity has consciousness and power of action. The timely suggestion of the superintendent of schools has no doubt been considered and all truly worthy teachers have been enthused and will endeavor to make this one of the best institutes ever convened. Blessed as these teachers are with applying minds, studious habits, and retentive memories, they have much to encourage them to make the best of their opportunities, and go forth to meet their pupils prepared by precept and example to show them how to live and what to do to make their lives worth living.

These teachers have the good, yet responsible, fortune to be living and working in the closing years of the most remarkable centuries of the world's history. It is no time to be droning or dreaming that life is a mere pastime or for sensual enjoyment, but to be intelligently awake, up and doing the duties in hand, with hearts for any fate

"Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

During the next week our town will be given up to be run, not by the new woman, but by as pretty a bevy of ladies, who if not new are not old, as ever bloomed on the hills or in the vales of any county in West Virginia, and visiting young men to correspond.

The institute then is soon to be here, and the welcome presence of the teachers and instructors will enliven our streets and homes.

We would suggest that congenial friends pair off and discuss the merits of the English and American methods of spelling somewhat after this fashion:

LADY.—I am rather in favor of of the English than the American mode of spelling."

GENTLEMAN.—"Yes?" Thus interrogatively expressing his surprise that such should be the case.

LADY.—"Yes indeed! Take parlor for instance; having 'u' in it makes all the difference in the world." S. C. E.

THE Princess Dowager of China seems to be in a very unhappy state of mind. It appears that Prince Tsai did not congratulate her on her recent birth day, and refused to worship at the shrine of his ancestors. She has sentenced him to a dungeon for life. He is deprived of his royal title, publicly punished on the bare back with bamboos until he pleads for mercy and shut up and fed on spare diet until he manifests regret for his conduct. This stern old lady is the Queen Victoria of the Chinese. The first lady of the Flowery Kingdom.

THE Chinese Government, after so long a time, seems to have caught the prevailing military epidemic, and is about to reorganize the army on German military principles, and orders for rifles have been placed with German manufacturers. A new fleet will be fitted out as soon as possible. English parties get the contract for new vessels, and Germans the other half. The Armstrongs have been spoken to for the guns needed for the new fleet.

"WANT to ride a bicycle, do you?" snapped the old man. Your mother never went whizzing about on a wheel."

"Yes," retorted the dutiful daughter, "that is just what my mother said. She says that maybe if she had she would have caught a better looking man."—Indianapolis Journal.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

One of the most substantial and prosperous citizens of our county in its formative period was the late William Sharp, Esq., near Verdant Valley. He was a son of William Sharp, senior, who settled near Huntersville, and whose dwelling was near where the new road around the mountain leaves the old Green Bank road. Traces of it yet remain near the roadside, and may be easily noticed by persons passing that way. He had scarcely attained his majority when he and Elizabeth Waddell were married at Alexander Waddell's. This worthy couple at once settled in the woods and opened up a fine estate out of a forest noted for the tremendous size of its walnut, redoak, and sugar maple trees, and reared a worthy family.

In reference to their sons and daughters the following particulars have been mainly learned from his daughter, Mrs Martha Dilley, near Dilley's Mill.

James Sharp, the eldest son, married Athelia Martin and lived on Brown's Creek, on the farm now owned by Amos Barlow, Esq. His son William died at home. Hanson died in Camp Chase, O. George died a prisoner of war. His daughter Elizabeth married Thomas Logan, in Randolph; and Sarah has her home with her sister, Mrs Logan.

William Sharp, junior, married Rachel Dilley, daughter of the late Martin Dilley, of "The Hills," and settled on lower Elk near Littwood (Big Spring.) His sons Harmon, Silas, and Hugh are well-known citizens. Bernard fell mortally wounded at Duncan's Lane. Henry was wounded near William Gibson's, on Elk, and died of his wounds. Luther was shot near his father's home by a scouting party. All three of these sons were Union soldiers. Mary Ella, the only daughter, died at the age of six years.

Alexander Sharp, son of William Sharp the settler, married Mary Dilley, sister of Rachel just mentioned, and settled on a section of the old homestead. His only child is Mrs Hannah Johnson, and lives at her father's.

Jacob Warwick Sharp, son of the Verdant Valley pioneer, married Elizabeth McNeel, daughter of the late Isaac McNeel, of the Levels, and lived on the old homestead. In reference to his family the following particulars are given.

William married Julia Moore, daughter of Isaac Moore, Esq, and and lives at Edray. His daughter is Mrs James W. Price, M. D.

Paul married Eveline Moore, Julia's sister, and lives on the Greenbrier River at the Bridger Place. Isaac married Miami, eldest daughter of Taylor Moore, and lives near Edray. Giles married Katie Cochran, daughter of the late Captain William Cochran, of Stony Creek, and lives on the homestead. Jacob, junior, died in childhood. Elizabeth married J. R. Poage, and Catherine married Quincy W. Poage, his first wife. These are sons of the late Colonel Woods Poage, and reside at Poage's Lane. Ann is Mrs S. B. Moore, near Edray. Francis married A. Neal Barlow, and lives on a section of the old homestead. Magdalen died in childhood. Jacob W. Sharp died but recently, much lamented by a very large circle of friends and relatives.

John Sharp, son of William the settler, married Sally Johnson, daughter of the late William Johnson, on the Greenbrier, and lives near Marlinton. His sons are Henry, Hugh, Ewing, James, and David. Mary is Mrs Frank Dilley; Nancy is Mrs Ervine Wilfong; Martha is Mrs James Wilfong; Susan is Mrs Amzi Ervine.

Elizabeth Sharp, daughter of the venerated settler, married Hugh McLaughlin, near Hunterville, and is yet living over 95 years of age. (1897.)

Jane Sharp, another daughter, married James Hanson and settled in Gallia County, Ohio. Her children were William, John, Lydia, Elizabeth, and Catherine.

Mary Sharp, daughter of William the ancestor, married David Gibson, Esq., and settled on Elk, where Robert Gibson now lives. Her children are mentioned in the Gibson sketches.

Rebecca Sharp, another daughter of the ancestor, William Sharp, married William Moore, son of the late Aaron Moore, on Greenbrier River, and settled on the Crooked Branch of Elk, on the place now owned by her son, Jacob S. Moore. Her children were Mary Jane who married John McLaughlin, son of Major Daniel McLaughlin, and settled beyond Green Bank. Elizabeth married Joseph C. Gay, and lives on Elk Mountain near the old home. Mr Gay was a noted Confederate scout, and is a prosperous citizen. Matthias Moore married Jennie Mays, and lives in Botetourt County, Virginia. C. L. Moore married Mary Martha, the only daughter of Lieut. James McLaughlin, who died of wounds at Winchester during the war. Jacob Sharp Moore married Harriet Gay, daughter of the late John Gay, Esq., near Marlinton, and lives on the homestead. Nancy Moore married Jonas Simmons, and lived at Mingo, Randolph County.

Anna Sharp, daughter of William the settler, married Alexander Stalnaker, and settled in Randolph County. Her daughter, Mary Stalnaker, married Bryson Hamilton, of that county.

Ellen Sharp married Warwick Stalnaker, of Randolph County. Her daughter Lizzie became Mrs Dr David Gibson, of the same vicinity.

Nancy Sharp, another member of the settler's family married Jacob Cassell, from Back Alleghany, and went to Illinois, and are living at Woodstock, Illinois.

Martha Sharp, youngest daughter of the pioneer, married Andrew Dilley and settled on Thorny Creek. There were three children, two sons and a daughter. Hanson Dilley married Caroline Stalanker, of Randolph County, and lives at Dilley's Mill. Amos Dilley married Miata Dilley, daughter of Ralph Dilley, near Dilley's Mill, and located on Thorny Creek.

The daughter Elizabeth Frances died at the age of two years. Mrs Dilley now lives at the old Dilley homestead. Her husband died a year or so since, a very estimable citizen.

Thus far the writer has been able to furnish some historical items that illustrate the family history of two very estimable persons. These people were the intimate friends and neighbors of Jacob Warwick and his wife Mary Vance. Mrs Warwick cherished feelings of special friendship for Mrs Elizabeth Sharp. Mrs Sharp did all she could to encourage Mrs Warwick in her efforts to conduct a Sabbath school near where the Friel cabin stood. Mrs Warwick, tho so weak, as to require the servants to lift her on her horse and help her off, would leave her home at Clover Lick at an early hour, meet her Sunday-school, spend several hours reading the Bible and giving good advice. Then she was lifted on her faithful horse to go home with Mrs Sharp, take dinner and a good rest, and then about the cool of the evening wend her way back along the narrow, steep, and rugged road. The aged Mrs McLaughlin says that some of the best advice she ever had was at this Sunday-school, carried on by Mrs Warwick and her own mother, Mrs Sharp.

Mr Sharp lived to a very advanced age, having survived his wife many years. He lived to see his children married and settled. His appearance was venerable, and nature had done very much for him in the way of natural endowments of mind and vigor of body.

He first saw the young person that he married at Thomas Drennan's, near Edray, where she spent a week or two spinning flax. While she was there a providence happening to come along, (believed to have been Bishop Asbury), Mr Drennan drummed up a congregation, and among those present was a young and handsome youth with a new constable rap that he seemed to set a great deal of store by. Miss Waddell seemed to think it was very funny, and when she went home had a good deal to say about the ugly, funny-looking young man she had seen at the meeting. The mother remonstrated and said: "O Betsy, don't talk so; that young chap will be to see you, first thing you know."

Sure enough he did slip in, and found Betsy not exactly "rotted and ready" either. She had just finished and hung out "a wash," and by way of a restful change was performing on her spinning-wheel, in short petticoat, chemise, and barefooted. Having shown him a chair she resumed her performance at the wheel, and as he meant business and time was precious, matters were pretty well arranged by midnight.

These young people thus being all the world to each other and not afraid to work their cabin home was an earthly paradise. A fine estate was opened up, a worthy family was reared, and the way prepared for many worthy families to have a local habitation and a name in a goodly land. The influence of these good people was in the interest of untiring industry, honest dealing, generous hospitality, and patriotic citizenship.

Don't Go to Alaska.

"Don't go to Alaska" is the advice of S. S. Lebock. He is interested in mining ventures in the Black Hills, Colorado, and Mexico, and has prospected for gold in California, South Dakota, Colorado and Mexico, and South Africa, and is among the most experienced miners in the country.

"Whats all the world to a man when his wife's a widdy? He may bring back a meel sackful of dust from the diggings, but if he has to travel in a pine box himself, what good can it do him? I took a scoot up the Yukon two years ago, and, tho too old for hard work myself, talked with many miners, inspected a number of claims, and formed my own opinion of the country. I wouldn't stay if the ground were covered with nuggets the size of brickbats.

"I suppose that I have conversed with at least 50 graduates from the Alaskan mines—among them several of whom had done well. Not one but swore he wouldn't go back if he knew he could treble his gains. And they tried it when it was comparatively easy. Supplies were high, but they were to be had by any one who could pay for them. In this new El Dorado they are frequently not to be had at all—for love or money. A man who is snowed in without provisions in a lonely gulch can starve with millions in his possession.

"If the prospector does not starve he freezes. If he does not freeze the musquitos eat him alive in the summer. Most people think they can stand musquito bites for a fortune but they have never seen the Alaska article. They literally drive their victims insane. There are plenty of well authenticated cases on record. If he does survive the awful rigors of the climate, the pangs of hunger, and the bites of ravenous insects, he returns home broken in health, to spend all he has made on doctors and nurses.

"And, maybe he does not make a cent. One would suppose to read the stories now in circulation that every man is sure of a fortune. That is all bosh. They told the same stories of California in '49. Every man who returned corroborated the wildest accounts. He admitted gold prospecting had always been gambling in the past, but asserted that nuggets were so thick in California that they could not be missed. Mining is a lottery everywhere, in Alaska as well as in California, Mexico, Australia or Africa. For every man who makes his pile a thousand go broke and a hundred lose their lives.

"Many people have asked my advice on Alaskan mining, and I have invariably counseled them to stay at home. If they must prospect they had better try Colorado or the Black Hills. Money is being made in both places. The winnings are not so large but the vacation does not stake his life on the cast.

AMONG ALL ROUND.—"Isn't it absurd what ideas people in small towns have of large cities?"

"Yes; there's just one thing more absurd."

"What is that?"

"Is that Stonewall Jackson?"

The New York Sun prints an account of some concerts given at the Windsor Hotel by the Stonewall Jackson Band of Staunton, Virginia, while it was in New York participating in the Grant Day ceremonies. In connection with one of them, a strange and amusing occurrence is reported:

The first concert was held on Monday evening, when President McKinley arrived. It was a big success, and afterwards the members of the band crowded around General Gordon and shook hands with him. A well dressed man with a sandy mustache sidled up to one of the spectators, and pointing to General Gordon, said:

"Is that Stonewall Jackson?"

The spectater turned toward the questioner with a quizzical look, but, noticing that the man was apparently in earnest, said with a smile:

"No. I am trying to find out who he is."

Congressman Tate, who was talking with General Gordon, left him for moment, and was buttonholed immediately by the sandy mustached man.

"Excuse me, sir, was that gentleman Stonewall Jackson that you were talking to?"

The Congressman glared at the sandy mustached man, apparently undecided whether he was the subject of a Northern affront or not.

"No, sir; it was not," said the Congressman.

"Well, when will he arrive?" queried the sandy-mustached man.

The guileless expression of the questioner caused the Congressman to smile as he said:

"My dear sir, a short course of United States history would do you a world of good."

The Congressman then walked off. The sandy-mustached man was last seen receiving an explanation from the hotel clerk.

The Court Came Back.

Judge Randolph, of the Kansas District Court, was one of the frontier judicial officers who believed in upholding the dignity of the bench, and as well tenacious of his own personal honor.

A divorce suit, in which a gray-haired veteran of the late war was plaintiff, came up before him while he was on a circuit out in a prairie county. The rude court-room was filled with spectators, and the old man seemed unwilling to go on the stand in his own defense.

"I am not going to grant divorces without good reasons," announced the Court; and the plaintiff went to the chair that served as a witness box.

"Now," said the attorney, "tell us just what your wife did to make you leave her."

The witness looked appealingly at the judge.

"Answer the question," was the order.

"Well, she called me names."

"That is not grounds enough for a divorce," said the Court, sternly.

"And she neglected me."

"Is that all?"

"And she said I was a coward and a sneak, because I would be the was and came back alive. She said all the brave and worthy men died in battle, and only cowards and loafers came home and——"

"That will do, sir," the Judge pressed for in many petitions is granted," broke in the judge. "I want you to understand, sir, that this Court went to the war, and spent four years there; and the Court came back, too."—Greenhorn Independent.

THE SOLAR ECLIPSE.

Thursday, July 29, the earth suffered an eclipse, and the effect was observed with interest in this town. A great number of smoked glasses were made, and the natives looked at the sun and made remarks about his royal highness. One reckoned the eclipse to be like an "underslit out of the left ear," a term used in marking sheep. Another said it was more like a piece bit out of a ginger cake.

Great was the difference of these latter day scoffers from what their conduct would have been had they lived in ancient times. The man who had said such a thing in the days of the Roman empire would have been carried away and crucified. The people then joined in prayer and lamentations to help the sun or the moon out of the great trouble. To the ancients, also, they were out of the order of nature and presaged dire events. To ascribe them to natural causes was blasphemy punished by law. When the moon was eclipsed, the Romans (who made the moon feminine) supposed that Luna was in the pains of labour, and all the people turned out with brazen instruments, making a great noise, and in fact causing Rome to howl, thereby thinking that they gave her ease in her great affliction. The Chinese still think that an eclipse is caused by dragons and other things trying to eat the sun or the moon, and they turn out with drums and brass kettles to scare the monsters away. With us we confine these solemn ceremonies to hiving bees.

The prediction of an eclipse of the moon was made by the ancients long before they ascribed the cause to natural events. They noticed that after 223 moons, or 18 years and 11 days, the moon was in the same part of the heavens, nearly, and that an eclipse might be expected. When the moon suffers an eclipse it appears the same to all who can see the moon at the time, and occurs when the moon is at the full. In the case of solar eclipses the Chaldeans and other ancient hoodoo people were not able to predict so accurately, for the reason that the the period of eighteen years and eleven days was the same, yet the eclipse was not visible alike from all parts of the world, and as they did not know of the western hemisphere the mound-builders of America often witnessed an eclipse that was billed to appear in Chaldea.

The eclipse of last Thursday is the last solar eclipse that will be visible in West Virginia for three years, when we will be treated to a total eclipse of the sun,—the most terrifying phenomenon of nature. The darkness comes almost instantly and the stars and planets are *visible at midday. The strange*ness of the light is the most terrible part of it; it is not like any gloom of night or twilight which we have ever known. The sun has around it a corona of light that fills the eclipsed portion of the earth's surface. One writer describes the total eclipse of July, 1860, in Spain: "When the sun was reduced to a small crescent, the shadows of all objects were depicted with great sharpness and blackness, reminding one of the effects of illumination with electric light. The sky at this period assumed an indigo tint, and the landscape was tinged with a brassy hue."

THE LYNCHING QUESTION.

A great many people of both colors believe that lynching for the ameanest crime is justifiable, or at least a necessary evil. The Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, of Montgomery, Alabama, the largest colored congregation in the South, split because the pastor preached that the better class of negroes held that negroes who assaulted white women should be summarily dealt with by men after the manner an outlaw, a wild beast, or a mad dog is put out of the way.

The row culminated in Deacon Patterson, editor, being shot and killed by Deacon Pritchett, while nothing is presented amiss on the pastor in the pulpit of the church last Sunday.

Virginia threatens to take away their free schools, and the negro ministers are starting a crusade to prevent the recurrence of the crime for which negroes are lynched in that State.

The utterances of Northern papers, which cannot or will not see that people who commit the crime of lynching have been terribly provoked and have much to fear, are intolerant, and draw forth spirited replies, which read in cold blood seem to set law and order aside. The North should realize the fact that when the negro was freed the country at large is responsible, to a certain extent for the awful degeneration that was certain to follow in a large proportion of a race that had never been taught self-government. Let the North preach one-half against the evil which causes a negro to assault a white woman as it does against "lynch law," and let the intelligent colored population do the same, and the crime will be lessened by attacking the disease in the first stage rather than in the second.

Lynch law does not seem to be modern. In the 23d chapter of Acts we read of more than forty Jews who banded together under a curse that they would neither eat nor drink until they had killed Paul. Paul's nephew got wind of the matter and told Paul, and Paul had him taken before the Circuit Judge; and, acting privately, the sheriff took a strong guard of 270 men at the night and took him to an adjoining county, where he was taken before the governor of the State. The reader will observe that the number forty is about the ordinary sized mob, but their binding themselves not to drink is unusual. Also the Jews of those days were very different from their descendents.

RAILROAD NEWS.

The air is thick with rumors of railroads. The Greenbrier Valley, in which we live, is one of the richest and most extensive basins of the State. The river is 170 miles long, 130 miles of which is without a railroad. There is an average width of at least fifty miles, in an air line, between any railroad stations. On every side we hear news of early building of railroads in the Greenbrier Valley, from apparently different sources, but nothing definite. The Bath News says that railroad men about the Hot Springs, where magnates congregate, say that there are strong indications of a railroad being built this season from the White Sulphur to Marlinton.

The Charleston Gazette prints the following:

It is reported that the C. & O. will at once begin the construction of a railway up Greenbrier, and that trains will be running to the Forks of Greenbrier before the close of the present year. In that event the West Virginia Central will probably build a road south to a connexion with the C. & O. at that point.

If the report is correct concerning the likelihood of the road from Charleston to Sutton being pur*chased by the C. & O., then it* would seem that the New River Valley would be avoided by a roundabout way from White Sulphur Springs by way of Marlinton to Charleston.

From the above it would seem that we are on the eve of railroad development in this county, and we trust this news may prove true, but we must not be too sanguine. From reliable information in our possession it would seem that this plan for extension was not originated with any railroad company, but the whole scheme originated with private landholders, and is dependent upon a land deal whereby enough land must be hypothecated to guarantee the funds. The enterprise seems to have been encouraged by the C. & O. people, but if there is failure at any point then all this railroad talk will go up in smoke, as have the various attempts made in the last few years to get a road in our county.

THE WEST VIRGINIA MINERS.

It is not often that one finds a case more clearly understood and more fairly expressed than is what is written by a correspondent of the New York World about the West Virginia miners. By operating in the black coal veins of West Virginia for low tonn miners do in Ohio and Pennsylvania they can take their employers to meet higher freight rates and secure steady contracts, and thus have steady employment. Therefore, like Uncle Sam's men in Pennsylvania, they are satisfied with low wages, and get together work, and are thus in friendly touch with their employers. With West Virginians, especially in the Fairmont region, it is "Howdy Tom, lend me a five until pay day," and Tom the operator lends it without turning a word. Moreover, the miner who owns a home near the mine is in a sense tied to the soil. Thick veins to dig in and a home of his own far from towns make it hard for the West Virginia miner to risk what is in hand for a sentiment. West Virginians feel sore too over their desertion some years since.

Under existing arrangements they have made more money than any others, and are to-day receiving "big money." In a few words the West Virginia miners are comparatively too prosperous to risk all in sympathy for others, and that too with a very remote prospect of any real benefit to themselves in the outcome. There are natural causes at work that prevent any permanent settlement of the pending questions by the means now proposed as all will find sooner or later. What is needed is a flexibly wise adaptation of unchanging principles of right to the changing circumstances that confront operators and operatives in their mutual relations.

A CASE of tremendous importance is pending in the Supreme Court in regard to building and loan associations. The courts of Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, Alabama, and Texas have held that for a building and loan association to charge more than six per cent. was usury, and it is expected that our Supreme Court will hold that the statute enabling such associations to charge more is unconstitutional. In this case a deathblow will be struck at all building and loan associations, and hundreds of our citizens hold stock in them. But as millions of money is invested in the State by foreign associations—which draw 15 to 20 per cent. annually, it will be of greater benefit, on the whole, to the citizens of the State.

A SERIOUS revolt has appeared among the tribesmen in India against their British masters. At Camp Malokand there has been a series of desperate assaults last Wednesday and Thursday, lasting most of two nights. Thirteen of the British soldiers were killed and thirty wounded, one of the wounded being the gallant Lieutenant Castello. The tribesmen lost one hundred. The ammunition is about out, and it is feared the supply may give out before help arrives. It is believed forty thous*and of the tribesmen have joined* Mad Mullah, the rebel leader, and if it be true, the enemy is collecting in large force; and ammunition scarce, it threatens to go hard with the English troops. At all events very severe fighting may be expected.

IT appears from late authentic advices that the Spanish government in Cuba is in deplorable financial distress. Since January last forty millions due the army and eighteen millions due the navy. Money being lacking also for provisions and clothing, food is taken by force in the country towns; but clothes and shoes are more difficult to get hold of, as money is required for such supplies. Hence it is the soldiers present a pitiful appearance and look more like an army of Weary Willies commanded by official Dusty Rhodes than the military representatives of a proud European nation. "Pride goes before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall."

AT Mt. Gretna, Pennsylvania, there occurred last Thursday morning the first collision between the law and the striking miners. Jim McManus, Tom Hayes, Ted and Andrew Savage were arrested and taken to Washington City, charged with trespass on the Allison property, in contempt of an injunction granted by Judge McElvane. The complaint is they loitered along the path leading to the mine and shouted the men going to work with such epithets as "black sheep," "scab" and singing "We'll hang black sheep to a sour apple tree" to the tune of "John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave." They were put under bail to answer the charge on Monday.

An exactly similar case was in the federal court of Kentucky and the Judge there held exactly as held above. Both cases go to the higher courts.

The Lewisburg Fire.

News comes of a disastrous fire which has befallen Lewisburg. On Friday night a frame building was burned, but further progress of the flames promptly checked, tho the adjoining house occupied by B. F. Harlow was saved with difficulty.

Tuesday morning fire again appeared, and the flames became uncontrollable and the business part of the town suffered grievously, as the following particulars indicate as to the buildings burned.

Stratton's Hotel, both Banks, several law offices; the stores of Messrs Rittenhouse, Henry Bell, D. R. Thomas, Col. Ford, Green & Brady, Moore's drugstore, and Farr's saddlery shop.

These fires were probably of incendiary origin. For some unaccountable reason no mail came from Lewisburg on Tuesday. So far as learned the property of Mr S. W. Holt, of Marlinton, in the neighborhood of the burnt district, is safe.

Fish Stories.

A very good bass story was related on the streets the other day. On one occasion a large bumble bee was cast into a pool near the bank of the river and was immediately swallowed by a large bass, which rose to the surface for it. For a moment all was still, but presently it came to the top of the water, writhing about in great agony. It would turn over and dash around as tho it were in the greatest agony. Finally it darted out into the main stream and was lost from view. It is supposed that the bumble bee was stinging it on the inside. A discussion arose as to whether fish could feel pain, but, owing to lack of authority on the subject, could not be decided.

Anyone who is familiar with the large sizes of the patent minnow know that they are very dangerous things to handle. It is almost impossible to touch them without being hurt by the multitudinous hooks by which they are surrounded. Recently a local sportsman bought a hefty "Phantom" minnow, about no. 8, and believes that it is more of a grappling iron than an inducement. He was first tried it got mixed up with a large bass by accident, and actually hauled a pound bass out of the water, tail formost. After that no fish would approach it. A colored fisherman named "Jim," who has spent so much time in the river this year that he is in a constant state of milkiew, coveted the article and won it by making a turnip patch in the garden.

The first day after he had acquired possession of the deadly bait, he went fishing. The minnow behaved fairly well at first until the devil got into it, and as it was passing by settled on Jim's back with hooks in each scapula. He was totally unable to get it loose and, being in terrible misery, broke a valuable, hewed, yew pole which he has had for three seasons, and which has missed catching as many fish as any rod of its age in the country. In the seclusion of "Wild Cat Cottage" Jim was able to take his shirt off with much pain and cut the grabs out of the cloth.

Mr L. M. McClintic caught a fine sixteen inch bass near the mouth of Knapp's Creek, with a "Jack Scott" fly.

A great many bass have been taken in the past week. One fisher reports 54 for a week of six days ending Saturday, July 31. Some are so fond of fishing that they spend seven days of the week at it.

The editor of this paper caught a fine two pound bass last week above the Bridge. The bass has been seen in the pool and coveted by several. On this day he was in biting humor. He took a minnow and got caught and stayed on long enough to show that he was a monster and got away. He took the bait again in a few minutes and this time he was better hooked. With a light trout fly rod and a consciousness that the leader was rotton made the work of landing him a dangerous business. Several times he had all the line out, but he was finally tired out and led to the bank. There was no shoal to land him on, and trying to lift him out of the water his weight broke the hold and he slipped back in six inches of water which was between him and his home. The bass was so tired that he moved slowly and the writer was able to head him off and, after an exciting struggle in which we fell down and hurt our noble shins and tore our clothes, the bass was shoveled high and dry on the shore.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hear ing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Remarkable Case of Chronic Diarrhœa.

In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contacted chronic diarrhœa. It has given me a great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50 cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great Remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write me. Yours gratefully, HENRY STEINBERGER, Allentown, Pa. Sold by druggists.

DEATH'S HARVEST.

Mrs Laura Curry.

The sad information is received that Mrs Laura Curry unexpectedly died after a brief illness at her home near Hillsboro, last Friday night, July 30. She was the wife of G. H. Curry, Esq., a prominent citizen, and a daughter of the late John McCarty. Mrs Curry was a much esteemed person, and her decease is deplored by a large circle of relatives and acquaintances. She was a communicant in the pale of the M. E. Church South.

Her remains were placed in the Oak Grove cemetery on Sunday afternoon, attended by a retinue of friends and relatives, in whose hearts her memory will have a warm place for long years to come. Her name is embalmed in all their loving hearts can give—"their praises and their tears." W. T. P.

Mrs Jane Clendennin.

July 21st, at her residence at the mouth of Stamping Creek, Mrs Jane Clendennin, relict of the late William Clendennin, aged 79 years.

She was a very worthy person, and with her the final summons was a welcome release.

"The storm that wrecks the wintry sky
No more disturbs her deep repose
Than summer evening's latest sigh
That shuts the rose." W. T. P.

George William Anderson, only son of Mr and Mrs David Anderson, of Marlinton, died on Monday evening, August 2, aged eleven years and seven days. Willie had many friends, and his prompt and pleasant way of doing errands made him useful to many persons. It was while he was on an errand that he tread upon a nail. The puncture became inflamed and produced blood poisoning that resulted in atrophy of the heart. He was buried Tuesday afternoon, and his grave was profusely adorned with beautiful flowers, very tastefully arranged by the young ladies of the vicinity. "Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in Heaven that one of these little ones should perish." W. T. P.

DIED—Friday, July 30, Frank Johnson, son of Mr and Mrs James Johnson, near Ferdant Valley, aged seven years.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours: a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and ever comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Perabulator-Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Stalking the Ostrich.

The Bushman divests himself of all his incumbrances; water vessels, food, cloak, assegai, and sandals are all left behind. Stark naked, except for the hide patch about his middle, and armed only with his bow, arrows and knife, he sets forth. The nearest ostrich is feeding more than a mile away, and there is no cover but the long, sun dried, yellow grass, but that is enough for the Bushman. Worming himself over the ground with the greatest caution, he crawls flat on his belly toward the bird. No serpent could traverse the grass with less disturbance. In the space of an hour and a half he has approached within 100 yards of the tall bird. Nearer he dare not creep on the bare plain, and at more than twenty-five paces he cannot trust his light reed arrows. He lies patiently hidden in the grass, his bow and arrow ready in front of him, trusting that the ostrich may draw nearer.

It is a long wait under the blazing sun, close on two hours, but his instinct serves him, and at last, as the sun shifts a little, the great ostrich feels that way. It is a magnificent male bird, jet black as to its body plumage, and adorned with magnificent white feathers upon the wings and tail. Kwanet's eyes glisten, but he moves not a muscle. Closer and closer the ostrich approaches. Thirty paces, twenty-five, twenty. There is a light musical twang upon the hot air, and a tiny yellowish arrow sticks well into the breast of the gigantic bird. The ostrich feels a sharp pang and turns at once. In that same instant a second arrow is lodged in its side just under the wing feathers. Now the stricken bird raises its wings from the body and speeds forth over the plain. But Kwanet is quite content. The poison of those two arrows will do the work effectually. He gets up, follows the ostrich, tracking it after it has disappeared from sight by its spoor, and in two hours the game lies there before him amid the grass, dead as a stone.—Longman's Magazine.

It is always gratifying to receive testimonials for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and when the endorsement is from a physician it is especially so. "There is no more satisfactory or effective remedy than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes Dr. R. E. Foley, physician and pharmacist, of Olney Tex.; and as he has used the Remedy in his own family and sold it in his drug store for six years, he should certainly know. For sale by druggists.

At the Ticket Office.

"I want a ticket to Valparaiso."

"One dollar and thirty cents."

"You don't think I want to get it for nothing, do you?"

"Was it Valparaiso you said?"

"It was, sir."

"One dollar and thirty cents."

"Can't you see I've got my pocket book out? Do I look like a man that's watching for a chance to jerk a railroad ticket out of your hand and run away without paying for it?"

"Say, if you want a ticket for Valparaiso——"

"That's what I want, young man and I've told you so twice. How many times more do you want me to ask for it? You're here to sell tickets, I reckon?"

"Yes, sir, and if you want——"

"A ticket to Valparaiso—V, a, l, p, a, r, a, i—no, a, i——"

"One dollar and thirty—"

"I know exactly how much it is, young man. I don't need to be told more than five or six times. I've traveled between this town and Valparaiso more trips than you've got ounces of brain inside your skull. I was buying tickets from here to Valparaiso when you were wearing short pants. You don't look like the kind of chap that can afford to put on airs over plain, common, everyday people. You look like some Billy sort of a brakeman that's been promoted to a conductor's job on account of a scarcity of material and hasn't got over the swelled head yet. No, I am not hindering any body that wants to buy a ticket to some other town, either. I know this man standing behind me. He wants to go to Indianapolis, and his train doesn't leave for three hours. You will listen to all I have to say if it takes me till dinner time. If the railroad company cannot afford to hire clerks that have got enough sense to tell an honest man from a pickpocket or a gold brick swindler it ought to raise the price of tickets or economize by building cheaper cars and advertise for a few competent—O, you've concluded to hand over the ticket without waiting to see whether I'm going to gobble it and run off with it, hey? Well, here's your change, and perhaps you will know me when you see me again, young man. Morning!"—Chicago Tribune.

C. & O. Wants It.

There has been considerable talk on the street for several days of the probability of the sale of the Charleston, Clendennin & Sutton railroad to the Chesapeake & Ohio railway company. The officials of the Chesapeake & Ohio, as well as those of the Kanawha & Michigan have been figuring on the purchase of the C. C. & S. for some time, and the sale of this property within a short time will not be a surprise.

A Gazette reporter called on Governor MacCorkle, the attorney for the C. C. & S. Co., last night to ascertain if there was any truth in the report that the road had been sold. Gov. MacCorkle said he did not think there was any truth in the report; that if the sale had been consumated it had been done with in the last twelve hours.

Governor MacCorkle considers the Charleston, Clendennin & Sutton a very valuable piece of property. It is the only direct railroad to the interior of the State and traverses a section of country rich in coal and timber. It runs twenty-two miles thro a tract of 98,000 acres of land, owned by Senator Camden, Governor Atkinson and others, which has never had a stick of timber cut from it. The traffic on this road, when it shall have been connected with the Camden system system at Sutton, will be immense, and the road will be of more real benefit to Charleston than either the Kanawha & Michigan or the Chesapeake & Ohio. The road is now completed and in operation so far as Clay, a distance of fifty miles. Twenty-two miles more, with the exception of a half mile break, has been graded and ready for the track. The iron for the twenty-two miles of track is now on the ground, and the Kanawha & Michigan people had it not been for the sudden death of Mr Drake, of the Drake-Stratton Company, which secured the contract for the road would no doubt have by nearly or quite completed before the present season. It would be made with the Camden system. The purchase of the C. C. & S. by the C. & O. would mean, of course, the early completion of the road to Sutton, and a second bridge over the Kanawha at Charleston.

WHERE NOAH GOT HIS PITCH.

Natural Spring Which Enabled Him to Make the Ark Water Tight.

An English explorer has recently reached Hit, in Syria, the locality in which Noah dwelt. Here he found a remarkable group of bitumen springs, says the New York Journal.

From these springs, he says, it is probable that Noah obtained his supply of material to "pitch it within and without." In a basin, undoubtedly of volcanic origin, a spring of warm water bubbles up, and with the water comes the bitumen or pitch, in a plastic form, of the consistency of rather moist pottery, and the Arabs gather it by simply scraping it off the surface of the water with their bare hands and pressing it into panniers carried by patient little donkeys, who then struggle up the rocky sides of the basin and take the material off to the boat-building yards, where it is used for covering the hulls and goughas, after undergoing a certain refining process.

The bitumen is continually rising, but owing to the formation of the basin into which it rises with the stream very little of it can escape, and it remains floating on the surface of the water till taken off by the Arabs. The water itself tastes slightly of sulphur, is quite warm and apparently charged with some mineral which it deposits in the river bed as it flows on, (through channels and crevices which the bitumen cannot pass) from the basin, coating it with a lovely blue color, which further down the stream becomes a "peacock" blue.

MAGNANIMOUS WILLIAM.

He Did Not Take Revenge for an Insult.

Louis XII. was of the opinion that it was unworthy of the king of France to revenge himself for the insults he suffered as prince royal. Emperor William of Germany is of like opinion, says the New York Times.

Baron de Kreuil, who has just been appointed a grand cross of the Red Eagle order, was formerly colonel of the hussar regiment in which the emperor as a youth first did military service. One night at mess, toward the close of a banquet at which the young prince, then a mere captain, had invited his friend, Archduke Rudolph, the conversation turned to the projected reforms in the cavalry.

William declared himself a partisan of these reforms and defended his opinion with so much impetuosity that Colonel von Kreuil, very much excited, suddenly interrupted him. "It is an absurdity," said he in a loud voice and contemptuous tone as he ridiculed the idea put forth by the prince.

"It is well," replied the prince. "Today you are my superior officer, and I must bow before you, but our positions may change."

When his former subordinate ascended the throne Baron von Kreuil fully expected to see his name put on the retired list. But the emperor appointed him a general, gave him the important directorship of the School of Cavalry at Hanover, and has ever treated him with the greatest respect.

DISTRIBUTING NATURAL GAS.

Sent Long Distances Through Pipes by Means of Air Pressure.

The transmission or conveyance of gas under pressure to long distances, which was an unsolved problem some 20 years ago, is now a fixed fact, as represented by the present use of about 75,000,000 feet of pipe used in the distribution of natural gas. On the first discovery of this article, says the Philadelphia Bulletin, the pressure at the well was sufficient to drive it through the pipes almost as far as desired, but as the pressure declined some additional methods were necessitated, the well-known air compressor being resorted to to pump the gas; and, as showing its efficiency, there are at Greensburg, Ind., gas wells which have long carried supplies to Chicago. There are two eight-inch pipe lines used, the gas being pumped a distance of about 120 miles. There is at Bedky, Ind., a pumping station of this character that supplies the towns of Springfield, Tiffin, Findlay, Lexington, Piqua and other places in the western part of Ohio. Near Pittsburgh there is a gas plant which pumps 30,000,000 cubic feet every 24 hours for use in mills, the pumping of this being without the least difficulty; and the Philadelphia company pumps many millions of cubic feet a day. There are New England manufacturers that are pumping every day, at various stations in the United States, the enormous quantity of nearly 100,000,000 cubic feet.

Mains for Bear Hunters.

The proper beat for a grizzly bear hunter to ride is a pond mule. Dr. W. F. Edgar, United States army, tells to conversation why a mule is best. The doctor was wandering near a camp of Washington state on a mule. He had his rifle with him, and, seeing a big bear on the trail, fired. The beast tumbled over and out of sight. It hadn't like a cross hill, and the doctor started toward the place, and was nearly to the edge of the hollow when the bear had disappeared, when the bear climbed up over the edge and went for him. It was then that the mule was of the greatest service. The mule stood as the animal tore, turned sharply around, and headed for camp. A bear on a standing gallop couldn't have been quicker in his turns. The doctor was so close, but all the hunter had to do was to hang on. The mule knew what to do without being told.

A Woman's Appearance.

A prosecuting attorney once said the ordinary man should determine from every part of the world he chanced that on the left of January, from twelve to one o'clock, by simply open the gates of Heaven to all who made application at that time, the masses would enter, in spite of the importance of the ceremony. There would be a mighty throng, but it would be complete a satisfactory failure coming.

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

The Osborne
SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe teeth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The pecular shape of the teeth curving teethirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

ALL THESE FEATURES COMBINED HAVE MADE THE OSBORNE CELEBRATED.

It has no EQUAL,—it never will have a SUPERIOR.

TIRES THAT LEAK.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with pings, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

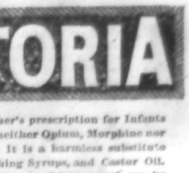
By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the punctures, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair

No. 2.

No. 3.

strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the punctures, as in cut No. 3.

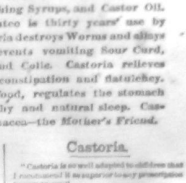
The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every one has heard of tires that "leak like a sieve."



Many tires are, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they puncture. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether other than low grade tires are made by Morgan & Wright than those with the Morgan & Wright guarantee mark. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge at the factory in Chicago, and at the stores in Morgan & Wright tire repair shops, located in the principal cities.



Mr. Wright has been a practical gas engine engineer for the past four years, and has had a hand or hall in it, and knows it completely.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

John Hartman Ruckman.

Among the citizens of our county in later years from the forties to the sixties that took a lively interest in everything that promised to promote the interests of education, morality, and the prosperity of the county generally, John H. Ruckman, Esq., deserves more than a brief notice.

He traced his ancestry to one Samuel Ruckman, a native of England, and born in 1643. The Ruckmans had lived awhile in North-East Wales, bordering England, and thence came to Long Island, New York, in 1682. Thomas Ruckman, son of Samuel the Welsh emigrant, was born on Long Island, in 1682, and his son James Ruckman, another link in the ancestral chain, was born in New Jersey in 1716. James Ruckman's son David Ruckman was born in New Jersey in 1747. David Ruckman is the progenitor of the Ruckman relationship in Highland and Pocahontas Counties. He came to what is now south-east Highland, Virginia, and settled in lower Back Creek Valley, about 1784. The place is now occupied by William Price Campbell, Esq., whose wife is a daughter of Colonel David Ruckman, a grandson of the pioneer and called for him.

The settler married a New Jersey wife, who seems to have been a lady of high aspirations, and longed for something far better than she could have in New Jersey. Marvellous accounts seemed to have been reported about the beauty, wealth, and happiness of southern homes. That in Virginia people lived in houses with earthen floors, discarding the use of wood. She seems to have gathered from this that the floors were of mosaic work, such as princes have about their homes in the old country. Upon reaching the place of destination and finding what earthen floors meant on the Virginia frontier, her disappointment was so intense that she wished to return at once; but circumstances were such that this was impossible, and so the situation was accepted, went to work and a home was reared out of the Virginia forest. Her name was Susannah Little.

David and Susannah Ruckman were the parents of four sons and four daughters. Elizabeth, Sophia, Mary, and Hannah. Samuel, John, James, and David Little. One of the three worthy people, David Ruckman, died on the homestead reared by their own industrious, mutually helpful efforts, July 11, 1822, and is buried on a gentle eminence that overlooks the scene of the toils and cares from which they now so silently rest. She survived and came to Pocahontas with her son David, and died about 1845, far advanced in the eighties.

John H. Ruckman, in whose memory this biographic paper is especially prepared, was the eldest son of Samuel Ruckman, Esq., of Highland County, Virginia. Samuel Ruckman just named was the eldest son of the pioneer, and was born in New Jersey, November 17, 1783. His first wife was Nancy Hartman, from beyond Greenbank. They were married July 18, 1809, and settled on Back Creek. There were one son, John H., and two daughters, Mary and Nancy, in the first family. Samuel Ruckman's second wife was Margaret Slaven, from Pocahontas County, and her children were James, Elizabeth, Ann, and David VanMeter.

Mary Ruckman married Isaac Gum. She is survived by two sons Isaac and Anton Gum.

Nancy Ruckman was married to William Wade, went west, and is survived by several children, names not in hand.

James Ruckman died in youth.

Elizabeth Ruckman was married to John P. Irvine. She is survived by her three children, James, Mary and Anna.

Ann Ruckman married Cornelia Brown, and went west.

David V. Ruckman married Anna Hosting, daughter of the late Rudolf Hosting, of Augusta county. Their children were Kate, who is Mrs Wm Rendel; Lucy now Mrs Edward Wade; Anna Laurie, now Mrs William Price Campbell; Margerie is the wife of Rev Cocke, of Missouri; Sarah is at home; David Glendye Ruckman lives in Augusta; Samuel Ruckman a youth of more than ordinary promise died when a student.

Col. D. V. Ruckman's second wife was Miss Lizzie Eagle, of Doe Hill, Highland County, daughter of the late Samuel Eagle, Esqr.

John H. Ruckman, Esq., was born in Highland County (then Bath) November 11, 1810. He married Mary (Polly) M. Bruffey November 7, 1833. She was a daughter of Patrick Bruffey, Esq., and his wife, Ann Slaven. He first settled at the old homestead on Back Creek, and then moved to Pocahontas, about 1845, to the Bradshaw place, near Mill Point. He finally located on the Greenbrier, opposite the Stamping Creek junction, where he built a fine residence and spent several years. Mr and Mrs Ruckman were the parents of eight children: Caroline, Sydney, Charles, Samuel, James A., William Patrick, David Newton and Polly Ann. It is a sad reflection that not one of these sprightly sons and daughters is now alive.

Caroline became Mrs William J. Cackley, near Mill Point, and died soon thereafter; Charles Ruckman was a Confederate soldier, became a prisoner of war, and was for some time at Fort Delaware, and, on his return homeward, died at Baltimore from the effects; Samuel Ruckman, a younger Confederate soldier, died of sickness at Green Bank, occasioned fatigue and exposure; James Allee Ruckman died in battle at Port Republic, Virginia; *William Patrick, David New*ton and Polly Ann died in childhood.

Sidney Ruckman, the eldest of the sons, was a Confederate soldier and survived the war. He married Almira Campbell, daughter of the late William Campbell, Esq., who at the time occupied the home opened up by David Ruckman, the pioneer. It was the writer's pleasure to officiate upon the occasion, and was made the recipient of one of the most liberal fees ever known to be given for such a service in that vicinity. After all *the perils of war, he came near los*ing his life in a time of peace in a rencontre, that is alleged to have been the principle reason of the famous Atchison lynching at Monterey. It is reported that all this was done in direct opposition to Sidney's wishes, and that he was always sorry it ever happened, as he felt himself fully able to take care of himself.

He finally went to Oklahoma, and on his way to meet and bring home his wife, visiting in Kansas, he died under sudden and sad circumstances September 7, 1896, at the hands of suspected parties, who were pursued and dealt with in a very summary manner. He is survived by his wife and two sons. The young men are reported to be very promising and bid fair to make first-class citizens. Their names are Charles and William Ruckman.

John H. Ruckman's second wife was Mary J. Wooddell, near Green Bank, a sister of Mrs M. P. Slavin, at Marlinton. In 1863 he sold out his possessions in Pocahontas and moved to Georgia, where he died some years since. Mrs Ruckman has married again, and is now Mrs M. J. Wilson.

Thus has the compiler been able by the assistance of Mrs Mary Cackley and her nephew, Wallace Ruckman, to present what has been done herewith illustrating the history of a very good citizen in his day and generation.

The writer cherishes the memory of this man with feelings of special interest. He owes something in the way of mental stimulus to his influence.

"William, do you know that if you were to try, you might become something of a man in time? My advice is, set your aim high and see what it may all come to you good."

"Well, Mr Ruckman, you talk differently from what I generally hear about myself. A person, who knows me much better than you do, told me that I was about the biggest fool in all this country, and sometimes I feel as if it might be so."

"Well you just listen to what I say and try to make the best of yourself, and let us see what may it come too."

Some little time after this interview, I was at his house for dinner and, when we took our places, he invited me to invoke a blessing, and so at his table my first effort of the kind was ever made.

For some years we were confidential friends, but finally our paths drifted far apart and we saw and knew but little of each other face to face, but in memory he was often present to my mind, and he is now, as I pencil these memorial paragraphs, seemingly near enough to grasp his hand and greet him the time of day. He was a scrupulous member of the M. E. Church, an ardent advocate of temperance and intensely devoted to welfare of his country. For his country he gave his prayers, his means and his sons, and finally his grey hairs went down to the grave with nothing more that he could do or suffer in the way of obedience to the Divine will.

There is a calm for those who weep,
A rest for weary Pilgrims found,
They softly lie, they sweetly sleep
Low in the ground.

Navigating a Cow.

When I was down on Cape Cod last summer I heard an amusing story about an old sea captain and his cow. Captain Peterson, after sailing the sea for more than forty years, finally retired to a little farm near Barnstable, where he settled down with a horse, cow, and two or three dozen hens. His cow, who a lank and rather stubborn creature, was said to come from very good stock, and when the Barnstable people took it in their heads to have a fair, Captain Peterson determined to exhibit his cow.

But when the day came to drive her to the grounds the cow showed that she had a mind of her own and would not budge a step beyond the gate. In vain the old Captain tugged at the rope, pummelled her sides, and pushed her flanks. The cow wanted to go to pasture, and was bound she would go to the fair.

Captain Patterson's patience was very nearly gone, when suddenly an idea occurred to him. The he was not strong enough himself to force the cow to go to the fair, his training suggested something that was. Tying the cow to the gate-post, he went up into the loft of his barn and threw down an old sail stripped to a dory mast. Then he put a horse's blanket belt thro an iron ring, strapped the belt around the cow, inserted the end of the mast in the ring, and bound the mast to the side of the cow with some fifty feet of rope.

The wind blew "quartering" and when the Captain untied the cow raised the sail the course was swell out over the cow's back and away she went "sidling" down the road, mooing and lunging, and trying to stop herself in vain. Capt Patterson seized her tail, and, using it as a rudder, guided her skillfully in the right direction. With every fresh puff of wind the obstinate cow would be hurried along faster, while the dust blew up in clouds, and the sail flapped and tugged, while Capt. Patterson held the mainsheet with one hand and the cow's tail in the other.

It was a hard voyage for both of them, but not a long one; and when they came in sight of the fair ground's overboard ran out to see the remarkable sight of a cow being sailed thro the streets like a ship. Cheers and laughter filled the air, and when the Captain finally whirled his cow around at the gate of the fair ground and brought her neatly "up into the wind," the shout that arose might have been heard two miles away.

Unfortunately, Capt. Patterson's cow did not take one of the prizes for fattest stock, but the Captain himself was given a special prize by the fair commissioners for the best device for getting balky cattle to market.—The Outlook.

PROF A. D. ROGERS, of the University, has discovered a new variety of dewberry in the Preston County Glades. It is bright red in color when ripe, and has delicious flavor.

THE wheat crop of Berkeley County is conceded at 450,000 bushels, the wheat generally fine.

AN OPEN LETTER.

In compliance with the request of Captain W. L. McNeel and others, we lay before our readers the following communication from Mr C. Z. Hevener, recently a citizen of Marlinton, and bespeak their sympathies as he so pathetically pleads for in the sad afflictions, past and present, that have befallen him and his family:

Editor of The Pocahontas Times:

Dear Sir—With an aching heart I write you something for publication about the troubles I have had since I left Marlinton, August 19, 1895.

Upon leaving Marlinton I went to Lowell, W. Va., where I failed to get work sufficient to support my family. October 18, 1895, I moved to the White Sulphur where on the 1st day of March, 1896, I came down with typhoid fever and was given up by several doctors to die. For eight weeks I knew of nothing that was going on.

On May 9th, 1896, Willie took the fever, and my beloved wife was very careful to wait on us both thro our sickness. She became grently dissatisfied with the people here, and so, July 30, 1896, I went to Back Creek, two miles from the old Sweet Springs, to blacksmith for E. A. Huddleston's saw mill.

July 20th a freshet washed the log road away and business was suspended. August 13, I came to Burr's Valley, twelve miles south west of Hunterville, to blacksmith for Capt. Peters' camp, with T Lester Iorman. Here I worked until January 7, 1897. January 15, 1897, I came to Captain W. L. McNeel's, near Hillsboro, where I am now at work with a breaking heart, two children and an insane wife.

June 30, Mrs S. E. Hevener, my wife, was judged insane by Justice Curry and Drs McClintic and Larue. Such is an account of wanderings and troubles, and my condition is very distressing. I have my two children to provide for, which I am more than willing to do if God gives me health and strength. I ask the good people of the surrounding country to give me a fair share of their patronage, for I am more than willing to work.

I am thankful for sympathizing friends, such as Capt. W. L. MacNeel and family and all the neighbors around me.

I am not a professed follower of Christ, tho at times I feel like leaving the world and following Christ. I am one of the twelve children of Zebulon Hevener, deceased, of Mountain Gove, Virginia, and the only one of the family now living that does not belong to the church, so I suppose I have all my trials and troubles to bear by myself.

I wish to ask all praying people to pray for me, as I can't pray for myself. I hope we will all know each other better, when the mail have rolled away. I now think of what has often been told me, "Ask and you shall receive, knock and it shall be opened unto you," and then I think of the passage of Scripture which says, "The prayers of the wicked availeth nothing." Now this is why I ask the righteous people to pray for me.

Shakespeare says that loud singing, talk and whistling is not happiness, that sometimes it is to drown truth. I can say by self-experience that this is correct. Hoping that my many friends will have sympathy for me in my troubles and help me all they can.

Your friend,
C. Z. HEVENER.

A Fortune in a Kernel of Wheat.

Talking about wheat stories, the first one of the season comes from George Leavitt. George says that in the spring of 1894 he was at George Fifer's place, near Rutten pastoffice, and his attention was attracted by a small stalk of wheat in Mr Fifer's garden. He asked regarding it and was told by Mr. Fifer that in 1893 he killed a wild goose and in cleaning it he found a kernel of very peculiar wheat. He saved it and planted it the following spring, raising four heads, one of which contained 109 kernals. Mr Leavitt has watched this wheat each year with considerable interest, and recently had another talk with Mr Fifer about it. The latter has continued to plant what he had harvested the previous year and this season has 14 acres in. He says that in ordinary seasons this wheat will yield from four to six bushels to the acre. He talked to place it on the market in 1898 and will sell it for seed at $2 per bushel. The wheat is a hard red color, and as hard as any. Fife wheat. Some of the heads are said to measure 6½ inches in length and contained four rows of kernels. Mr Leavitt believes that this variety will be the wheat of the country when it is once given on the market.—North Dakota Free Press.

Sarsaparilla Sense.

Any sarsaparilla is sarsaparilla. True. So any tea is tea. So any flour is flour. But grades differ. You want the best. It's so with sarsaparilla. There are grades. You want the best. If you understood sarsaparilla as well as you do tea and flour it would be easy to determine. But you don't. How should you?

When you are going to buy a commodity whose value you don't know, you pick out an old established house to trade with, and trust their experience and reputation. Do so when buying sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been on the market fifty years. Your grandfather used Ayer's. It is a reputable medicine. There are many sarsaparillas. But only one Ayer's. IT CURES.

Lincoln's Warning.

(Appendix Congressional Globe, 34th Congres, p 4.)

Persons given to ponder political words of solemnes and truth will find much to think about in what President Lincoln said about the tendency of affairs, many years since. Whoever reads this and understands its import need have no trouble to decide how to place his vote where it will do the most good.

Monarchy itself is sometimes hinted at as a possible refuge from the power of the people. In my present position, I could scarcely be justified were I to omit raising a warning voice against this approach of returning despotism. It is not needed nor fitting here that a general argument should be made in favor of popular institutions; but there is one point with its connections not so backneyed as most others, to which I ask a brief attention. It is the effort to place capital on an equal footing with, if not above, labor in the structure of government. It is assumed that *labor is available only in connec*tion with capital, that no body labors unless somebody else owning capital somehow by the use of it induces him to labor. * * * * Labor is prior to, and independent of, capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could never have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves much the highest consideration. * * * * No men living are more worthy to be trusted than those who toil up poverty; none less inclined to take or touch ought which they have not honestly earned. Let them beware of surrendering a political power which they now possess, and which, if surrendered, will surely be used to close the door of advancement against such as they, and to fix new disabilities and burdens upon them till all of liberty shall be lost.

IT is something rather difficult to explain, yet it is a well known fact and but rarely called in question, it is far easier to coast down hill than to draw the sled or coasting board up hill. Sometimes this discourages persons and they cease to find pleasure or joy in coasting. While the reason may not be very apparent, yet experience makes it self-evident, that if it were coasting down hill all the time and no climbing up to be done, we should become but little better than the sleds that carry us. For a time there would be pleasurable exhilaration, but we should soon loose our vigor and our health, and then there would be no pleasure in the act. The up hill work is what develops the capacity to enjoy the pleasures sought and imparts healthful vigor. On this principle the plan of a successful life is arranged. Constant effort in the way of endurance and resistance is the main condition on which a beautiful, happy life can be achieved with the materials of a human experience. When this comes to be realized, then we aim to place our feet firmly on the first step of the Golden Stairs, whose landing is near the presence of God where there is fullness of joy and pleasures for ever more. The noble accept the situation and patiently toil upward.

AS WOMEN officials refuse to serve under the negro Collector of Georgia, it seems likely that the collecting business will be entirely in the hands of negroes.

"Nearer to Thee."

They were singing, sweetly singing
And the song melodiously
On the evening air was ringing,
"Nearer, O my God, to thee!"
In my eyes the teardrops glistened
As it stirred the twilight dim,
And I wondered as I listened
If it brought them nearer Him.

Were they like the wanderer weary,
Song and life in sweet accord,
Resting in the darkness dreary
In that nearness to the Lord?
Had the Spirit ever sought them,
To be slighted or denied?
Had that dear song ever brought them
Closer to the Savior's side?

I have heard its music often,
Felt its meaning deep and sweet,
And my weary heart would soften,
Singing at my Master's feet,
"Nearer thee!—O precious feeling!
Nearer thee in pain and loss,
Nearer thee when I am kneeling
In the shadow of the cross!

Nearer thee when love descending
Falls in blessing on my head;
Nearer thee when I am bending
O'er the graves that hide my dead!
Nearer thee in joy, in sorrow,
Tis the same where'er I roam;
Nearer thee to-day, tomorrow,
O my king, my Christ, my home!

A Remarkable Case of Chronic Diarrhoea.

In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contacted chronic diarrhoea. It has given me a great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50 cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great Remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write me. Yours gratefully, HARRY STRIEBINGER, Allentown, Pa. Sold by druggists.

A maid with a duster
Once made a great bluster
A-dusting a bust in the hall
And when it was dusted
The bust it was busted,
And the bust is now dust.
That is all.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

It is always gratifying to receive testimonials of the value of any remedy, and when the endorsement is from a physician it is especially so. There is no more satisfactory endorsement of any remedy than is given Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, written for R. H. Rudy, physician and pharmacist, of Cisco, Tex., and he has used the remedy in his own family and among his patrons with the most satisfactory result. For sale by druggists.

The Pocahontas Times.

ANDREW PRICE, EDITOR

Marlinton, Friday, Aug. 13, 1897.

THAT the tariff bill recently passed will prove a blessing to West Virginia is the hope of every true patriot who opposed its makers last year.

IT seems to be given up that there is a serious shortage in the bread producing districts of the old world and South America, which will be supplemented by the United States, provided these countries have any thing to buy bread with, in the way of money or produce.

LATE advices from the Pennsylvania coal districts are of a threatening character. The Governor had his adjutant-general to stay up at night to be ready to dispatch help when called for at the earliest possible notice. The Kanawha Gazette thinks the mines in the south and west will be virtually closed, and matters are very precarious about Fairmont and Wheeling.

A VERY rich gold mine is reported from the western part of Mexico, on a tributary of the Yaqui River. Four persons in about three or four months took out one hundred and forty thousand dollars. It can be reached from the Pacific coast by going up the Yaqui River in boats, and no doubt there will be a rush towards this region soon as the news gets out.

THE saloonist has been getting in his work at Honolulu by having the tax raised on Japanese liquor, largely imported and consumed in Hawaii Islands. The tax has been raised from fifteen cents to a dollar a gallon. The saloonists and manufacturers of liquors could not compete with the Japanese beverage, as it was so much cheaper than their product. Hence the new legislation so unsatisfactory to the Japanese.

SIGNS of good omen are visible in the crop prospects being better now than for years in some sections of the cotton belt. The Avery Plow Factory at Louisville, Ky., resumes operations after a three-years' suspension, and the Algonquin Woolen Mills of Passaic, N. J., has notified the operators that wages will be raised from ten to fifteen per cent. A large sugar manufacturer in New Orleans also informs his operatives that wages will rise twenty to thirty per cent. upon resuming operations under the new tariff arrangement.

THE last steamer to make connexion with the Yukon River steamers that run to the gold regions this season left San Francisco on July 28. Crowds thronged the wharf for hours before the departure. Three times the original rate for tickets was offered. One passenger gave up the trip after getting fifteen hundred dollars for a piece of pasteboard that had cost him one hundred and fifty dollars. Two thousand people were present to say goodbye to the one hundred and ten passengers for the Klondyke gold diggings.

AFFAIRS seem to be assuming a very serious aspect in Brazil. Ten thousand well-armed insurgents attacked the government troops a week or so since. Whole brigades of Brazilian soldiers were cut down, destroyed and trampled under foot as the victorious insurgents passed over them. Four thousand men will be sent by the government to the scene of defeat, and the commander will be made to dislodge the insurgents from the position now held by them. The reason for this uprising is not clear. It is surmised, however, that the Jesuits could explain things, were they to think it expedient so to do.

ON July 24th a battle was fought at Fort Martin, in South Africa, between the British and the African natives, who had rebelled against the English. The British surprised the African rebels in their fortifications and for native look refuge in caves. The caves were demolished with dynamite. Mashluganeh, the noted leader of the insurgents, had his cave destroyed and he perished in the explosion. Between four and five hundred were taken prisoners, the number that perished seems not to have been counted. Everything seems to be a new feature in warfare, and something the good ordinary in those lands and not practiced for.

IT looks as if Kentucky had gone into the crime-fostering business. In the last four hundred and eighty-four working days six hundred and seventy-five pardons have been granted to criminals by the Governor of Kentucky and the Lieutenant Governor. Ninety-six of these were murderers and had been sent up for life, and the other sixty-four had been convicted of manslaughter and sent up for limited terms. Three men were sentenced to be hung, and these the Governor changed to imprisonment for life. It seems the masses are catching the idea no serious punishment for crime. No one seems supriscd that crime should be on the increase. Hence the temptation to that crime and dire evil—lynch or mob law.

A NEW South American republic will take her place in the family of nations on the 15th of next September, to be known as the Republic of Central America. The countries forming the union will be called States. The government is vested in an officer to be known as the Chief of States, and he is to be elected from each of the States in their alphabetical order, and hold office one year. A council composed of two representatives from each State with the Chief of States will compose the government. Alliances for defense and preservation for all the States are provided, and the expenses of government and of war are to be assessed by the council. Guatemala, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, and Salvador are the States, and Costa Rica will have the first president to furnish from among her citizens.

AMONG the most startling events of recent occurrence was the assassination of Canavas, Spanish Secretary of State, which occurred last Sunday at a summer resort, where he was to remain three weeks under treatment for his health. The murderer fired three shots and the Premier was struck in the forehead and chest. He fell dying at the feet of his wife, and after lingering in agony for three hours expired with the words "Long live Spain" upon his lips. The assassin, whose name is Rinaldo, was arrested at once. He claims to be a Neopolitan by birth. Canovas was one of the most eminent of Spanish statesmen, and was in the seventieth year of his life. The bearing this event will have on the affairs of Cuba is important, but whether favorable or unfavorable cannot be certainly foretold, but the probabilities are in favor of the early independence of the Island and cessation of hostilities. Then again it may arouse the friends of monarchy to make serious demonstrations of sympathy for Spain. Events alone will show what the results of this most deplorable affair will be.

SCHOOL BOOK BOARDS.

If this article from the Kanawha Gazette is true as to that county, the school books of this county are in a like bad condition. We do not vouch for their law.

The Kanawha County School Board is in a pickle. They met last week and selected books for the public schools in the county, and now they find that their work was all irregular and illegal, and consequently void and of no effect.

The statute requires that each member of the board, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, shall give bond and file the same with the clerk of the county court. This formality was not observed by the members of the Kanawha County board. They might have been able to have met and have done the work in due form after having qualified, but the statute requires that the board shall select books for the schools prior to August 1, or not at all. This is the last day of July. It is too late to get the board together and do the work over before August 1.

The Gazette reporter found County Superintendent Blair yesterday and asked him what would be done about it. He said that the only thing that could be done was nothing. The schools will continue to run under the old and wait till the board can meet again next July to do their work over.

The American Book Company is on top in Kanawha County. The several school book publishing companies will please take notice that they will be expected to have their agents here again next year.

A COMMUNICATION from the President of the Lewisburg Bank gives the gratifying information that all the funds, books and papers were saved from the recent fire, and that the business is to go on without any appreciable interruption.

MELVEY PRICE MOORE, the seven-year-old son of William Moore, on Brown's Creek, did all the dropping for seven acres of corn and all the thinning out for five acres and a good deal of the hoeing. We would like to hear from other farmer boys of similar age.

HUNTERS are pleased to see indications of an increase of game birds this season. A "gang" of wild turkeys is seen almost daily about Marlinton. Within a few hundred yards of each other four covers of pheasants were seen by a traveller one evening dusting themselves on the highway. One frequently hears the call of the cock quail.

GEORGE LISTRUCH found a curious ear of corn at Mt Wilson, Maryland, and his father took it to the office of the Baltimore Sun. The ear is divided into three segments, and on the smaller divisions are well defined grains of wheat and rye, growing on the cob, side by side with grains of corn. Thus corn, wheat and rye on the same cob; what a nice roasting ear that would make.

A POCAHONTAS boy aged about four years went to a cornfield a month or so since and was found very busy pulling up the corn. His reason for doing so was the corn was "no good" because it had no ears on it. He next examined the potatoes, and finding the potatoes no larger than peas he went to work pulling up the vines and throwing them over the fence as "no good" too. There is the making of a philosophic farmer in that youngster.

JESSE GROOM, tenant on the Beard farm near Hunterville, killed a large rattler Monday morning. From its distended appearance the reptile had had a bountiful Sunday dinner and was sleeping it off so soundly as not to have been aroused by the clatter of the mower. As a general thing when the rattler hears over the rattlers they lose their heads. This one had to be killed with a pitchfork, as he lay low and kept his head.

NEAR the road on the farm of Mr Tom Callison, at Locust, may be seen the grave of an Indian. Stones were collected and heaped in a pyramidal form to the height of five or six feet,—probably as a protection from the attacks of wild animals and as a mark of respect for some distinguished warrior and hunter—whose name and deeds, as those of his tribe, are lost in oblivion. Imagination is left the visitor to this spot to recall the history of this native monarch of the soil, aided by such implements of stone as are often picked up, illustrating the manner of life of an interesting and ingenious people.

THOSE who will find it to their interest to call at the Golden store while at the Institute and examine the goods and the cheap prices. Cheap is a word of two meanings first, something that is low priced and poor; and secondly, something for which a low price is asked and got of good quality. And I intend to sell your attention to a line of goods and cheer coming under the second meaning. In a few short months you will be in need of them, and you will have to pay 10 to 25 per cent higher for them—as they are bound to advance now that the rate of tariff is settled.
Trusting you understand business.
PAUL GOLDEN.

ELD SAM JONES, at Glyndon Park, near Baltimore, a few days since lectured with a perfect house, and in addition to a good deal about the young people "A colt may be a boy when a grandcolt is to be a boy when a grandcolt is to be an ass. It stands him. But the ass may be kept too long at the stake. * * * If the poor boy has all I handed the persimmon to the commissary for a century my name's not Sam Jones. It's a slander on America and a libel on Providence to say that the poor man has no chance. He gets them every day. The average American is too lazy to get his own persimmons. * * * When a man who's been drinking says he was converted by a bull, there's a lie. The jag will never sanctify you. Brother you've got to run after it to get it."

Personal Mention.

Jasper Auldridge is at home from the Webster County lumber camps.

Mrs William M. Siple was called last Monday to the bedside of her mother, Mrs Rayburn, near Green Bank, who is critically ill with fever. She had waited on Mrs Siple, who was prostrated some weeks since.

Colonel J W Cochran, of Folly Mills, Augusta County, and a prominent citizen, passed Marlinton Saturday on his way to Webster Springs. He was accompanied by Colonel Brown. Colonel Cochran says he was shown a deed dated 1709 conveying a tract of land from a Mr Gay to Lieut John Warwick. This land is the Dunmore property, and settles the parentage of Jacob Warwick, the noted pioneer. Lieut Warwick was a British officer, and served in Captain Charles Lewis' company in the Braddock expedition.

The Eastham Trial.

August 3d the special grand jury to investigate the case of Col. Robert W. Eastham, charged with the killing of Frank E. Thomson, assembled at Parsons, West Virginia. The common wealth is represented by eight prominent lawyers, and the defense has nine; Homer Holt, Judge.

Col. Eastham has a brilliant record as one of Mosby's lieutenants, and at his home, in Davis, is quite popular.

Mr Thomson was native of Norway, Maine, and about thirty-two years of age. He came to Davis about five years ago, and was a practical lumberman and manager of the Black water Boom and Lumber Company. His wealth was estimated at $250,000, mostly acquired by his own exertions, as he refused assistance from his father upon leaving college. He was also a very popular person.

The trouble between the parties seems to have comenced over some land in Tucker County. It was claimed that the dams built by the Company, for which Thomson was manager, backed the water over Eastham's land to its injury. One dam was burned and another blown out by dynamite. Thereupon Eastham was restrained by an injunction from interfering with the Company's property in any manner.

The fatal recontre occurred on the 8th of last March, on Tuesday evening in a railroad train at Parsons. Sixty or seventy citizens of Davis had been brought to Parsons to answer for contempt of Court. Thomson came with them and had his fun with some of his friends for getting into the predicament. To have their sport with Thompson, he was told that Eastham had said that he should not be allowed to return with them on their train. Thomson entered the car before Eastham, and when Eastham came in, he approached Thomson and a quarrel began. Thomson drew his weapon and seven shots were exchanged, he firing four. Eastham received flesh wounds on the forehead and was struck on the side and he fell as if dead, but the wounds proved to be but slight. Thomson did not fare so well at the hands of the veteran, who had made shooting his business for four years, for he was shot in the thigh, arm and abdomen. On the following Saturday morning, of perforated intestines, he died at the Western Maryland Hospital, Cumberland.

Since the foregoing was put in type, information comes that the jury could not agree on an indictment, and a new jury was organized. In the meantime, last Saturday, Judge Dent, of the supreme court in chambers, on motion of John T. McGraw, for the defense, awarded a writ of prohibition, prohibiting Judge Holt from proceeding with his grand jury, and from trying Eastham under any indictment found by his court for the murder of Thomson. This has the case from Tucker County to the Supreme Court, and the trial is fixed for September 2, at Charles Town, West Virginia.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, can be taken as easily in summer as in winter. Unlike the plain oil it is palatable, and the hypophosphites that are in it aid in digestion and at the same time tone up the system.

For sickly, delicate children, and for those whose lungs are affected, it is a mistake to leave it off in the summer months. The dose may be reduced if necessary.

We recommend the small size especially for summer use, and for children, whose a smaller dose is required. It should be kept in a cool place after opening.

This is the third Institute attended by Professor J. T. Rucker, and his presence is a pleasant surprise. His eminence as an instructor is well assured by his phenomenal success in the management of the Lewisburg Graded School and his recent appointment to the principalship of the Romney State Institution for the Blind, Deaf, and Dumb.

Professor R. E. Lowe is a comparative stranger to our teachers, as this is his first visit. He is a native of Summers County, and is principal of the graded school at Hinton. He is a graduate of the Concord Normal School. He has a diploma from the National Correspondence School, and has advanced to some extent in the Chautauqua course. He took the music course at Dayton, Virginia. These facilities with assiduous application to home studies have placed him in the foremost rank of West Virginia teachers of public schools.

JOSH BILLINGS once said: "I love the rooster & the krow that is in him and 4 the spurz that are on him to back up the crow with." That's a great deal like what the people say about Golden's suits. They say they love them—not because Golden crows so much about them, but because they have got the necessary wear and service in them to stand a whole lot of crowing.

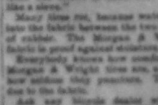
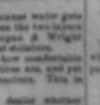
TIRES THAT LEAK.



The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with plugs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut, No. 1.



No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair

No. 2.

No. 3.

strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, as in cut No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed against punctures. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "soak like a sponge."

Many times not, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they punctures. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether other tires last so long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask him, what the Morgan & Wright guaranteed tubular Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright free repair shops, located in the principal cities.

If E. Rowan you have a puncture, get right off. Mailing a tire fast, when the tire is back as good as it was, damage is done repairably.

Dunmore.

We see Capt. C. B. Sweeker back from the State of Webster, and he reports that State very wet. Circuit Court is in session there, and on last Monday and Tuesday forty-three indictments had been made. Two murder cases are in the present term; J. D. Alderson is in one of the cases. There is a large crowd of visitors at the Springs. George McLaughlin, Albert Hanna, E. D. King, Mrs B. M. Yeager, and Misses Leva Gibson and Lizzie Hanna, all of Pocahontas are there. On Saturday morning, July 31, Albert Hanna found an old man dead not far from Addison. A horse had fallen on him and killed him.

There were a few lots sold at Addison last Tuesday; they sold from $200 to $300.

The new Railroad Hotel, at Addison, is doing a fine business. Col Myer Newberger, President of the Company, is making a success of the Hotel. He says there will be a railroad to Addison inside of 12 months, and, when the railroad gets to that place, it will make one of the best watering places in the United States.

O. B. Sharp is critically ill with typhoid fever. Mrs Harmon is not able to be out yet. Henry Sheets is on the sick list. Mr Musto McLaughlin is able to be out again.

B. F. McElwee is off to Marlinton.

A very large bear came into William Sharp's yard, on Clover Creek, last Saturday. William scared the bear and the bear scared William.

About 400 people attended Rev D. C. Hedrick's meeting on Back Allegheny, Sunday. Five large rattlesnakes were killed near the preaching ground.

WILLIAM POLL,
Marlinton, W. Va.

IN THE TWILIGHT.

Sitting alone in the twilight gloom,
I heard a wondrous sound,
Like a forerunner of earthquake doom
That seemed to shake the ground.

A restless thumping, then a space
Of silence—then again
A shout ran through this fog girt place
That rent the night in twain.

I waited alone in the twilight there,
The world's best pleasures forgot,
And I listened again for that sound so
coure,
And fearing I knew not what.

It came, and a spirit whispered low
As I stood awe struck, mute:
It's the people applauding the last good thing
They heard at the Institute.

WANTED—To exchange a Ladies Vest for 7cts. PAUL GOLDEN.

It's an very good world that we live in
To lend or to spend or to give in;
But to borrow or beg or get a man's

It's the very worst world that ever

To artificially bleach the hair will destroy its growth; but if the hair inclines to grayness, assist nature to arrest it with Hall's Hair Renewer.

IN a recent discourse, a famous preacher polished off these words for the consideration of the young ladies. Some one had inquired of him what he thought about the similarity of dress between the two sexes that has become so fashionable, and this is what he said: "Bloomers, why sure, its a woman right to have them. I believe in a woman being anything she wants to be except the father of family of children. Two pillars uphold the womanhood of America—modesty and purity. With either pillar gone woman sinks. God pity the American woman who tells modesty to step aside. Modesty buttons a girl's dress close up around her neck. God save me from the society woman who buttons her collar around her waist."

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours: a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention This Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, warranted for one year to be good work as any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, and PERFECTION. Weighs only 8 pounds, writes longer without cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink ribbon to bother the operator. It is neat, nickel-plated, nickel plated, perfect and is adopted to all kinds of typewriting. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clear, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become an operator in two days.

The Osborne
SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not foul each other, pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe teeth bars are mounted in malleable bases secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling backwards about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and tempering are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

ALL THESE FEATURES COMBINED HAVE MADE THE OSBORNE CELEBRATED.

It has no EQUAL,—it never will have a SUPERIOR.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

The Pouge relationship claims a place in the annals of our county, and some attention will be given to them in this sketch.

The Pouges are of pure Scotch-Irish ancestry, and were among the parties that suffered in the seige of Londenderry. The line of descent can be traced to two brothers, Robert and John Pouge, who "proved their importation at their own charges" at Orange C. H., 1740. The Pocahontas Pouges are the descendants of Robert Pouge, who settled between Staunton and Fort Defiance, and was among the first to occupy that attractive portion of the famous valley of Virginia. Robert Pouge's wife was Elizabeth Preston, whose family settled in the vicinity of Waynesboro with the pioneers about 1740. Their son John married Mary Blair and settled near the Pouge homestead in Augusta.

William Pouge, one of John Pouge's sons, married Margaret Davies, and settled in the Little Levels at the place where Charles W. Beard, Esq., now resides (1897) about 1782. Mrs Pouge died in 1843 aged 98 years. Their children were William, George Washington Moses Hoge, Samuel Davies, and Elizabeth.

William Pouge, junior, married the widow Nancy Gatewood, a daughter of Major Jacob Warwick and Mary Vance his wife, and lived at Marlin's Bottom, now Marlinton, early in the century.

Major William Pouge's daughter Ruchel was married to the late Josiah Beard, of Locust. They were the parents of Hon W. T. Beard, Charles W. Beard, John G. Beard, Samuel J. Beard; Henry Modlett Beard; Agnes Beard, now Mrs Alvin Clark, near Hillsboro; Joel Early Beard, a Confederate soldier, died during the war; Wallace Warwick Beard, Edwin L. Beard, Sabina, now Mrs George S. McNeel, near Hillsboro; and Margaret, now Mrs Washington Levisay, at Frankford, Greenbrier County.

Josiah Beard, Esq., is to be remembered as the first clerk of Pocahontas County, and a person of the highest character for all that makes a true Christian patriot, and of his children it may be said they are worthy sons and daughters of a very worthy father and mother.

Mary Vance Pouge was married first to Robert Beale of Botetourt, and settled on Elk, where he died, leaving one daughter, Margaret Elizabeth Beale. There was another child that died at the age of a few months. When it was born the father walked around the grave and then looking upward with his tearful eyes said: "Our God in Heaven only knows who will be the next to be buried here; it may be myself." Four weeks from that day he too was carried there and buried by his heartbroken friends and neighbors, and is spoken of by the old people at this day as one of the most solemn burylngs they were ever at in their lives.

Mrs Mary Beale was married the second time to Henry M. Moffett, Esq., clerk of the county, and lived at Huntersville and then at the Levels. Margaret Beale, her eldest daughter, became Mrs G. B. Moffett, an eminent physician. Their sons, Robert and James Moffett, live in St Louis and Chicago, employed in the Standard Oil business. Sally Moffett became Mrs Alexander McChesney, late of Charleston. Mary Moffett, Martha Moffett is now Mrs Hall, near Philippi, Barbour County. Mary Hughes Moffett is Mrs William P. Thompson, of New York City, who was a Colonel in the Confederate service. Rachel Moffett is now Mrs Robert McClure, of Lewisburg. George B. Moffett became a lawyer, Speaker of the West Virginia Legislature, distinguished officer, and is now railroad attorney and resides at Parkersburg.

Colonel William Woods Pouge son of Major William Pouge, married Julia Chalmers of Loudon and settled on the old homestead, finally moved to Pouge's Level, where he now lives. Robert and Woods Pouge now reside. Lieut Moffett Pouge, killed in the war, was also his son. Lieut Pouges only child, Mrs Sally W. Beery, lives at Mt. Clinton, Virginia.

Margaret Davies Pouge was married to the late James A. Price, of Botetourt County, Virginia, and settled at Marlin's Bottom on a section of the Pouge homestead. Her children were William T. Price; Elizabeth, who became Mrs Allen Burner. Her son, George A. Burner, lives in Minneapolis. James Henry Price, Josiah Woods Price, Eugenia Frances, who became Mrs Franklin Cochran, John Calvin Price, Andrew Gatewood Price, who died at Point Lookout a prisoner of war, July 6th, 1864. He was of the Bath Squadron. Nancy Warwick Price, Mary Margaret Georgiana, now Mrs A. M. McLaughlin, near Lewisburg, W. Va.; George Junkin Price, and Samuel D. Price.

Moses Hoge Pouge, son of William Pouge the Levels settler, married Martha McDannald, of Windy Cove, Bath County, and settled on the place now held by Alvin Clark, Esq. Their sons and daughters were William, Franklin, Cyrus H., Davis Brown, Elizabeth who became Mrs George Van Eman, a Presbyterian minister; and Mary Pouge, who became Mrs Hanna. Late in life Moses H. Pouge emigrated to Missouri.

George Washington Pouge married Miss Rankin and settled on the place now occupied by Preston Clark, Esq. The children of the first family were William, who was *killed by a falling tree; Ran*kin, who married Nancy Wolfenbarger, settled where the late Rev M. D. Dunlap resided. He finally went west. James R. Pouge, late of Edray, West Virginia. Mrs Ann Wanless, wife of Ralph Wanless, in the Hills, and mother of Rev G. P. Wanless, an eminent Methodist minister; Mrs Elizabeth Burner, second wife of the late George Burner, of Travellers Repose.

Mr George W. Pouge's second wife was Elizabeth Beard, sister of Josiah Beard, mentioned elsewhere in this sketch. The children of the second family were George Washington, Pouge, junior, Samuel Davies Pouge. John B. Pouge, and Elizabeth Pouge, who became Mrs William P. Hill.

Mr George W. Pouge was a person of fine appearance, and his resemblance to the portraits of Washington of whom he was a namesake was frequently remarked upon. An evergreen prayer-meeeing was conducted at his house on silent Sabbaths. He loved to *"sail with ju*dicious care" the hymns and tunes that were once sung by the Covenanter ancestry in Scotland. While there was much singing, and much reading, and much praying, but few things were sung, read, and prayed, and so the minds of the worshippers were concentrated on the few things needful—the forgiveness of sins through the blood of Jesus, a new heart and a right spirit. Advanced in years, Mr Pouge went west with his family and settled in Missouri.

Samuel Davies Pouge, youngest son of William Pouge, senior, married Miss Rebecca Arbuckle, of Lewisburg, sister of the late Captain Charles Arbuckle, of Texas, and lived at the old homestead. He had been educated for the Presbyterian ministry, but declined the exercise of its duties thro a morbid sense of unworthiness, unfitness for assuming duties so sacred and responsible as he regarded ministerial vows demanded. He was a faithful helper in the prayer-meetings led by his venerable brother George Pouge. While attending school taught by Rev Joseph Brown at the Brick church the writer boarded in Mr Pouge's family. He has heard him in secret prayer in his private room long after midnight, such were his devotional habits. It mattered not how cold the night might be, Mr Pouge would spend hours in that room in secret devotion, and oftentimes he would come out with his feathers all radiant with watery crystals.

Elizabeth Pouge, daughter of William Pouge, senior, became the wife of Colonel John Hill, son of Richard Hill, so often mentioned in these biographic notes as a pioneer and scout. Hillsboro was named after him. The names of their children were Richard, William, John, Thomas, Robert, Davis, George, Margaret, who became Mrs Cheely K. Moore; Nancy who was married to William McMillion head of Spring Creek; Elizabeth, and Mary.

Colonel Hill late in his life felt it his duty to remove west. It was one of the most mournful episodes that ever occurred in the social history of the Levels when Moses Pouge, George Pouge, and Colonel Hill set out for the west with their families in order to seek new homes in their old age. The most of these persons located in Daviess County, Missouri, and many of their descendants are in that State which has been to so large extent occupied by Virginia people as to be regarded as a new Virginia.

William Pouge, senior, was a Presbyterian ruling elder and virtually the founder of the Oak Grove Presbyterian church. Some of the first religious meetings conducted by Presbyterian ministers in this region was at his house. When the pulpit would be vacant years at a time there would be religious services at his home or the home of one of his sons, who were also elders. Visiting friends from from Kentucky brought with them the revival spirit that has rendered the early history of Kentuck so famous, and it broke out in the Levels in 1801. Parties in Augusta heard of it, and came over to see and hear what it all meant.

The pastor of the Old Stone Church, Rev William Wilson, a relative of the Pouges, and fifteen or twenty of the young people also relatives came over together. They became imbued with the spirit of the moment and went back singing and praying as they traveled along. The effect upon the home people in the valley as they rode up singing and praying was overwhelming; and from that point the old Stone Church, the revival influence went all over the State, wherever there were Presbyterian congregations, and the results are visible at the present time tho so so nearly a hundred years ago. So it appears a great matter was kindled by a little watchfire that had been kindled in the old Pouge homestead.

May it be that all having the blood of such an ancestry in their veins strive to be worthy of it, and ever be thankful that they are the sons and daughters of an ancestry that has passed into history and, what is far higher and better, the children of such as have passed into the skies. W. T. P.

VERBAL REVERBERATIONS OF THE INSTITUTE.

The past week has been one of genuine social enjoyment, mental and moral improvement, owing to the presence of the Teachers Institute at Marlinton.

Parties, who had looked upon Institutes as a nuisance, publicly announced a decided change in their views and now looked upon Institutes, conducted as this has been, as something next to indispensible to the attainment of best results in school work.

A very marked mental quickening was apparent in the attention given, and the questions that were propounded by the teachers. One of the teachers brought up the query, "Where would we come out if were a tunnel projected thro the earth?" Some thought, China, of course; another, India, but the querist himself, against all odds, contended the coming out place would be in the Southern Ocean, and far from Australia. This question has not spent his life on Hill's Creek for nothing.

A visitor, a citizen of marked prominence in County affairs, gave a talk on the uses of history as the means of learning the lessons of experience without undergoing the hardships entailed by actual experience. This idea was illustrated by pertinent object lessons. One instance by experience that fire will make sore fingers; a second pointed out from the experience of the first what fire will do without getting his own fingers burnt if he will heed what is told him.

Prof. Rucker impressed it upon the teachers to take special pains to interest pupils in history. He thought mountain boys, in their limited environment, and with so few opportunities in sight would be stimulated and encouraged to high endeavors, were they to learn that limited opportunities are no real barrier to to highest success. Jefferson, with his wealth and college advantages, was matched Hamilton with his poverty and self imparted education. John Q Adams, with all his wealth, early advantages and wonderful learning, found his peer in Henry Clay, "the Mill-boy of the Slashes." Other examples equally pertinent were mentioned.

Another citizen visitor 'waked up things' by calling for the correct analysis of the famous couplet: "The swan, on still St Mary's Lake, float double, swan and shadow." St Mary's Lake was from being still while this discussion was going on, and the swan was doubled up quite enough.

A self invited speaker, in his remarks at one of the evening entertainments, recommended the Bible as the newest thing now out' in the way of reading, and the phenominal craze for something new and fresh in reading matter could not be more effectively satisfied than by an attentive and intelligent perusal of the Bible. As water is the drink of all drinks, so the Bible is the book of all books. By going west sufficiently far one gets into the east, so by going into the oldest things sufficiently far, one may come into what is 'newest and freshest.'

Prof Lowe insisted upon teachers giving their pupils good, nourishing mental food and a plenty of it, if they wanted to develop robust and strong minded pupils. He gave this as an object lesson: "A farmer hired a hand to cut some meadow. The work did not progress to his satisfaction and he complained of it to a friend. The friend went to the meadow and found the hand at work, cutting a very slow and narrow lick, and muttering to himself:

"Milk and whey,
Milk and whey
Three times a-day."

He returned to the house and told the farmer that it would be well to make a change in the diet, and give his hand plenty of fried bacon and eggs, and see what it would come to. The farmer acted on the suggestion and gave the hand a square meal as hinted at, and the visitor went down to the meadow to see how it was after dinner. He found the mower swinging a swift and vigorous lick and singing to himself:

"Bacon and eggs,
Bacon and eggs;
Look out for your legs."

The teachers were left to make for themselves the intended me of the parable.

While the effects of alcoholism were under discussion, a scene transpired that surpasses anything for pathos and moral courage that has ever taken place in the history of this Institute, and perhaps of any other in our State. With his honest eyes suffused with regretful tears and with broken words Prof. Rucker alluded to former meetings of the Institute which he had attended when a part of the outfit he had provided was a jug of whiskey, and under its influence he had time after time lectured to the teachers of this county. Hereafter, that lodging-bin, he would know or have nothing more to do with strong drink. And now when he meets a youth with breath perfumed with cheese or peppermint drops he would turn into him lovingly by the hand and lead him toward some building to be to themselves, not to give him red liquor, but to advise him "look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color to the cup, or beareth itself aright, for at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." O that everything that is pure, lovely and of good report could be contained in unfermented grape juice and banish the graphophone from our homes.

No Ordinary Passion.

For nearly an hour Horatio Dexter had been upon his knees in front of Flavia Johnson, pouring out his love. His was no ordinary passion. He had worshipped the beautiful girl from the moment his eyes had first looked into hers.

"Flavia," he implored, "have mercy! Can you not find it in you will not become my wife there will be no hope for me?"

"No, don't say that," she returned in low, sweet accents; "you will get over it. Three years ago Titus Henderson told me the same thing. Now he is married to another, and the father of twins. I know that he is happy. You will forget me as he has forgotten me. You will meet some one else and love her, and then, in good time, be happy with your twi- I mean your family, as he is."

"Ah," he bitterly replied, "others may be happy with their twins, I do not care for them. You—you Flavia, are what I want. You are the pole star of my existence. Say that you can learn to love me. Say that I may at least hope. Do not compel me to go away and destroy myself! Save me, Flavia, save me!"

"Poor boy!" she said, stroking his curls, "I am sorry for you. I wish I were not so lovely. It is terrible, this thing of driving people mad for love of me. I will give you a little lock of my hair, which you can wear next to your heart. Perhaps that will help you get over it."

"No! No!" he sobbed, "I don't think a lock of hair on my heart would do a bit of good. It would only tickle me. I am very ticklish Flavia. Keep your hair. Now I'm going to give you just one more chance. Will you or will you not be mine?"

She bent and pressed her rich, ripe lips against his forehead, and then replied:

"Alas! I cannot; I am promised to another, who makes more money in a day than you earn in a week. It nearly breaks my heart to tell you this, but you have forced me to do so. Were things arranged differently, I could be happy with you, for love is knocking at the door of my heart."

Horatio Dexter got up, looked to see if his trousers were badly bagged at the knees or not, and then, in cold, harsh tones, said:

"Well, inasmuch as it seems to be a money transaction with you, I suppose I ought to pay you something for the time you have wasted in hearing my story. How much do I owe you?"

Drawing herself up like an angry princess, she said:

"You insult me, sir; Go, before I call my father, who stands 6 feet 2 in his socks and weighs 195 pounds."

So he departed, saying:

"The day will come when you will be sorry that you permitted the desire for money to kill your love."

That was five years ago. To-day she is a queen widow, living upon a comfortable annuity of $14 per week, which her husband left behind him, a salary and fees, of $17,000 a year, and checks, blood at the expense of the public, to do the work.

Often does the now miserable woman say to herself:

"Would to God I was! I might have known from the impossible proposition he made that night that he could n't have.—Cleveland Leader.

The inscription on the Old Glory

The mystery that hangs about the crack shot and the suspicion that still lies on his name, have not left his fair to old Kentucky home. Here a reputation for accuracy must have rendered only the best of shots safe, a case of which we adduce a given in a Chicago paper by Mr S. S. Canfield. It was in Louisiana, in one of the old houses with wide verandas, with which the Attakapas County is dotted. The gun was a hundred years old if it was a day and five feet if it was an inch, and its metal could be cut with a knife. Its locks were richly arabesqued and its stock was of the finest walnut.

It had been a been beauty in its time, and had cost much gold. The family who owned it was of the best blood of France. Originally fired with flints, the gun had been altered to meet the more modern demand of the percussion cap. Handmade from muzzle to butt, it was singularly graceful throughout its great length, and "balanced" beautifully.

Upon one side of the stock was an inscription in letters of silver, as follows:

"Legere et scribere pedagogi est, sed optime colloware est Dei."

This may be called a sort of schoolboy Latin for the idea: "Reading and writing are to be learned of the schoolmaster, but a crack shot is the work of God."

Mr Canfield declares that a marksman of talent may derive his proficiency from practice, but a marks man of genius "born so." To all appearances these born marksmen make their calculations as to wind and light instinctively, in the lift of the weapon from the hip to the cheek, without thinking anything about it.

Some of the greatest shooters in the world have never been heard of outside their own limited personal acquaintance. One of these, whom Mr Canfield met on the Rio Grande, would, with the ordinary forty-five calibre single-action Colt's revolver in his hand,—a force-ball weapon with which it is very difficult to obtain accuracy,—sit upon his heels and clip the small red apples from the edges of leaves of the cactus plants thirty yards distant. With the same weapon he would break a brick thrown into the air, and then smash one of the pieces before it reached the ground.

With a Winchester rifle, pumped with such rapidity that the shots could not be counted, he would bore his initials, "J. T.," into the trunk of a tree at a distance of fifty yards.

Wild turkeys in flight, peccaries fearing thro the chapparral, and antelopes flying in desperate bounds were all one to him; and one of his most favorite was scaling tin plates nailed against posts by striking their edges with half the bullet.

Such a marksman as this must surely have been "born, not made."

A Remarkable Case of Chronic Diarrhoea.

In 1863, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contracted chronic diarrhoea. It was given up as a great deal of trouble every month. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend, seeing a notice of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50 cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cheerfully recommend this remedy to any one who is in need of it. Yours gratefully, HARRY WEAKNECHT, Adjutant, Pa. For sale by druggists.

It is always gratifying to receive testimonials from people in high life, as showing such preparations to be of a permanent character, and when one endorses it it is especially so. "There is no other satisfactory remedy for rheumatism," says Chamberlain's Cough, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, after trying R. R. R. (Rheumatism and Rheumatism), of Canada, and so do we. We have used the Remedy ourself and with it in our family and have found it to be a most excellent remedy. For sale by druggists.

VIRGINIA DEMOCRATS.

The convention at Roakoke resulted in the nomination of J. Hoge Tyler, of Pulaski, for Governor. His former opponent, J. Taylor Ellyson, made the nominating speech. Edward Echols, of Staunton, was nominated for Lieutenant Governor; and A. J. Montague, of Danville, completed the ticket for Attorney-General.

Senator Daniel was present, of course, and received the endorsement of the body for re-election to the United States Senate. His opponents proposed that U. S. Senators be selected by primary elections and a resolution to this effect was passed by a vote of 13 to 14 in the committee room. Daniels argued against the resolution, and it was defeated by a vote of 850 to 500. After a two days tempestuous whirl the convention adjourned sine die.

THE UNIVERSITY PRESIDENCY.

The matter of choosing a president for the State University has been settled in favor of Dr Jerome H. Raymond, of Wisconsin. He is a graduate of Northwestern University, at Evansville, Illinois. He took a post graduate course at the Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, and then at Chicago University, where he received the degree of Ph. D. He passed two years of study in Europe and at Burmah, India, and then after visiting China and Japan, returned by the Pacific and thus made the circuit of the globe. He has testimonials from the leading scholars and college authorities of the North and West.

Dr Harper the great educational genius of the present day says of Dr Raymond. "He is forcible, energetic and capable, and the West Virginia University under the direction of Dr Raymond assumes a station the equal of that of any institution in the United States if he is given an opportunity to exercise his power and magnetism. He is successful not only as an instructor but has wonderful administrative ability."

In religion he is a Baptist and in politics a Republican.

James H. Stewart, of Putnam county, was appointed director of the Experimental Station.

Prof. Harvey was re-elected to the chair of modern languages.

It seems to be conceded that if a man had been selected from the State, Dr Turner would have been chosen. The regents seem to have forgotten the principle of "West Virginia for West Virginians" and the time is not far removed when all their work will have to be done over.

THE GOVERNOR'S INDISCREET REMARKS.

Governor Atkinson pardoned W S. Kimes, of Parkersburg, who shot and seriously wounded Benjamin Hall, more than a year ago. Kimes was given twenty-four hours in jail and $100 fine. At his trial Kimes said that his only regret was that he did not kill Hall. In remitting the fine the Governor said that it was a regrettable case and the pity was that Kimes did not kill Hall. That he did what every man would have done under the circumstances, and he should have practiced with revolver or double-barrelled shot-gun to have been sure of killing him.

The New York Sun says that this is "unwritten law" and that our governor "champions homicide." It also calls him a "below stairs magistrate." It says further that this extraordinary outburst is simply an invitation and instigation to lawlessness which would be unpardonable in anyone.

The Governor replies in a letter to the World and the Journal. New York, explaining that the case yellow even the editors language which he used in reviewing the matter in his reasons for pardoning Kimes.

Kimes and Hall married sisters. Hall deserted his wife and several helpless children, went to Parkersburg and attempted the affection of Kimes' wife. Hall was requested to leave Kimes' home and when he refused Kimes ordered him off. Hall then drew his revolver and began firing. Kimes, in self defense, was compelled to shoot Hall in order to save his own life

THE prospect for a corn crop is very good. Blackberries are in great profusion in some places and a total failure at others. It is a very good fruit year on the whole in Pocahontas

THE Virginia Democratic Convention, at Roanoke City, Virginia, August 11th, nominated J Hoge Taylor for Governor by acclamation. Ed Echols, Esq., of Staunton, was nominated for Lieutenant Governor on the second ballot.

GOVERNOR ATKINSON has done another unusual thing in appointing Miss L. B. Bonny, of Wheeling a notary public. The Constitution of this States provides that no appointment can be made for any state, county or municipal office unless the appointee be a voter.

An eastern syndicate has leased a large amount of iron ore land about fifteen miles north of the White Sulphur Springs on the road to Huntersville, and have been opening up the mines to ascertain the amount and quality of the ore. The blasting is continuous.

AN unusual suit is that just brought against Justice John W. Hill, of Terra Alta, and his bondsmen for the recovery of $100. Edwin & Co., of Baltimore, claim this sum was deposited with the Squire in 1894, to guarantee their appearance in Court as witnesses in a criminal suit—also that Squire Hill has not paid the money, who avers that the money was returned.

THE famous injunction given by Judge Jackson, of the Federal Court, restraining Eugene V. Debs and fifty-four others from tampering with the miners around Fairmont, reached Captain John K. Thomson, U. S. Marshall, whose business it is to serve and enforce such writs, at his camp on the Forks of Cranberry, in this county.

WHEAT is threshing out very well in the Levels. A tract of 11 acres averaged 28½ bushels to the acre. A leading farmer in that section estimated the cost of production of wheat in the Levels on the basis of a yield of twenty bushels per acre, which can be more than averaged on those farms, and, counting labor, fertilizer, interest on land, seed, etc., the cost of production is about 46 cents per bushel.

THE impeachment proceedings against J. S. McDonald, president of Kanawha County Court, came up in Judge Guthrie's Court last Saturday, and the defendant demanded a jury. After the point was argued at length by attorneys, the Judge decided that he would not pass on the constitutional rights of the defendant, but that he would use the discretion allowed him by the code and call a jury to pass on the matters of fact arising in the case.

FRED HAMMOND, one of the Hammondsss of Bog Run, is running a small lumber job for the Stanley Company in a tunnel right of row in the river. Peter climbed on to a number of his logs and had carried away that had never been seized, and for which he had received no credit. Capt Mundy the owner, said that he would scale all of Peter's cutting by the stamp of his axe, and if he found any logs not Peter's, and intentional claimed that some of his logs did not have stamps and logs.

A DOME once was tried in the Circuit Court at Dixon. Some White, a member of the grand jury, was fined $5 for disturbing religious worship by attending a meeting of Christians Church. The fined had made a rule that no young man should sit on the women's side of the house, and when one Mr. Crosby came in with a girl he ordered him to take a seat beside the girl and at once. Crosby made some resistance, which grew to a disturbance, for which White was fined. Louisville Courier-Journal.

IN every avenue of life there need be men to lead for others to follow. You can buy suits in any store, but if you want a nice steel gray or duff-color suit, suitable for the Reunion of Confederate Veterans, lower than ever in spite of high tariff, stop at GOLDEN'S.

WHILE Somuel and Edward Lee, of Davis, West Virginia, were picking berries at an old bark camp near William, Mrs Vina Clayton ordered them to stop taking the berries. When they disputed her right to them she called her son, Will Bishop, who opened fire with a gun, the shot striking Edward Lee in the face and hip. He will recover. The woman and boy are in jail at Parsons.—Exchange.

WE heard an old Confederate soldier give the words that were suggested to the soldiers by the bugler's "stable call":

The Colonel will known it
And give you the devil as sure as you're bor-r-rn."

ONE of the family of the "fighting Bells," of Augusta County, Virginia, has died at the homestead at Long Glade at the age of 80. He was Alexander B. Bell, one of five brothers who together had nineteen sons that fought in Captain Cushing's Company of the Fifth Virginia Regiment, Stonewall Brigade, and were nearly all killed in battle or died of wounds. A. B. Bell, for nearly sixty years, had been an elder in the Presbyterian Church.—New York Sun.

THE sheriffalty business in Mingo County seems to be in a bad shape. Sheriff Keadle is required to give a new or additional bond, and the one offered by him was considered insufficient by the county court. The sheriff will probably produce evidence before the circuit court to show that his bond is good and require the county court to accept it. In the meantime Sheriff Keadle has been in newspaper controversy and has fought three of his assailants. He is a Republican elected in a strongly Democratic county.

We have had fine weather, and farmers seem to have improved the opportunity to get their hay up, and this week will finish up the haymaking in this part. The crop was of remarkable yield and quality.

A. L. Dilley's horse became frightened at a hog in the bridge at Huntersville, Saturday, and getting fastened in the framework of the bridge broke his leg and was killed.

The sick are improving. Mr O. B. Sharp has typhoid fever, and is better. Miss Florence Hively, who is visiting in Pendleton County, is down with fever.

The threshing machine has been about here. Howard Bird left it to attend the Institute with his best girl.

The huckleberry crop is almost a failure in this part. [O tempora, O mores—D. J.], yet there is a good crop of blackberries. [We'll winter!]

We very much sympathize with Mr C. E. Hevner and sorry to read of his lamentable trouble. The writer knew him when he was postmaster at Marlinton and when Mr Hevner to be a faithful and efficient officer. We hope Mrs Hevner will be returned to him in health that they may be a happy united family, and that he may easily learn to "Forget Grief of all grief the gentlest gifts."

THEIR AGONY IS OVER.

From Dante's "Inferno."

Enter with me into a tale of woe;
Whence up the winding stairs the stranger came,
And gazed upon the agony of those
Who were cooped up before directors grim.
To pass in all the thirteen direful branches
Included in the torture made for teachers.

And in this purgatory there sat
Some twenty-odd or so of victims,
With doleful books upon their soulful faces:
There a young lad with down upon his chin
Threw back his shock of football hair
And vainly wooed the goddess Memory
To answer who was this State's first Governor,
Or how to parse a word of subble meaning.
And o'er his classic brow the insect life
Had much to do to perfect their squatter's rights,
So often he was required to scratch his head and think.
Ay there's the rub—think hard and woo the long forgot!
To long for one brief, fleeting glance
Upon the pages of a certain well-worn book
Up in the loft at home.
Across the aisle
There sits a beauteous female teacher,
Who exorcises ingenuity to get that precious note
From out her fond sweetheart's hands;
That billet-deaux contains no loving word—
It simply says that the correct reply to question 9
Is '830,' and to no. 10 "Five days";
And o'er her brows there spreads the calm
Of peace, etherial, beautiful, divine, but she is marked
By the examiners, who prey upon her actions.
Forever hovering near, alert, suspicious, open-eyed,
Each one Nemesis, keeping her from cheating.

The saddest case is that of the poor girl
Who sits apart from all who might afford her help.
Between her and her willing prompters,
There is a great gulf fixed, and as she writhes upon the bench
Trying to recall that which she never knew,
Her task is difficult, and then she looks,
A case of unendurable, incarnate wo.
Why should this be—the teacher can but fail,
And if he fail, the privilage denied,
Is that he teach not school.
To most a consumation to be wished.
Success and failure of a country teacher
Are so allied that no one knows
Which is the most to be desired.
So think, and when you face the Board,
Your faculties will not be numbed fright,
And answer briefly, boldly and success sits on thy banners.

Be disappointed not if you fail,
For there are thousands in this world
Who would not teach had they a trunk
Bustin full of No. 1 certificates.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle sent you by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

SERMONETTE.

I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.—Romans xii 1.

A service is here referred to that implies the exercise of the reasoning powers—the noble faculties that make the essential difference between parties responsible for their actions and the irresponsible creatures. The term "living sacrifice" suggests a very interesting fact connected with the writings of the New Testament; that the writers assume that their hearers and readers are well acquainted with the contents of the Old Testament Scriptures. This fact may be, and is, disputed, but it cannot be refuted. It is disputed by the Romanists, and by an immense number even of protestant people. This assumption is evident from the numerous hints and references to Old Testament writings found so frequently in the Gospels and Epistles.

In the text there is one such reference where we are exhorted to present our bodies a living sacrifice holy and acceptable unto God.

It may appear very strange to some that since it is elsewhere positively declared that sacrifices have been abolished and now there is but one High Priest, Jesus Christ the Righteous, who has offered once for all a perfect sacrifice that we should be urged upon to present ourselves a sacrifice to God.

But to those persons familiar with and well informed in the Mosaic law see nothing strange about this apostolic teaching. Under the Mossic law there were two kinds of sacrifices or offerings. One kind was for expiation of sin, or guilt, or liability to punishment for sin through the shedding of blood for the remission of sins. The other kind of offerings were for oblation, being thank offerings for the favors received through or for the offerings of expiation. In the Old Testament we learn there was the High Priest going alone once every year into the Holy of Holies, and then there were the ordinary priests by hundreds in turn ministering daily at the altar in the outer court.

So under the Christian economy under which we now live and serve there is but one High Priest Jesus Christ, offered up on Calvary 'once for all' to make expiation or atonement, and then corresponding to the ordinary priesthood under the law, every true believer or imitator of Christ is consecrated by faith in Christ for the daily and continuous presentation of oblations, thank offerings of praise and giving of thanks to God. In the Christian temple where the redeemed worship in spirit and in truth, presenting their bodies a living sacrifice, there is but one High Priest, Jesus Christ the righteous making One, whose sacrifices having been already offered "once for all" cannot and need not be repeated; and in consequence of this all believers, old and young rich or poor, bond or free, male or female, are priests alike in the presentation of a living sacrifice. This is the universal priesthood which is disputed by the Romish ritualists, and seems to be so dimly perceived even by millions of Protestants.

That this is the proper doctrine many other scriptures besides the text confirm. By Him therefore let us offer unto God continually the sacrifice of praise, that is the fruit of our lips, giving thanks unto his name; but to do good and communicate forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.—Hebrews xiii 15-16.

Peter brings out the same idea. To whom (Christ) coming as unto a living stone, ye also as living stones are built up a spiritual house and holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. Ye are a royal priesthood.—1 Peter ii 4, 5.

The sacrifices offered by Christ's priests and people in that of High Priest making atonement for sin "once for all." Then there is a sense in which all truly sanctified Christians are priests consecrated to offer spiritual oblations or living sacrifices to God, holy and acceptable, which is their reasonable service, exercising their noblest and best faculties—the reasoning powers. The apostolic teachers, while they magnify the work of our Lord Jesus, would not have true believers forget their own consecrated character or neglect to present their appropriate offerings.

The sacrifice or offering of oblation that we who profess the name of Christ are to present are our bodies. Not to do with our bodies as Abraham thought to do with Isaac, or that poor Adam Freeman did with his little daughter; for the Christian's offering of oblation is to be a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, a reasonable service. Presenting the body without the mind is mere hypocrisy, and bodily exercise profits little. In presenting our bodies we are to present ourselves in every sense of the word,—soul, body, and spirit. The transformation of the soul should be manifested through the body, either because the body is the organ of practical activity or as an indication that the sanctification of Christian life is to extend to that portion of man's nature which is seemingly under the bondage of sin.

Let not sin reign in your mortal bodies that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof; neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin, but yield (or present) yourselves unto God as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.—Romans vi 12, 13.

In behalf of the Thessalonians the apostle prays that God would santify them wholly, soul, body, and spirit. A good reason appears for all this from the fact that it is through the body that all the evil that is in the unrenewed heart comes forth into visible manifestation and action. So it is through and by means of the body, at least so long as this earthly life lasts with us, that all gracious principles and affections of believers reveal themselves in outward life. As illustrative of this let it be observed that when the eye is turned away from beholding vanity and finds pleasure in viewing the glory of God, the eye has thereby become a living sacrifice. When the ear becomes disgusted with slander, flattery, profanity, or sin, and hears the call of the needy and the entreaties of the afflicted the ear has become thereby a living sacrifice. When due attention is given to the startling words: "The mouth of a strange woman is a deep pit, and the abhorred of the Lord shall fall therein," and the conduct remains decent, that conduct is a living sacrifice. When the tongue no longer speaks deceitful, malicious, impure, or ungodly words, and is ready at all suitable times and places to speak a word for God defend the innocent, comfort the sorrowing, pray for them that hate us, then the tongue becomes a living sacrifice with which God is well pleased.

When for Christ's sake and for his name the hand lends itself to no iniquity and refuses to write a falsehood, or to raise itself against the innocent or the weak, and is ever ready to help in the cause of holiness, justice, goodness, and mercy, behold that hand has become a living sacrifice. When the foot refuses to tread the secret, downward, and dangerous path of dalliance, or walk in the way of the ungodly, but is diligent in the way of keeping God's commandments, and is swift in running to help those in trouble, forthwith it has become a living sacrifice.

So does it appear that whenever "our bodies" are prevented from becoming the "instruments of unrighteousness," and are used only as the servents of Jesus Christ our Lord, they will be living sacrifices unto the Lord and well-pleasing unto God. Thus all who are Christians may readily perceive that a grand service is justly required of their bodies and that their bodies may become as truly ministerial servants of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost as are the temples that were before the future.

O that with such a blessed thing We may upon him cast, In holy work and praise and song, Consecrate ourselves, our all.

AMEN.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hear ing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TIRES THAT LEAK.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with pings, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the punctures, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the punctures, as in cut No. 3.

No. 2. No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every other kind we have of tires that "soak like a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and everybody knows their punctures. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether other tires last as long as Morgan & Wright single tubes, or when the Morgan & Wright guarantee covers, Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright four repair shops, located in the principal cities.

N. B.—When you have a puncture, use right off. Keep a tire kit, which it has a tack or nail in it, any damage is consequence.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

This paper is prepared to pay a tribute to the memory of a pioneer citizen of our county, the late David Hannah, Esq., of the Old Field branch of Elk. He was a son of David Hannah, senior, who was the progenitor of the Hannah family, one of the oldest in Pocahontas. David Hannah, senior, was a native of Ireland. He married a Miss Gibson, who was reared in Augusta County, Virginia, and upon his marriage with Elizabeth Gibson settled at the mouth of Locust Creek soon after the Revolutionary war. He possessed some practical knowledge of medicine of the botanical school, and did a good deal of practice in frontier times. He was probably the first person that ever practiced physic in lower Pocahontas. Doctor and Mrs Elizabeth Hannah were the parents of six daughters and four sons.

Ann became Mrs Joseph Oldham and Lucinda married William Oldham, their homes were near the source of Locust Creek. Mary Hannah *was married to John Mol*chan and lived in what is now Webster County. Elizabeth Hannah became Mrs William Bennett and lived in Harrison County, W. Va. Jennie Hannah was married to the late Samuel Whiting, on Drooping Mountain, where the Whiting family now lives. Her son Ebenezer married Sallie McMillion and lived on the Whiting homestead. Nancy Hannah became the wife of James Cochran, and lived near the Greenbrier border.

William Hannah and John Hannah died in early youth.

Joseph Hannah married Elizabeth Burnsides on Greenbrier river, and settled on Elk where the venerable John Hannah his son now lives over eighty years of age. Materials for a sketch of Joseph Hannah's family are in hand and may appear in due time.

David Hannah, junior, the subject of this article, married Margaret Burnsides on the Greenbrier east of Hillsboro, a daughter of John Burnsides and his wife Mary Walker, of Augusta County. Her family and the family of General J. A. Walker, of Wythville, Virginia, are closely related. He was one of the last commanders of the Stonewall Brigade. He settled on Elk where William Gibson now lives, and reared a large family of worthy sons and daughters.

Isabella Hannah was married to the late John Varner, Esq., and settled at Split Rock, a few miles down Elk, and built up a good home with their industry and economy. Their children were Margaret, now Mrs Clinton Slanker; David Varner, a Confederate soldier killed in war; Mary Varner, afterwards Mrs Robert Wilson, and lived near Lexington, Virginia; John Varner and Samuel Varner, at Linwood; Susan Varner, now Mrs William Snyder, in Iowa; William Varner, at Old Field Branch; Alice Varner became Mrs John Stewart, near Valley Head, Randolph; Jennie Varner was married to Hamilton Snyder and located in Taylor County, Iowa; Benjamin Varner married Ella Moore, of Knapp's Creek, lived a while on the Split Rock homestead, and finally moved to Iowa, where he now resides.

Elizabeth Hannah, daughter of David Hannah, junior, was married to Marinus J. Van Reenen, and settled in Iowa. Mr Van Reenen was a native of Holland. His father's family was attached to a band of Holland emigrants who were induced to colonize on Lauret Run, in 1843, by the Rev John Schoenhoven, of New York. The Highlands of Pocahontas were not congenial to persons from a populous Holland city in the Netherlands, and after grievous privations the colony disbanded. Some went west, others remained in Pocahontas and are excellent people. The Hollanger came in this band also. The names of Elizabeth Van Reenen's children are David, Robert, and Mary.

John Burnsides Hannah, son of David Hannah, junior, the subject of this biographic sketch, married Margaret McClure and located on part of the "Old Field" homestead where he now lives. The following particulars are given in reference to their children: Mary is now Mrs John Beverage, near Clover Lick; Samuel David married Amanda Moore and settled on the Hogsett place; Wallace died while young; William Boude Hannah, late of Frost, whose wife was Miss Birdie Dilley; John Ellis Hannah married Malinda Catherine Sharp, and settled on the homestead; Nancy was married to Fle'cher Dilley, and lives near West Union; Ivie Viola, Edgar Russell, and Lena Mary died while young.

David Hannah, the third of the ancestral name, was first married to Rebecca Moore, daughter of the late Isaac Moore, Esq., of Edray; second marriage to Miss Margaret Jane McClure, daughter of Arthur McClure, lower Pocahontas, and settled in Iowa, thence moved to Missouri. The names of his children were James, Joseph, Mary, Margaret, and Julia.

Robert Hannah, of David Hannah the pioneer, married Jennie Burk and settled in Iowa. John is the name of the only one of his children known to the writer.

William Hannah, one of the twins born to Mr and Mrs David Hannah of pioneer memory, married Catherine Rhinehearh, of Randolph County, and settled on Pine Flat, head of Swago. William's family were three sons and a daughter. His son James married Maggie Auldridge, a daughter of Thomas Auldridge, and lives near the head of Dry Creek. Eugenins married Jennie Kellison and lives near Poage's lane. Margaret is Mrs Kenny Kinnison, on Swago. Burleigh married Miss Lula Perry on the Greenbrier.

Joseph Hannah, the other twin son of the pioneer, married Elizabeth Cool, daughter of Mr and Mrs John Cool, of Webster County, and lives in that county.

The foregoing particulars illustrating the family history of David Hannah, senior, have been largely gathered from the reminiscences of his son, John B. Hannah, Esq., and the compiler would hereby make grateful mention of the important assistance given.

The writer remembers the personality of the venerable pioneer very vividly. In early youth I saw him frequently, and he was very interesting to me from the fact Mr Hanna had been off to the war of 1812. To me an old soldier seemed more than human. He had an interesting way of relating his adventures, and was fond of talking about the war. He was at his best when telling how he felt when aroused one morning before day to get ready for an attack as the British were reported as coming. He arose and put on his accoutrements quickly as possible and took his place in the ranks and moved off to fight. His hat kept falling off as he marched until it became *so troublesome that he was deter*mined to find out the reason why it would not stay on his head. It had never been so hard to keep on before because it was a good fit. When the troops halted he examined his head and found the hairs were all on end and stiff as bristles and were pushing the hat off fast as he had put it on. The hair kept stiff until the order was given to return to camp, when it all became limber enough then and the hat was no more trouble. He found out afterwards that the whole affair was a make believe scheme to try the new soldiers to find out how they would conduct themselves when ordered into battle. This was near Norfolk.

The story, however, he seemed the most fond of telling was about his experience in the hospital tent. Before his term of service had expired he was prostrated by fever and given up as a critical case, and very strict orders were given not to let him have a drop of anything cool to drink. He noticed that there were whiskey and water on the table for the nurses's use and he determined to have some at all hazards. The attendant came to him and found the young soldier so weak and stupid that he seemed to know nothing, and was unable to lift even his hand.

So the hospital man thought there would be no risk to run were he to leave the bottle and pitcher on the table while he would step out and get some fresh air. Soon as his back was turned the sick soldier crawled to the table, mixed the liquor and water, and drank till he could drink no more, and crawled back to his bunk, and when the nurse returned he was surprised to find his patient apparently asleep and the skin showing a tendency to moisture. Finally the sweat broke, and when he had possumed long enough he opened his eyes when the doctor came to look at him, and he seemed greatly pleased with the changes in the patient's condition.

"You were mighty near gone, old fellow, and if we had not kept cold water away from you where would you be now?"

The soldier kept his secret, and as he was beginning to get stronger the liquor was kept out of sight. He thought he would have mended much more rapidly if things had been left on the table as before.

The old soldier worked hard in building up his home, and the privations he and his family had to endure would seem unbearable now. He was kind and hospitable to a fault, ready to share the last he had with the visitor that might desire shelter and food. He was much esteemed by all of his acquaintances.

Finally the end came. One of the prettiest places near his home was selected and they placed him to sleep under the green sod that his own hands had helped to clear away. W. T. P.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The open letter that appeared in The Times two or three weeks *since has attracted considerable at*tention. It has awakened inquiry in reference to the question whether it is worth while for "the wicked" to pray. To our great surprise we learn that it is a very prevalent opinion that the 'prayers of the wicked availeth' nothing, and for that reason numbers of people abstain from prayer themselves and rely upon the prayers of others, "the righteous," for such divine influence to be communicated to them as will make it worth while to try to pray for themselves.

We can see some show of reason why such a view should be so common, but will not mention it now. The columns of this journal is not the proper place for such a discussion as a statement of the reason would occasion; hence it is we wish all reference to the open letter to close with this article. We lay before our readers the following judicious and timely observations offered by the Rev Moses May, a venerable minister of the M. P. church:

"I wish to say this to the writer of the "open letter" that he has my most sincere sympathy and earnest prayers. It is true the Apostle James says: "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," (James v. 16) but nowhere is it said in the Bible that 'the prayer of the wicked availeth nothing.' The Pharisee said: 'We know that God heareth not sinners'—John ix 31, but such are not good authority for those who have confidence in Christ or wish to be Christians. There is a difference between impenitent and penitent sinners. God is ready for Christ's sake to hear the prayers of all truly penitent sinners for pardon of their sins and peace.

"Our friend should not be so despondent, for there is no real reason for anything of the kind. The Publican prayed God be merciful to me a sinner,' and went down to his home justified rather than the other who had such a happy good opinion of himself. This man confessed his sins to God and God heard him therefore it is false that God heareth not penitent sinners. The dying thief was a great sinner. Christ heard him and saved him at once, not hesitating a moment in this case, neither will he in any case when the sinner is sincerely penitent. Dear brother, pray for yourself earnestly and often and if will not be long until you will be able to shout your praises to God.

"Christ died for sinners, and whosoever with a degree of penitence and conviction that will surprise you

A Hatfield Tragedy.

James Felts killed Caleb Hatfield and Joe Mallard in Mingo County last week. The account of affray is given as follows:

The double killing took place at Chaud's Gap, which is about ten miles away from here, and is on a ridge of the Cumberland Mountain, just across the West Virginia line. All three of the men engaged in the tragedy were young and there had never been any open antagonism between them. They met at Pineville on Sunday and had a 'good time' drinking. They left there in the afternoon and rode on their mules over the mountains to Chaud's Gap. It was getting late then, and, as they had plenty of moonshine whiskey with them and several packs of cards, it finally settled that they camp for the night and have a game.

The others, assented, and, building a campfire, they began to enjoy themselves. They played and drank all night, and the luck had gone first one way and then another it finally settled against Felts. By morning Hatfield and Mallard had all of his money. They were very drunk, and when Felts had lost his last dollar he was desperate. He put up his saddle and bridle and lost them. Then he sinked his mule against $10, and that went too.

'It hain't in a Felts to git the best er a Hatfield," sneered Caleb as he raked in the last chips.

"Naw; you bet they cain't,' assented Mallard. 'Yer uncle Cap showed Jim's uncle that 'onet, did n't he?'

Cap Hatfield had killed Jim's uncle in a card game and Jim resented the reference.

'Mebbe Cap Hatfield did,' he snapped, 'but it's more'n any of his family kin do.'

Caleb laughed in a drunken fashion and declared that he guessed he could do as much as his 'uncle Cap.' Felts paid no attention, and Mallard helped along the quarrel with a slap on Felt's face. Felts struck at him and then Mallard threw the contents of a half-empty jug of whiskey in Felts' face and told him to get out of the way.

"I'll put you ont of the way Joe,' the young fellow yelled, and he drew his revolver. Before he could pull trigger young Hatfield had drawn a knife and was coming at him with death in his looks. Felts turned and ran behind a tree, beginning to fire as he fled. He dropped Hatfield at the first shot with a bullet in his leg and then put another ball through Hatfield's bowels.

Meantime Mallard had drawn his revolver and was trying to fire when Felts dropped him from cover and finished the tragedy by emptying every remaining bullet into his body.

Felts surrendered, and as there were no witnesses his story will probably go.

Causalties in Greenbrier.

From the Ronceverte News of last week we learn of the following accidents:

R. H. Boone, of Irish Corner, had three horses killed by lightning on August 10.

Milton Brown was bitten by a copperhead at the spoke and wheel factory, Ronceverte. He was struck on the finger. The wound was washed out, a chicken cut open and placed on it, stimulants administered, and a ligature placed to retard swelling, and no ill effects were experienced.

James Grove, an Englishman, coachman for Mr A. D. Bruce, of White Sulphur Springs, was killed in a runaway accident at the Springs. The horse became frightened at a perambulator and ran away. Deceased was 54 years old, and leaves a wife and three children in England.

Captain John Peters found two men, C. J. Shumaker and W. L. Shumaker lying between the tracks on the C. & O. at Ronceverte. One was dead and the other was seriously wounded. The men were brothers, aged 23 and 26 years, and lived near Meadow Bluff. They had been riding on a freight train and probably jumped or were thrown from it.

W. T. Patterson, a farmer living in the employ of the St. Lawrence Company, was shot and killed at Cass (called Gay, Tennessee, by the U. S. Postal Guide) by Engineer Clark's Clarion. Patterson was trying to force his way into the boat when he was killed. After leaving West Virginia Patterson changed his name to Wilson. Miller is what he had been using. Several witness in the Kanawha Coburn murder case just ended.

Bubbles or Medals.

"Best sarsaparillas." When you think of it how contradictory that term is. For there can be only one best—one best sarsaparilla, as there is one highest mountain, one largest river, one deepest ocean. And that best sarsaparilla is——? There's the rub! You can measure mountain height and ocean depth, but how test sarsaparilla? You could if you were chemists. But then do you need to test it? The World's Fair Committee tested it,—and thoroughly. They went behind the label on the bottle. What did this sarsaparilla test result in? Every make of sarsaparilla shut out of the Fair, except Ayer's. So it was that Ayer's was the only sarsaparilla admitted to the World's Fair. The committee found it the best. They had no room for anything that was not the best. And as the best, Ayer's Sarsaparilla received the medal and awards due its merits. Remember the word—best—it is bubble any breath can blow; but there are pins to prick such bubbles. Those others are blowing more "best sarsaparilla" bubbles since the World's Fair pricked the bubble of ours. True, but Ayer's Sarsaparilla has the medal. The pin that scratches the medal proves it gold. The pin that pricks the bubble proves it wind. We point to medals, not bubbles, when we say: The best sarsaparilla is Ayer's.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Remarkable Case of Chronic Diarrhoea.

In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contacted chronic diarrhoea. It has given me a great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50 cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great Remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write me. Yours gratefully, HENRY STEINBERGER, Allentown, Pa. Sold by druggists.

In the Atlantic Monthly of this month Mr John Muir, who made known to the world the great glacier in Alaska which now bears his name, begins a discussion of "The American Forests" in these words: "The forests of America, however slashed by man, must have been a great delight to God; for they were the best He ever planted. The whole continent was a garden, and from the beginning it seemed to be favored above all the other wild gardens and groves of the globe." He goes on to describe the preparation made for the trees, and the planting of the groves with five hundred species of trees, "all of them in some way useful for man, ranging in size for twenty-five feet in height and less than one foot in diameter at the ground to four hundred in height and more than twenty feet in diameter—lordly monarchs proclaiming the gospel of beauty like apostles." He tells how these magnificent forests have been ruthlessly destroyed, "and the smoke of their burning has risen to heaven more than two hundred years." He proclaims to those who have ears to hear that every other civilized nation has been compelled to protect its forests and arrays unanswerable reasons for preserving a large portion of those remaing within our boundaries—"to save them from fools."

It is always gratifying to receive testimonials for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and when the endorsement is from a physician it is especially so. "There is no more satisfactory or effective remedy than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," writes Dr R. E. Bixler, physician and pharmacist, of Liberty Mills, Ind, "and as I have used it in my own family and sold it in his drug store for six years, he should certainly know. For sale by druggists.

There is no occasion for alarm. The last legislature did not abolish the jurisdiction of the circuit courts by making a clerical error and referring to Section 2 of chapter 112 of the code. The preface of the act explains in such a way that no person could be deceived. The mistake was apparent on the face of the act.

AUGUST 16, Michel Angiolillo, the assassin of Premier Canovas, was sentenced to be garroted within the prison walls, soon as arrangements can be made consistent with civilized decorum.

LAST week matters assumed a very threatening appearance in Pennsylvania and at points in West Virginia. There was a riot at Corinth, W. Va.; murder and destruction of property near Pittsburg.

ON Monday, August 16, Subadar Gurninkh Singh, one of the finest native Indian officers in the British army, was shot dead at Simla by a Sepoy who was running amuck. Affairs in India are assuming a very serious aspect. In the recent defence of the Chitral Singh was especially noticed and rewarded for gallantry.

J. P. PEALEY, of Buffalo, Wayne County, a wealthy lumberman and cattle dealer, was at Huntington Saturday, August 14, and met Miss Ida Wyant, a good looking lady and of fine family. After a courtship of fifteen minutes they agreed to marry, and in ten minutes later a license and minister were forthcoming and they were soon married. By Monday the wealthy, impulsive West Virginian was tired of his contract and will seek a divorce.

DOLLAR WHEAT.

Dollar wheat, which is such an important feature of the farmer's millenium, is now a real thing. In the Chicago market wheat for immediate delivery was $1 and over, and the wheat exchange presented a scene of wildest disorder. There are two ways to raise wheat. One is by the man who makes "two blades of grass grow where one grew before"; and the other who raises wheat cent by cent until he pockets a fortune by a day's work. The farmer knows how the first is done, but the latter plan is beyond him, and he could just as easily raise himself over a stake and ridered fence by his boot legs, or add a cubit to his stature, as he could cause the wheat market to fluctuate a fraction of a cent.

The farmer knows this should not be, and of late he has been wildly reaching out, especially in Kansas, to keep other people from juggling in wheat and so equalize matters with the capitalists. It has been a long time since the brokers have put wheat up. But last week the machinations of the wicked were along the lines wished for by the farmer. They bulled and they bulled until the great grain shearers of Chicago put wheat up beyond the dollar mark, and the farmer is glad that he is a living.

UNNECESSARY EXPENSES INCURRED BY TRUSTEES.

Editor of THE POCAHONTAS TIMES.

If you will allow me the privilege, I would like thro the columns of your paper to call the attention of the citizens and taxpayers of our county to the enormous expense of running our public school, outside of the salaries paid teachers.

I am truly in favor of our free school system, economically administered, but I am opposed to the heavy expenses incurred by our trustees for fuel, making fires, sweeping, etc. This is a country in which there is no lack of wood, which can be obtained for almost nothing and consequently there is no excuse whatever for the large bills presented by most of the trustees to the Board of Education each year for fuel. The majority of our trustees will, without thinking, sign almost any account presented to them for wood furnished. I know of accounts allowed persons for furnishing wood in this district far in excess of the price which individuals, in the same place, were paying for wood.

Our taxpayers are groaning under the burden they have to carry. The Board can not pay teachers the salary they should receive, and this is due, in a great measure, to the extravagant and unnecessary expenditures made by the trustees. Now the question naturally arises, how is this to be remedied?

In answer we say that, in the first place, the Board of Education should be more careful in the selection and appointment of the trustees. They should only appoint honest, business men. Persons who realize the responsibility of their position and who will try faithfully to perform the duties required of them.

They should advertise all contracts for furnishing wood, sweeping houses and making fires, and interest themselves in having said work done at the lowest, possible price. They should reject any and all bids which in their judgment is excessive, and employ some one to do the work at a reasonable price.

Taking into consideration the number of schools we have in the County, a few dollars saved by the trustees of each school will amount to a considerable sum. A few years ago it was a very rare thing to find audited by our Boards an account for furnishing wood, making fires or making fires. The patrons of the school furnished the wood, the boys would cut the same, and the girls would attend to the sweeping of the house. Under this management everyone was benefitted by the amount saved, whereas now only the contractor is benefitted.

As president of the Board of Education of Hunterville district, I desire to state that our Board in the future intends to be more careful in the allowance of claims of the contractor above referred to, and a person holding orders signed by trustees must show that the contract was awarded legally by the trustees met together as a board of trustees.

I hope the several Boards of Education of this County will cooperate with us in trying to lessen the running expenses of our public schools. Hoping to hear from others interested in this subject.

Respectfully,
J. H. DOTTS,
President of the Board of Education of Huntersville District.

Two large rattlers were killed quite recently near the residence of J. W. Lowry. Mr Lowry thinks there were about fifteen hundred lives and four large white suckers taken near his mill during the present fishing season.

THE Hazlewood Company, of Jack, Webster County, has made an assignment and a receiver has been appointed. A number of Pocahontas people are affected by it. Peter Dow, a Canadian, who now resides in Pocahontas, was a large holder and has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. He took $4,000 into that concern and has nothing to show for it but several acres of land worth $1 to $5 per acre. Mr Dow had a job of cutting about one hundred thousand feet of timber and had some mill machinery, but it was all swept away by the flood. This is very hard on Mr Dow, as he has been a hard worker all his life and has accumulated but little. He and his family have returned to Pocahontas. J. B. McNutt took charge of Hazlewood's affairs and is now engaged in wagon. If the Hazlewood Company's affairs can be settled on such a basis, pure and simple, they will be able to pay dollar for dollar. Their indebtedness is not large, and with their timber and mill machinery, which is said to be of the best, they should be able to recover a new lease of life and be soon resuming the run of the mill.

"The Overseer's Warning."

The town was aroused by a mounted messenger last Monday morning about daybreak, and the several citizens rolled out of bed with direful forbodings that some terrible thing had happened. Every man was visited and all the household alarmed. Some thought there must be a great conflagration in the business block, while others feared there had been a cloudburst up Knapp's Creek and that the waters were about to engulf the town. It was worse that either of these. The newly appointed road overseer, Grandpap H. McLaughlin, was around warning the hands to work the road next Saturday. He had taken the opportunity and selected this hour to find every man at home, and he succeeded admirably, as sleepy heads popped out of doors and windows as the overseer passed over the town.

With the approbation of the sleepy - heads, we give him the clan's "Warning to MacLochlin."

MacLochlin, MacLochlin, beware of the day
When you wake us again in this summary way,
For a scene of confusion rushes bold o'er my sight,
And the Surveyor's involved in a desperate fight;
'Tis a dream of a scrap in the dawning for blood,
And Surveyor McLochlin is covered with mud.

The dawn was just tinging the clouds in the east
When MacLochlin came charging around on his beast;
He was road overseer of Marlinton Glen
And he was up early a-warning his men;
He shouted outside of each settler's abode:
"You've got to work out your full time on the road."

The haughty, the humble, all started in fear,
At the call of that tyrant, the road overseer;
Throwing open the casement they ripped and they tore,
While MacLochlin rode on to some other man's door;
And the sweet is repose at the breaking of day
To the call of MacLochlin it had to give way.

But the guns are all loaded, the triggers are set,
And the town has resolved that each fellow wi l get
A handful of rocks, and other such gear,
So when he rides early to wake us next year,
And break in on our slumbers with discordant sounds
We can each of us run him clean off of the grounds.

A "Spec" on the Institute.

The Institute is a thing of the past, but not a "joy forever" Tho a few may long remember it, the greater portion of the teachers will pass it by as the greatest bore of an Institute ever held in the county. The program was boldly condemned by teachers and public generally as being a very weak thing, and our instructors failed to make profitable application of what good there was in it.

The attendance was good, but if the teachers of this county have to bear the torture of such institutes they had better rebel. SPEC.

A Chance to Make $20,000 in Ten Days.

This not a fake advertisement. Some Pocahontas lady can secure this prize, and those who fill the bill had better speak at once. The following letter has been received by a gentleman living near Marlinton, and the scheme is now working. Several names have been proposed, but these are in blissful ignorance of the chance they have:

"I will be in your neighborhood in 1 or 2 weeks. My business is to get a wife. I think you could assist me. I will tell you the kind I want. I want her age to be somewhere between 35 to 47. I want a good one and a good family. You know the kind that will suit. Will you please assist me. Please ans. this. Respectfully," etc.

We understand the gentleman is a widower 48 or 49 years of age; a Virginian; good looking, and worth about $20,000.

A Barn Burned.

On the night of the 22nd inst. J. C. Gay's tan barn with all its contents was destroyed by fire, loss $2,000, insurance $1,500 in Farmer's Home Co. A heavy thunder storm prevailed from 10 o'clock to 11, and Mr Gay is of the opinion that lightning struck the barn and started the fire slowly somewhere in it. The fire was not discovered until 3 A. M. at which time the roof was falling in. Luckily no live stock was in the barn, except a cow and a calf and horse.

The building was 54x64, and 20 feet high from basement to square on 30x60 of main building. 140 lineal feet of 18 inch stone wall, 8 feet high, is a complete wreck. Entailed a mowing machine, everything belonging to the farm in the shape of farming utensils, wagons, buggies, harness, saddles, etc., was burnt, not even a strap left.

Mr Gay had put a greater part of his hay away in the barn, and had just finished housing a day or two before it burned, and, as he says, made the finest stack and the best hay he ever harvested.

I visited the scene of the wreck this morning with Mr Gay, and can know whereof I write.

Twenty Years....

For more than twenty years we have been telling how Scott's Emulsion overcomes the excessive waste of the system, puts on flesh, nourishes and builds up the body, making it the remedy for all wasting diseases of adults and children, but it isn't possible for us to tell the story in a more truthful of newspaper type.

We have had prepared for us by a physician a little book, telling in easy words how and why Scott's Emulsion benefits, and a postal card request will be enough to have it sent to you free. To-day would be a good time to send for it.

SCOTT & BOWNE, New York.

DIED.

Mrs Elizabeth McLaughlin.

August 23, 1897, at the residence of her nephew, Mr C. L. Moore, on Brown's Creek, Mrs Elizabeth McLaughlin, relict of the late Hugh McLaughlin, in the 90th year of her age. She has been a sufferer from paralysis for more than a year, and while her death was sudden, yet it was expected that she might thus pass away.

She was a person highly esteemed by her many friends, and was the eldest daughter of the late William Sharp, Esq., near Verdant Valley. Her tenacity of life was very remarkable. At different times in the past few years it seemed impossible for her to survive, and yet she would rally and be*come comparatively strong* and well. To a Christian friend she remarked two or three years since that she often felt as if she would like "to be going." And when asked if she thought she would be at rest her reply was: "Indeed I hope so."

We would comfort ourselves with the hope that God spared her long enough to recover strength before our esteemed aged friend went hence to be no more; and that He did not cast her off in the time of old age nor forsook her when her her strength failed. W. T. F.

Samuel J. Beard, Esq.

Samuel J. Beard, of Odessa, Mo., died on the 12th day of August, 1897, aged sixty-five years. His last illness was of two weeks' duration. He leaves surviving him three children, Mrs Rachel Burns, of Arkansas; a son James, and daughter Mary. He was a native of Pocahontas, the fourth son of the late Josiah Beard, Esq. He served in the Confederate army; emigrated to Missouri when a young man, and married a Miss Jordan of that State. A short time since he sold his farm and had moved to the town of Odessa.

*His numerous friends and rela*tives in West Virginia will mourn his unexpected decease, but will be comforted to feel that his was the death of a faithful and devoted Christian.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and ever comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

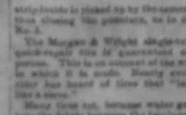
TIRES THAT LEAK.



The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with pings, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair strip inside is pinned up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, as in cut No. 3.

No. 2. No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every other has leaked of tires that "leak like a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet how seldom they puncture. This is due to the fabric.

Any bicycle dealer whether he handles our tire or not can supply Morgan & Wright tires. Ask him what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are supplied both in single or two-tube. Either Morgan or at any of the Morgan & Wright four repair stores, located as the accompanying list.

If you have not heard a pamphlet describing Morgan & Wright tires, or if you are a rider of bicycles, and have a desire to see it, any manufacturer will send it to you.

The Osborne SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other, Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling backwards about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible, without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and tempering are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

Mr William Edmiston, in whose memory this biographic paper has been prepared, was one of the early settlers of the lower Levels. He seems to have been born and reared in upper Greenbrier, near Falling Spring, and his ancestry came from Augusta County. He was evidently of English descent; tho his ancestry was from the north of Ireland and called Scotch - Irish and known as such among the Greenbrier pioneers.

His wife was Rebecca Walkup, from the Falling Spring vicinity, where there are families of the name now residing. She was a sister of the late John Walkup, of Falling Spring, a greatly respected citizen and exemplary Christian man. One of her sisters was the wife of Samuel Beard, who was in his day a person greatly esteemed for his elevated manly character. Samuel Beard was a brother of the late Josiah Beard, and his home was in Renick's Valley.

Upon his marriage with Rebecca Walkup Mr Edmiston settled a few miles south of Hillsboro, on lands now adjoining the farm known as the Pocahontas County Infirmary, which lands are now in the possession of Mr F. A. Renick and others. Their family consisted of one son, James Edmiston, and four daughters Rebecca, Jennie, Mattie, and Margaret.

James Edmiston married Miss Margaret Woods, of Nicholas county. He settled on Cook's Dry Run at "The Sinks," which is now known as the Peter Clark Place. The names of James Edmiston's children known to the writer were Samuel, William, Christopher, and Rebecca. This daughter Rebecca became the wife of Jackson Edmiston, son of Andrew Edmiston, a brother of William Edmiston.

Early in the forties James Edmiston sold his possessions to the late Addrew Johnson, and migrated to Iowa, where many of his descendants now live.

Rebecca Edmiston, daughter of William Edmiston, became the second wife of Jonathan Jordan, son of the pioneer merchant.

Jennie Edmiston was married to Isaac Hill, son of the venerated Richard Hill, the pioneer. The names of her children were William, Richard, Nancy, and Rebecca. Upon Mr Hill's decease she and her family removed to the State of Iowa.

Martha Edmiston married Geo. Hill, the youngest son of Richard Hill the pioneer, and settled on Hill's Creek and spent her life there. Her son Franklin Hill is in Putnam County, West Virginia. Isaac Hill now lives on Bruffey's Creek. Her daughter was married to John Bruffey, Junior, and settled in Jackson County.

Margaret Edmiston, the fourth daughter of William Edmiston, was married to George McCoy, moved to Cedar County, Iowa, and were among the first settlers of their vicinity and grew up with the development of that renowned county. William McCoy, their son, could not forget the girl he left behind, but returned to Pocahontas and married Elizabeth Grimes, daughter of the late Hon John Grimes.

These few particulars illustrating something of the family history of those good people have been laid before our readers with the assistance of the late Mrs Nancy Calhoun and the venerable James McCallum. The writer has some remembrance of these persons personally, but not very distinct to be any important impressions.

Mr Edmiston and the late Samuel Doyle Poage were congenial friends and attached Christian brethren, tho of different persuasions and rather strenuous in their respective doctrinal views. This cultivated that their hearts were imbued with a pious fervor that got the better of their more intellectual doctrinal notions. They agreed to disagree, and cultivate their Christian friendship while wrestling about their respective schools and formularies.

Mr Edmiston's group was of the highly emotional, evangelistic type, and he bears the emotional seemed to be the first to kindle and burn with the holy fervor that makes religious exercises so interesting to many persons. His Christian character was above reproach and all regarded him as sincere. He was looked up to as a model Christian, and had it not been for the somewhat counteracting influence exerted by Nathaniel Kinnison, a silent, calm Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile, the impression might have been no one could expect to be a model Christian like Mr Edmiston without his zeal and demonstrative fervor.

Such might have been the impression, but when the characters of Nathaniel Kinnison and Davies Poage were considered the impression prevailed there were different ways in which people could be warm-hearted, genuine Christians, and so there was mutual respect and lovely Christian fellowship.

For many years Mr Edmiston was a pillar in the M. E. Church, and the secret of his influence was his lovely Christian deportment. Nathaniel Kinnison was also a pillar in the M. E. Church, but his piety was that developed in the calm retreat, the silent shade, that seemed to him by God's bounty made for those who worship God, so suitable for personal prayer and praise to the unseen tho ever present one.

When far advanced in life, Mr Edmiston vacated his old pleasant home amid the gently rolling lands pleasant groves and fruitful orchards for a home on Hill's Creek, and his last days were spent amid the inviting scenes that surround the place where Daniel Peck now lives.

The writer feels grateful that he ever knew this good old man even to a slight extent, and may the time never come when the presence of persons of like Christian fervor, generous, liberal, fraternal impulses cease to exist; for should such a dire calamity befall the county then envy, strife, confusion and many evil works will be tolerated,—all in the name too and for the sake of religion.

As I write I seem to see and hear William Edmiston as he appeared more than fifty years ago in prayer-meetings at Colonel John Hill's or Nattie Kinnison's singing as he only could sing:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love,
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

"Before our Father's throne
We pour our ardent prayers,
Our fears, our hopes, our aims are one,
Our comforts, and our cares.

"This glorious hope revives
Our courage by the way;
While each in expectation lives,
And longs to see the day.

"From sorrow, toil, and pain
And sin we shall be free;
And perfect love and friendship
Through all eternity." [reign

Whoever writes fifty years hence about the people now living may it be his privilege to write about many persons who loved Christ most of all and their neighbors as themselves, as William Edmiston had the reputation of doing.

"Sy-fazing with his Je-spicy."

In the West when a young man gallivants around the country with his sweetheart the people call it "sy-fazing." It is therefore no uncommon sight to see a nice young man sy-fazing with his jespicy.

Jones and Henry Webber, who had been separated forty years, during which they had exchanged letters once, met by accident in a grocer shop at Presque Isle, Me. John lives in Maine and Henry in Idaho. Henry had come East to see what changes had been made in his absence.

One of Carlton's latest fear-provoking girls, in answer to the question, surprised and frightened her mamma. The conversation among the other people was to the effect as to heaven, and some one asked the little miss if she did not want to go to heaven when she died. The young girl instead, looked at her father and said: "No, I don't. I don't want to go to heaven. I want to go where papa goes." Kansas City Journal.

At a called meeting of Moffett Poage Camp No 949 U. C. V., held at the court-house at Marlinton on August 14, 1897, Camp was called to order by H. A. Yeager, Commander, and minutes of last meeting read and approved.

The question as to what action this camp will take in regard to the reunion proposed by others, (a notice of which was published in June, 1897), the camp decided to assist and do every thing in its power to facilitate the movement under the direction of the county organization; and there being a number of visiting comrades from other sections of the county present, on motion the proceedings of the camp were closed and the comrades present resolved themselves into a county meeting with H. A. Yeager as chairman and George M. Kee secretary.

THE COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT convenes on the first Tuesday in April, third Tuesday in June, and first Tuesday in October.

COUNTY COURT convenes on the first Tuesday in January, March, and the fourth Tuesday of June and September—June is levy.

FROM a private letter we learn that an earthquake shock was felt in Giles County last Friday.

THE Eastham murder case from Tucker County will come up before the Supreme Court at Charlestown, September 2. Judge Dent, on motion of Colonel McGraw, issued a writ of habeas corpus. The regular grand jurors of Tucker County have refused to make an indictment against Eastham for felony, and an indictment for murder was only secured by summoning a special grand jury.

THE Mayoralty of New York is being looked after by men both high and low. It seems to be all the field for good government against Tammany Hall. The good government has had a try at governing the city for some time, and it immediately followed the inferential bad government of Tammany Hall. Why should they fear that the people might choose bad government with their recent experience.

THE Greenbrier District Conference of the M. E. Church held its annual session at Edray last week. The other meetings at this church were about twenty years ago at Hamlin Chapel and in 1887 at the present church. This conference is one of the four forming the Virginia Conferance and comprises the Counties of Rockingham, Augusta, Highland, Bath, Alleghany, Monroe, Summers, Greenbrier, Pocahontas, Pendleton and Hardy. The sermons were greatly appreciated by the hearers and the business of the conference was of a very interesting nature to anyone interested in workings of judicial assemblies. The next session will be in Pendleton County.

CONGRESSMAN DORR must like the McDowell Recorder. It seems that Mr DORR was accused of ungentlemanly conduct on a train, and the matter had been dropped, as libels on public men are not uncommon. It had never been aired in the filthy newspapers. Then comes the Recorder and publishes the whole affair under the guise of a friend wishing to explain, and the public got the whole affair. The Recorder is a Republican paper, and one of the kind of friends that Mr Dorr may well pray to be saved from. Mr Dorr's friends see now that the Democratic press has got a chance at him thro' the McDowell paper, that this Republican paper has the whole blame of the publicity resting upon it. The Charleston Gazette has been saying mean things. The Fayette Republican, Dorr's staunchest advocate, is of the opinion that the Recorder is antagonistic to Dorr. Long live hipocrisy!

SEVEN prisoners broke jail at Welch, McDowell County, last week, by breaking the bars of their cell and digging through a brick wall. Among the number was Seymour Gray, who was under sentence of death, to be hanged September 2 for murder, and Bion Gossip, who killed a policeman at Keystone, August 21. Within the last month or two, prisoners have broken jail in the following counties that the writer calls to mind: Pocahontas, Fayette, Summers, Wood, McDowell, Ritchie, Mingo, and Webster. Victor Hugo had the following passage for the prisoner who escaped:

"Hail to, illumined by that frightful thirst for liberty which changes prisoners into madmen, bars into hatchets, a cripple into a soldier, a pauper into a thief, a scholar, a poet, a child into a bird, stupidity into instinct, instinct into talent, and intellect into genius, invented and improvised the mob of escapes? No one ever knew. It is not always possible to explain success of an escape; the one who breaks prison, as he flies, is himself to a great degree the light of the flight; the effort made for deliverance is an inner surprise; the waiting toward the outlet."

THE MARLINTON REUNION.

The Confederate reunion to be held at Marlinton, September 30, will bring more people to this place than ever assembled on one spot in Pocahontas before. Not less than 5,000 people is the most conservative estimate. Confederate soldiers are coming from Bath, Highland, Greenbrier, Randolph, and all the counties near. There will be three brass bands—from Monterey, Warm Springs, and Academy. The clans will gather as they did in Scotland to the call of Roderick Dhu, and the evening before the reunion the hospitable people of Pocahontas will entertain a host of visiting friends. The next day the crowds will converge towards the town of Marlinton and there assemble in procession and march to the assembly grounds, where the patriotic utterances of the orators will delight old and young, the blue and the gay.

The Pocahontas families will bring hampers filled with good things to eat as only Pocahontas know how to fill them, and there will be abundance for every visitor of the reunion and every stranger within our gates.

One of the great features of the parade will be the horseback procession of pretty girls and their gentlemen escorts. It has been suggested that the same general uniform that was adopted by the girls of Monroe County be used: White waist with red sailor collar and red cuffs, with white stars in corner of collar; black or dark skirt. Sash, red white and; blue cap with thirteen white stars on band. This will have a pretty effect, but in case a lady finds it inconvenient to make this uniform she can ride in this killing line in white waist and dark skirt. As the young men's decorations can be gotten in less time, the announcement of their uniform will be made later. It is not necessary for prospective riders to register their names with the committee in advance, and colors can be obtained on the ground on the day of the parade.

As nearly a month must elapse before the day the full arrangements have not been made, but in our next three issues we will keep the people fully informed as to the program and principal features of the day. Everybody must join in extending the hospitality of the county to our visitors.

Some six or seven hundred men went from this county to the war on the Confederate side, and this was the scene of much activity in the campaigns. General Robert E. Lee pitched his first tent in this county. Wherever you go continually you hear old soldiers say that they have marched thro this county. This opportunity will afford meetings of men who have not seen each other since they were separated in the smoke of a battle field, and it is the pleasing duty of Pocahontas people to give our visitors a good time.

Union entertained 10,000 people at its reunion last Wednesday, and we can do the same if the occasion arises.

SOME ONE visiting the Nashville Centennial, while he saw much to please him, had his pleasure much hindered by the way Southern people treat the letter "r." He heard the expression "foah doahs to the right." It may be he had never noticed nearer home any thing said about "noospapers," and "institootions," and "cricks." It seems there are peculiarities of speech in different parts of our grand old Union. New English dialect may sound queerly to our hearing, but possibly not quite so much as the rough plain speech of the remote north west and southwest does to the New Englanders.

MT. ST. ELIAS has at length been scaled, and the exact height is 18,000 feet. The estimated height had been 18,100 feet. All expeditions heretofore attempted have failed, but a party of Italian members of the Alpine Club, with Prince Luigi at the head accomplished it. The second took eleven hours.

IT was noised around that Judge Okey Johnson had said that the striking miners ought to plead an injunction to restrain the coal operators from hiring new men and have the tide of affairs turn in their favor. The Judge is highly indignant and declares he has never given an opinion that such was law.

The negro, Jerry Brown, was hung at Fayetteville last week and the authorities made such a bungle of the job that the man lived forty-five minutes dangling from a rope. The convulsions of the body were terrible.

Mrs Wilcie Wanless, an aged lady near Mt. Tabor in "the Hills," died at his residence on Friday the 27th, at an advanced age. He was a son of the late Hugh Wandless, and a grand-son of George W. Poage, formerly of the Levels.

Paul Golden, Marlinton's enterprising merchant, has bought of the S. W. Hull stock of goods and is busy moving into new quarters this week. Golden does not hide his light under a bushel, and so we may expect to hear of some startling low prices that will cause a commotion in mercantile circles.

Gilmer County is in a state of excitement over the story of a little girl named Roberts. She says that on coming thro some woods he found the severed head of a severed head of a woman, and that he picked it up and carried it until a strange man came out of the woods and ordered him to throw it down and let her to be gone. Search was made for evidence of the murder, but nothing was discovered.

A stranger in town the other day said that when he was a boy he hunted squirrels with a muzzle loader and used to smooth bore. Shot being scarce he was in the habit of using nails or small stones. One day he shot a gray squirrel on the side of a tree and tho it was killed it did not fall off the tree. On examination it was found to be nailed to the tree. A shingle nail had been driven thro the squirrel into the tree.

A family in "The Hills" is domesticating a very fine groundhog. It makes a lively, interesting pet, and shows great attachment for one of the children for whom it feeds it and plays with it. About dinner-time it is much in evidence, but wants something nicer than the crumbs that might fall from the table. It seems to be out of luck per and ready to pinch feet and nibble of the goodies unless it is given something nice from the hand, when it will retire with a biscuit and consume it in a very dainty manner, sitting erect and holding the food in its hand-like paws.

The marriage of Rev. Henry W. McLaughlin, of Fayette County, and Miss Nellie Brown, of Lewisburg, was solemnized on Tuesday of this week to take place at the residence of Rev R. L. Telford. The groom is a talented minister of the Presbyterian Church, and was born and reared in Pocahontas, at the place where he now resides. The bride elect is a son of M. A. H. McLaughlin, of near Lewisburg. The bride is one of Lewisburg's most popular and accomplished young ladies and a friend and classmate of Mary Moore the captive of Kirk. She is a daughter of Rev. John Brown. They will reside at Fox Creek, Fayette County, where Mr. McLaughlin has a charge.

The surveying corps of the C. & O. R. R. is making a careful and elaborate survey down the banks of the Greenbrier from the mouth of the Greenbrier to Ronceverte. In addition to the large force brought with them, they have hired nine teamsters for three months. It is reported that those teams are to be surveyed, and the branding of point of the ear with the initials of Mr. Moore's name. The three routes will be parallel, one north and south, and one either Denmar, Huntersville, or Marlinton. The route down the Knapp's Creek and Greenbrier Rivers will be the most expensive, but it will be the most valuable. If that route should be followed there would be a tendency to develop that after a railroad built the Greenbrier valley equaled the Connellsville coke region which would pay off the bonds issued by the four road.

The shop and feed mill has been moved to King's planing shops, where it will continue to operate on Fridays as usual.

Doc days closed up Friday, and it is time that the Greenbrier Independent was entering the past dependent herald. Wm. H. Sawyers, of Hinton. He has made good use of the freedom accorded him by the autocratic Greenbrier paper, and has written a number of fiery articles in his inimitable, ante-bellum style during the past season of dog days. It is time now that the Greenbrier Independent should cork him up.

Messrs St Andrew and Edgar Myers, from the Valley, brought out forty-three cattle to Clover Creek last week. About thirty of them were wearing large cattle bells. The writer met them in a narrow forest defile near Frost and the racket gave his horse a fit of conniptions. The tintinnabulation was such that he has heard nothing equal to it since his college days when the students were out "on a calathump."

Mrs Jeff Moore had an adventure with a moccasin or "house-snake." About dusk a large specimen was seen coming through the door of the porch and near the door of the dwelling having a very large rat in its mouth. While parties about the house were looking for something to fight the snake with it suddenly disappeared. In her search for the reptile Mrs Moore reached up and put her hand on a towel that was hanging near where the snake had been seen, and felt something move, and on drawing back her hand the snake put out its head from behind the towel. She pointed it out and a person that was near dispatched it at once.

Passing by a field enveloped in well-known teacher of the public school ploughing for wheat. There seemed to be no brush or briers in sight, and what the smoke meant was a question. It was all made plain when the venerable Morgan Grimes emerged from a fence corner and told the writer he had about put in three acres of burning "bumble bee" and "yellow jacket" nests, the like he had never seen or heard of before. While resting under the shade of a tree with a stump for a writing desk, the writer interviewed Mr Grimes, who furnished material for a long forthcoming chapter of biographic notes.

A workman, while clearing a new ground near Bluff City, Tennessee miles south of Bristol, dug up an old brass kettle of about six gallons' measure, which appears to be a relic of the famous pioneer hunter, Daniel Boone. The kettle was found among the roots of a bush which was being removed. A heavy crust had formed on the exterior. This was removed as nearly as possible, and on one side of the kettle, near the rim, was discovered, rudely carved this inscription: "D. Boone, 1760." The kettle was discovered on the farm of Benjamin Webb, which is ten miles distant from the old home of Daniel Boone which Boone carved the following: "On this tree D. Boone killed a bar, 1760." Exchange.

Mr Ralph Dulley, in the vicinity of Mt Zion in the Hills, had a thrilling experience with a pair of immense rattlers a week or so since. About dusk his dog began to bay something on the porch, and on going out to see what it was found a large black rattler at bay. He dispatched it and went into the house. It was not long before the dog seemed to be excited more than before, and about the same place. He went to see what the trouble was and found that a yellow rattler was at bay. He procured a hay fork and pressed its head, and it was with difficulty he got it killed, it was so large and strong. Pronounced by all who have seen it to have been the largest ever seen in that vicinity.

Greenbrier District Conference, M. E. Church.

This body of ministers and laymen convened at the church at Edray, W. Va., on Thursday, Aug 25, 1897, to engage in the work of its twenty-second session, pursuant to notice. Rev C. M. Fultz preached the opening sermon on Wednesday night.

The regular order of business and public worship was: Conference session 9 o'clock a. m., preaching at 11; preaching at 2 p. m., conference after until 5 o'clock, then preaching at 8 p. m. Dinner on the ground. The Sunday services were after the usual order—three services during day and night.

List of delegates:

During all the services the attendance of people was exceptionally large, and on Saturday and Sunday large crowds assembled at each service. The behavior of the people was all that could be desired, and the young people deserve special praise for their gentility and evidence of refinement.

There were present seventeen preachers, traveling and local. The greater part of the preaching was full of the unction of the Holy Spirit, and some of the sermons were excellent both in diction and thought. It would be invidious to particularize, but one of the ministers presented the temperance work uniquely by his proposition that "Young men were more careful and particular as to their company than young ladies."

All of the routine business of the Conference was disposed of in a very pleasant and prompt manner by the chairman, Rev D. C. Hedrick,—to hitchers or jars.

There were eighteen laymen present who were delegates, besides quite a number of visitors from various sections. Pretty young ladies seemed to predominate, altho this is no leap year.

The Conference resolved itself into a committee of the whole, and reported for passage and did adopt by nearly a unanimous vote, a recommendation to report to this body, and also indicating that delinquents in this matter would seriously affect their standing as members of the district conference.

A resolution was adopted by burning "bumble bee" and "yellow jacket" nests, the like he had never seen or heard of before. While Methodist literature cannot be full fledged Methodists.

In pursuance of resolution to that effect, dear Mr Editor, I hand you the foregoing synopsis of proceedings for publication, deeming them sufficiently full, for space in your paper kindly offered to us.

Conference adjourned Saturday, Aug. 28. — George P. Moore.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain, and after using a few days the unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle sent pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

TIRES THAT LEAK.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with plugs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the puncture, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb as in cut No. 2, the repair strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the puncture, as in cut No. 3.

No. 2. No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "took like a nerve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how comfortable Morgan & Wright tires are, and yet most cushion tires penetrate. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether cushion tires last as long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask him what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge, at the factory at Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright four repair shops, located in the principal cities.

R. S. Wiley, you have 3 months, get right off. Riding a tire flat, when it has a hole or nail in it, may damage it irremediably.

SERMONETTE.

By him (Christ) therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name. But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased.—Hebrews xiii 15, 16.

From this it appears that the sacrifice now required of the believer as a member of the "holy priesthood" is a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, which is a reasonable service. A sacrifice in its performance requiring the exercise of the reasoning faculties, the noblest and best endowment human beings possess.

Under the law all that was seen in the victims,—the lamb, the heifer, or the dove,—was passive endurence,—it became a sacrifice in dying. In the case of the christian, or "holy priesthood," the sacrifice of oblation or living sacrifice it to be in the form of active service and life-long continuance. The living body thus presented and inhabited by a soul renewed by the Holy Spirit, can be and ought to be constantly employed in doing the work of the Lord Jesus.

Every time the believer, or a "holy priest" checks some angry passion, or subdues irritability of temper, suppresses some taunting or malicious word that must have wounded some one's feelings, a sacrifice or oblation well pleasing to God is made. Every time a "holy priest" resists and overcomes temptation to any of the myriad forms of actual sin, offers hearty praise, or presents a sincere prayer at the throne of grace, a sacrifice well-pleasing to God is rendered. Every time a "holy priest" that is a true believer in Christ seeks a brother's or sister's labors for a soul's good, a sacrifice is made unto God.

The christian life is real only when it is a sacrifice of oblation, and is such a sacrifice only when it is a "living sacrifice," "a reasonable service." We may honor the martyrs who resisted unto blood striving against sin, but the living sacrifice is the more difficult. It is really easier to die for Christ than to live for him. The agony of the fiery stake or the strokes of the sharp ax is but of momentary duration—all over in a few minutes,—but the living sacrifice is continuous.

There have been times perhaps that all of us could sympathize with what a poor backslider once said to Miss Marsh: "If I cannot stand firm for Christ hadn't I better go home pretty soon; would it not not be better for me to die than to live?"

May we ever heed the words of our ascended Lord, our great High Priest, and be true to our duties as "holy priests." Hold fast that which thou hast, let no man take thy crown. Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life. May we then be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. This work of the Lord is knowing and doing the commandments.

As a more extended improvement of this text let us consider the motives that should encourage us in the duties spoken of. Elsewhere christians, or "holy priests," are exhorted by the mercies of God to present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God. The motley angel in the mercies of God. In the epistle of Paul mercies denote future duties for those who so fit from deserving the favors implied have deserved just the reverse. By mercies reference is not specially had to the ordinary gifts of God's providence, but to the special favors of his grace in love through the merits of Christ and for the sake of his beloved Son, the Redeemer of mankind.

One of the most useful things a thoughtful person can do is form correct ideas of the motives that should stimulate to a faithful performance of Christian duty as is set forth in the Letter to the Romans in a plain, straight-forward, commonsense way, just as any other important letter should be read. The people Paul wrote to were merchants, mechanics, women and young people. Now when a reader does this he will perceive that the whole drift and purpose of the epistle is to influence character and conduct. And when such a reader comes to the 12th chapter of Romans and 1st verse: "I beseech you therefore brethren by the mercies of God that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service"; this reader will see and feel that by the word "therefore" the sum and substance of the whole letter are brought to bear upon him individually so that each and every christian should be really and controllingly influenced thereby in his religious conduct.

This Roman letter speaks of free gratuitous justification, whereby our sins are forgiven and ourselves accepted only for and through the merits of Christ's death. It speaks of complete adoption, whereby we are received into the family of God the Father as his sons and daughters and so have a right to all the privileges of the children of God. This letter speaks of sanctification as begun in the cleansing of our hearts by the washing of regeneration and the crucifying of sin within us by the crucifixion of Christ.

Let it be noticed just here that sanctification is referred to as begun, not finished, in the present life. It seems, however, that of late years some parties in this advanced and progressive century, along with other things, have gotten ahead of the apostle to the Gentiles, and propose to furnish "perfect sanctification" to all who will take it right now.

The Letter to the Romans also speaks of future glory so securely reserved for the believer in Christ that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Thus Paul in his letter traces all these blessings to the free mercy of God as something for nothing, by laid to dedicate ourselves to God as living sacrifices, who has provided such sacrifices of such an amazing sacrifice as the death and sufferings of his own dear Son. "God commends his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for the ungodly." So it appears he provided these favors for us regardless of our own evil deservings as sinners. Thus the apostolic writer appeals to our gratitude and lays the strongest principles found in every noble character, and he pursues a train of reasoning that sweeps the whole horizon of Christian obligation, and thus brings the entire motive power of the gospel to bear upon us and rouse and stimulate us to faithful Christian duty and religious endeavors.

Hence it is seen, or ought to be seen, that preaching justification by faith, when properly understood, does not undermine morality—or discourage good works. It only places morality and good works where they flourish with greater vigor and arrive at greater maturity than anywhere else.

Such teaching as Paul's in his letters makes pure morality of character and good works in service the offerings of oblation from a grateful heart for salvation so lovingly received and seek instead of indifferent persons to try to purchase salvation by morality and good works, one of the most impossible of all impossibilities.

It was after a thoughtful consideration of the philosophy of the best that one of the greatest of the poets exclaimed:

"Talk they of morals, O Thou bleeding Lamb,
The grand morality is love of Thee."

The Pocahontas Times.

ANDREW PRICE, EDITOR

Marlinton, Friday, Sept. 15. 1897

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

RAISING LAMBS FOR PROFIT.

At the Farmers' Institute last week the above subject was called up and a very interesting discussion ensued in which several intelligent observers gave their views as to sheep raising. All agreed that if they raised sheep at all they wished to do so for profit, that is for revenue only.

One speaker advanced the idea that sheep need a wild range to do well. Rough mountain sides which afforded no other animals sustenance, and rattlesnake covers were what sheep needed, with plenty of shade and sun; while another said they would do as well in a pasture. One said that sheep could not be raised with other stock, and this was disputed by the speaker following. An idea was that some farmers make victims of their sheep by turning them into a brush patch to keep down the brush, and while they killed the brush tolerably well they also were very apt to die in the operation.

In this manner they chewed the rag over sheep for a considerable length of time.

The question is one of importance to Pocahontas farmers, and of great interest to anyone who has ever had anything to do with sheep. The county is especially well adapted to sheep raising, and we have often been told that the mutton raised on our mountains is superior to any taken to the Philadelphia market, and that it has a distinctive class in that market and is known as "Pocahontas mutton." It is said that the sheep of the elevated counties around Pocahontas go on that market as 'Pocahontas Mutton." Some sheep fanciers have explained this by the theory that an elevation of 2,000 feet and over above the level of the sea is very conducive to the production of well flavored mutton. The constant mountain breezes, the cool nights, the shaded walks, and the pure water have much to do with giving the flesh the palatableness that belongs more especially to deer and other wild animals. A well bred lamb given the habits of a deer would naturally be a more toothsome morsel than a sheep from some swampy, lowland farm, which had the habits of a hog.

A shepherd too is "born, not made," to a great extent. It often happens that two brothers have wholly different qualities when it comes to sheep raising. One will have sheep healthy and in good, strong condition; and the other, try as he may, will own sheep that have a tendency to every organic disease in the calendar, and will die, seemingly, out of pure wantoness. It was the theory of one successful sheep herder that the shepherd must love the sheep. He must delight in their company and their smell must be sweet in his nostrils. He must have a personal acquaintance with each of the flock and know them by the face.

To the uninitiated one sheep resembles another pretty much as one pea is like unto another pea. But the successful sheep farmer knows every sheep and could pick it out of a flock of strange sheep under any circumstances. He can go into a court of law and swear to its identity.

There seems to be a great deal in this natural love for the sheep and the man who raises sheep for the hereditary love he bears sheep generally finds that he is, as a result raising sheep on a profit.

We once heard of a sheep raiser who carried into the business without first ascertaining whether or not he belonged to the elect, and the first winter 700 out of 900 died for no apparent reason than that they were tired of life. The hills were covered with the dead, while other sheep receiving the same treatment at the hands of neighbors were strong and well.

Therefore, we say to Horatio, and others, "There is more in raising sheep than is dreamed of in your philosophy."

As old women living near here who shall remain nameless (for many will recognize this allusion) were asked how they came to be so many small hairs in the dried apple which she brought to sell, she said she really did not know, but they were from the rat-hole on which she had dried them.

NOTICE the bankrupt advertised for October court.

A BLACKSMITH shop is being erected in east Marlinton for B. N. Bayhorn who will come here from Valley Head.

SEE your stakes to come to court two weeks earlier this year than before. County court meets the last Tuesday of this month.

THERE has been frost in various sections of the county this week and last but not enough to do any damage.

THE Rosecrants buyers were offering 75 cents for wheat last week. At Frankford wagon sold for 78 cts. The wheat boom was not well bid stoved up.

TWENTY-FIVE teams went to Roncerte last week after fertilizer. Most of it was destined for the Levels. Farmers there use about 100 lbs. to the acre.

IN building the railroad from Elkins to Huttonsville, Senator Davis brought certain contrary landowners to terms in the matter of a right of way by threatening to turn the line aside from Beverly and make a flag station near the town.

THRESHING shows wheat and buckwheat to be turning out above the average. The oats crop is below. The corn crop is very good. Farmers wonder where they will get stock to eat their hay. A certain field of about ten acres on Knapps there are eleven new stacks and nine old ones.

NEARLY a hundred sheep have been killed by bears on Middle Mountain within the past few months. Fifty or more were of Mr L. Tuke's flock, and Messrs James Gibson, Sam Varner, and others are losers. Various hunts have been organized, but thus far no bears have been killed except one cub caught in a trap.

A MAN, nearly naked, passed thro town last Friday looking neither to the right nor left. He had on a coat which was ripped up the back to the collar, showing that the other articles of apparel were wanting. A pair of tattered overalls reached to his knees. He had an old pair of overshoes on his feet. He made no halt and did not seem to be begging.

MARRIED: At Newport, Rhode Island, September 1, Mr. William Page Thomson, owner of Brookdale Farm, W. Va., and Miss Edith Blight, of New York. The bridegroom is the son of the late Captain W. P. Thompson who married Miss Lina Moffat, of this county. The bride belongs to one the oldest and most exclusive of New York families.

THE County Court ought to give the people of Cheat Creek, Driftwood and Back Alleghany a bridge across the Greenbrier. A substantial wagon bridge would not cost very much. The plan of building a foot-bridge has been abandoned temporarily on account of a difference of opinion as to the proper place to build it. Back Alleghany is a good lumbering community and has had only one appropriation from the county funds and that for only $75.

HERE is something that makes the mouth water on a warm day: In Westmoreland county a man-of-war pulled seventy six melons, which he sold for one cent each. The rail-road facilities cost him $11.94, the commission merchant lifted six cent. The account stood about this way, leaving the shipper seventy cents to the commission dealer. Let the rail road and commission man come this way fast as possible, we want a share of melons and that fast.

WHERE the Golden State grew! In 1862 I occupied the Froggy-store-house; in 1864 I moved to Methodist to a considerably larger building; now I have bought out Mr. B. W. Hull's stock and am getting up my new goods in the Hull store-house. Those who see us a week hence for bargains will find a saving of $5 to 50 per cent on a good many things and especially on colored shoes, in my goods. Never mind how I am doing it,—I can prove it to you fast, too. Can I tell it to you. I mean every word I say. F. G.

THE squirrels are here in great numbers and have hardly left a hickory nut on the trees. It is feared that the corn will suffer before the squirrels have all eaten their fill. The remainder is carefully left in the stems last week. The greatly increased amount of squirrels and other game, is believed to be owing to the abundance of the food last winter. Last season it was long remembered of the hunters in the road, it was rare to strike them. At one place in the Levels from some hickory on two acres of ground over seventy squirrels had been killed up to Saturday morning. These nuts will keep until the next crop is ripened, and the squirrels only a few in the woods will suffer.

Personal Mention.

Lon Yeager and Jim Smith left for the University last Monday.

Frank Hill will attend the Randolph Mason. He is a Senior.

Mr and Mrs Alvin Clark spent a few days in Marlinton last week.

The Hillsboro Academy will be conducted by a Mr Terry, of Va. and Miss Virgie Sydenstricker, and will open September 16.

John Sydenstricker, son of Dr Sydenstricker, D. D., of Academy will attend Hampden Sydney the coming term.

Uriah Bird has returned from Addison where he went to recuperate after his attack of fever. He was much benefitted, gaining a pound of flesh per day while there.

Rev Wm T. Price and Dr D. S. Sydenstricker are attending Presbytery in Monroe. Summers Kinnison of Academy will be placed under the care of Presbytery, intending to study for the ministery. He is in his third year at Hampden-Sydney.

County Seats in Randolph.

The people of Randolph are in a ferment over the removal of the county seat to Elkins. H. G. Davis, S. B. Elkins, and other citizens of Elkins, have made a proposition to the county court in writing to furnish temporary court room, offices, fireproof vaults, jail, etc, for five years, if the county seat is removed to their town; and to erect buildings as good as those burned at a cost to the county not to exceed $19,000, with site furnished free, and to remove free of all cost the available material in the old court-house. The district of Mingo is very much divided over the question.

Farmers' Institute.

The farmer's institute was extremely interesting to those who attended, and a vast amount of information was imparted. It seems very wonderful that more farmers did not attend, but the members of the board believe that in time the sessions of the institute will be thronged in this county as in other counties. Hons J. M. Sydenstricker and C. C. Brown were in charge. The following organization was effected:

President, Isaac McNeel.
1st Vice Pres., E. N. Moore.
2d Vice Pres., George R. Curry.
Secretary, T. A. Sydenstricker.

Tennis Tournament At Mingo.

Tuesday the Misses Hebden entertained friends at "Ashton," the occasion being a tennis tournament. N. and C. Price, from Marlinton, were beaten in singles and doubles by R. and L. Tuke and Ernest Hebden. A number of mixed doubles were played, in which S. L. Brown, O. Moss, and Miss Forster were noticeable.

NOTICE.—All persons indebted to me will please settle while I am in Marlinton this week.

S. W. HOLT.

A GARTER snake was killed next here by Moff Waugh which was about three feet long and which had sixty-four live snakes inside of it, each about seven inches long. Jasper Friel counted the snakes. It has been often alleged that some serpents when alarmed swallow their young and eject them again after reaching a place of safety. There remains considerable doubt on this question and it is likely that the alleged proofs of it, from living ones coming out of the body of the parent when crushed, are to be accounted for by the oviparious mode of generation. As a rule, all venomous serpents lay eggs, depositing them in a hole of decaying vegetation and leave them there to be hatched, paying no attention to them. Venomous serpents hatch the eggs hatch their young inside of them, and thus they are termed ovoviparous. This would indicate that the garter snake, the not poisonous, belongs to the latter class.

That was a queer blunder committed at the M. P. conference at Harrisville last week. Two young men were ordained as ministers with impressive solemn ceremonies, and duly pronounced full-fledged divines, when to the consternation of the conference it was discovered that the wrong men had been ordained with the wrong offices. It seems that Rev. R. S. Rice and Rev. T. F. Goode who had passed their final examinations were to be ordained, but for some unaccountable reason the names of J. A. Abbott and A. P. Hoke, who had been under the care of the church for two years as candidates were called. The latter didn't seem to know "where they were at," and stepped to the front and solemnly threw down to the center of the ceremonies. It was a simple case of the wrong men so to speak, and at the evening services Messrs Goode and Rice were duly ordained.—Oracle.

Reunion Notes.

Executive committe will meet to-day to complete the program, appoint reception committee, committee on decoration, etc, which will be published in full next week.

A vast amount of work remains to be done, but if everyone favorable to the enterprise will give a helping hand and cooperate with the various committees we will have a day long to be remembered as a crowning evidence of fraternal union. Let the finance committee take immediate steps to procure such financial aid as they can to assist in defraying expenses. In this issue will be found the names of the committee on arrangements, appointed last June. Let each one of them go to work to interest those who may be willing to donate supplies for the free dinner. Let the work be done systematically and energetically. Provision will be made for storing all supplies coming from a distance.

Every thing possible will be done to secure the comfort of visiting comrades.

Union veterans and their families will be welcomed.

A pleasant feature of the parade will be the cavalcade of uniformed young ladies with their escorts. All who propose to ride in this procession should send in their names to Miss Annette Ligon, at Clover Lick, at an early date. Suitable material for sashes will be ordered for those who wish them.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Put a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and ever comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

THE ACTOR'S DOUBLE.

We were talking about spirit manifestations at the Thirty-nine club, and retailing the usual second or third hand accounts of deceased ladies and gentlemen appearing themselves to their surviving relatives.

"It is strange the tricks which our brains will sometimes play us," said Dr. Shepbrush. "I remember once seeing a ghost myself, and I can tell you that the sensation is a very curious one. It was a good many years ago, in my examination days, and I had been sitting up until the early hours 'cramming.' Everybody in the house had long since gone to bed, where I ought to have been myself, but I was rather surprised when I glanced up from my book to see somebody sitting at the table where I myself had been a few moments before writing. I felt quite startled for an instant, until I recognised the intruder. He was a little hazy, but I could see plainly enough who it was."

"A dead relative?" asked Maj. Bennett, who was a firm believer in the good old-fashioned ghost.

"Neighbours and even in his peculiarly quiet way: "No, it was myself. The experience of seeing one's own ghost is not altogether unusual, I believe."

"Now, I do not think your experience was half so remarkable as one of mine," said Gilbert Dane, the well-known acting manager of the Hillyard theater, who happened to be there that night. Dane is not a member of the Thirty-nine, but had come with Shepbrush. Most of the brain specialist's friends are in the profession, a fact which is perhaps due to the year which he himself spent on the stage as a young man.

"My story begins prosaically," said the actor, when we begged to hear it. "I lost the latchkey with which I let myself into the theater, and took somebody else's to the locksmith's to have a duplicate made. I agreed to call for it the following morning as I was going up to town for rehearsal. I was living at Putney then, and was actively preparing a play which deserved a better fate than it received, if thought and preparation go for anything, for I came near making myself ill over it. I was feeling out of sorts on the morning that I called for the latchkey, and when the locksmith swore positively that he had given me the third already—that less than ten minutes previously I had come in for the key, paid for it, and taken it away with me—I will confess that I lost my temper, and stormed at the fellow; but I could not get him to budge a line from his story. He seemed to have an idea that I was playing a practical joke, and the only result of my talking was that I nearly lost my train to Waterloo. It was moving when I reached the platform, but I had to run for the only compartment of which the door was open, near the end of the train.

"The compartment contained two other passengers, but if I glanced at them at all, I noticed nothing except that each was pretty well hidden behind a daily paper. I had fortunately bought my own paper before calling at the locksmith's, and I speedily followed their example. So far the story is peculiarly commonplace. Nevertheless the truly remarkable experience which has stamped the doings of that day indelibly on my memory."

The actor paused to strike a match and relight a cheroot, which he had allowed to go out, and we all watched him in silence, wondering what was coming. Something in his tone told us that it was one who had heard the story before.

"I had become rather interested in my paper," Dane went on, when the cigar was lighted again, "and when another my companions talking outlines of them started telling an anecdote.

"The story and color startled me, but it is difficult to describe my feelings when I put down my paper to glance at the narrator."

"It was yourself?" asked Maj. Bennett, excitedly, as the actor paused; and Dane nodded.

"Yes, gentlemen, I saw seated at the other end of the compartment by the window, opposite his companion, a figure that was as much like myself as my reflection which I see in my glass every day when I have dressed for the part of a respectable citizen. It was myself complete in every detail of face and attire.

"An optical delusion, I suppose?" I suggested, and the actor shook his head.

"No, that was the first idea that occurred to me—that I had been working and worrying too much over the new play, and my brain had played me a trick. The second way in which the third man glanced at me convinced me of the belief, for the likeness seemed I was looking at myself reflected in a mirror. Instead of the usual look of recognition, some of the pulse of the story had evidently passed his mouth, it was only to increase the accuracy of the effect, for it showed me that by double I possessed a mannerism of which I was not conscious, and which my friends have since pointed out to me.

"I began to wonder then, not whether the man at the window was a ghost, but whether I was myself, and I was relieved when the train began to slow down for the next station, for I felt I needed a change, and found that I had lost consciousness of my surroundings to such an extent that I had not noticed the disappearance of the companion. I left the carriage in the case of a stranger, and walked a few minutes up the platform before I sensed the opportunity of introducing myself offered by hearing my double called by name.

"'Excuse me,' I said, addressing him, 'but I heard your friend just call you "Mr. Dane." I wonder whether we are related at all, for that happens to be my name, and we seem to bear a striking similarity to one another.'

"My double turned and surveyed me through a single eyeglass in exactly the same manner as that with which I should have surveyed a stranger who addressed me in the train.

"'I really do not know whether we are related or not,' he said, in the voice I use when I wish to be slightly patronising. 'I am Gilbert Dane, of the Hollow Theater,' and he actually handed me one of my own cards.

"There was something in the substantial nature of the familiar bit of pasteboard that brought back a little of my common sense, and relieved me from the state of stupefaction into which the phenomenon had driven me.

"'Come, this is a very clever trick,' I said, with a smile, which I am afraid was rather feeble. 'You have certainly succeeded in startling me. Now I should like your own explanation. I always know whom to congratulate on a very clever performance.'

"'And what did the Mystery do?' He quired, with interest, when the actor ceased.

"He did exactly what I should have done, if a stranger addressed me in the same manner. He became angry, and asked me what I meant, and whom I called myself. About the beginning; keeping as cool as I could when 'my double' interrupted me in a tone which I still recognized perfectly, as my own.

"'Well you had better not do so any more,' he said sharply, 'or you will find yourself to the hands of the police I see that you have been fooling my dress, too, which I cannot help, but the use of my name is another thing.'

"We had just reached Vauxhall, on first stopping place, as he spoke, and a ticket collector who knows me by sight came to the door. My double caught his eye first.

"'I wish you would tell this gentleman who I am,' he said, and the man answered promptly:

"'Certainly, sir, you are Mr. Dane, the actor.'

"He looked startled when I asked him the same question.

"'I should call you a very good imitation,' he said, when he had recovered from his surprise.

"This was becoming decidedly uncomfortable, and I began to wonder how I could prove to anybody that I was not a good imitation of myself. The ticket collector's ready acceptance of my double as the real 'Mr. Dane' showed how helpless I should be in an appeal to anyone who did not know me well. But I felt that it would not do for two Gilbert Danes to remain at large; the question which one was to surrender the title must be settled at once. It struck me that the easiest way to do it would be to go together to the theater, and submit the question to the company assembled for the rehearsal. I suggested this course to my face-similar, and he surprised me by accepting it readily.

"'I warn you that I shall detain you when it is settled, and send for the police,' he said, in my haughtiest voice.

"'It was what I was intending to do with him.'

The actor paused to light another cheroot.

"And did you both go back?" somebody asked.

Dane nodded.

"Yes, together. The third man left at Waterloo," he said. "I really don't believe it, but I felt rather uneasy as I approached the stage door, and the fact that I had no latchkey to open it for myself seemed a calamity. My double calmly produced his, and marched me into my own theater with the air of a proprietor. Then he closed the door behind him, and, changing his voice and manner, suddenly turned quietly: 'And now, Mr. Dane, I will puzzle you no more, but apologize for giving you so much trouble, which I hope you will think repaid by the enjoyment of a unique sensation. The fact is that I am very anxious to go on the stage myself, and I thought that this would be the best way to obtain an introduction to you, and at the same time show you a specimen of my art. It is the part of your understudy. You will admit at least that I understand the art of making up. Now are you going to give me an engagement or wait for the police?'

"And you gave him the engagement I suppose?" I asked.

"Yes; I have always regretted that he threw it up before the year was out, and returned to his former profession, that of a medical man."

"It was he, of course, who called for the latchkey in the morning?"

"Yes; he had been in the shop when I ordered it, and the fact finally determined him to carry out the affair, which he had been pondering for some time."

"Yet he must have haunted you like a shadow beforehand," put in Maj. Bennett. "to learn all your peculiarities and that I should hardly think the result was worth the trouble."

Many times, who had been sitting quietly in the background, surprised us by his knowledge of his friend.

"Excuse me, major," he said, in his usual quiet way, "but you make a mistake there. Any man would have been justified in going to any length to secure the services of the actor, for in the case of the story just told he would have copied his mouth, it was only to increase the accuracy of the effect, for it showed me that by double possessed a mannerism of which I was not conscious, and which my friends have since pointed out to me.

"I began to wonder then, not whether the man at the window was a ghost, but whether I was myself, and I was relieved when the train began to slow down for the next station, for I felt I needed a change, and found that I had lost consciousness of my surroundings to such an extent that I had not noticed the disappearance of the companion. "My double turned and surveyed me through a single eyeglass in exactly the same manner as that with which I should have surveyed a stranger who addressed me in the train.

"'I really do not know whether we are related or not,' he said, in the voice I use when I wish to be slightly patronising. 'I am Gilbert Dane, of the Hollow Theater,' and he actually handed me one of my own cards.

"There was something in the substantial nature of the familiar bit of pasteboard that brought back a little of my common sense, and relieved me from the state of stupefaction into which the phenomenon had driven me.

"'Come, this is a very clever trick,' I said, with a smile, which I am afraid was rather feeble. 'You have certainly succeeded in startling me. Now I should like your own explanation. I always know whom to congratulate on a very clever performance.'

"'And what did the Mystery do?' He quired, with interest, when the actor ceased.

"He did exactly what I should have done, if a stranger addressed me in the same manner. He became angry, and asked me what I meant, and whom I called myself. About the "Well, until to-day I have been in the habit of calling myself Gilbert Dane, of the Hollow Theater—I beginning; keeping as cool as I could when 'my double' interrupted me in a tone which I still recognized perfectly, as my own.

"'Well you had better not do so any more,' he said sharply, 'or you will find yourself to the hands of the police I see that you have been fooling my dress, too, which I cannot help, but the use of my name is another thing.'

"We had just reached Vauxhall, on first stopping place, as he spoke, and a ticket collector who knows me by sight came to the door. My double caught his eye first.

"'I wish you would tell this gentleman who I am,' he said, and the man answered promptly:

"'Certainly, sir, you are Mr. Dane, the actor.'

"He looked startled when I asked him the same question.

"'I should call you a very good imitation,' he said, when he had recovered from his surprise.

"This was becoming decidedly uncomfortable, and I began to wonder how I could prove to anybody that I was not a good imitation of myself. The ticket collector's ready acceptance of my double as the real 'Mr. Dane' showed how helpless I should be in an appeal to anyone who did not know me well. But I felt that it would not do for two Gilbert Danes to remain at large; the question which one was to surrender the title must be settled at once. It struck me that the easiest way to do it would be to go together to the theater, and submit the question to the company assembled for the rehearsal. I suggested this course to my face-similar, and he surprised me by accepting it readily.

"'I warn you that I shall detain you when it is settled, and send for the police,' he said, in my haughtiest voice.

"'It was what I was intending to do with him.'

The actor paused to light another cheroot.

"And did you both go back?" somebody asked.

Dane nodded.

"Yes, together. The third man left at Waterloo," he said. "I really don't believe it, but I felt rather uneasy as I approached the stage door, and the fact that I had no latchkey to open it for myself seemed a calamity. My double calmly produced his, and marched me into my own theater with the air of a proprietor. Then he closed the door behind him, and, changing his voice and manner, suddenly turned quietly: 'And now, Mr. Dane, I will puzzle you no more, but apologize for giving you so much trouble, which I hope you will think repaid by the enjoyment of a unique sensation. The fact is that I am very anxious to go on the stage myself, and I thought that this would be the best way to obtain an introduction to you, and at the same time show you a specimen of my art. It is the part of your understudy. You will admit at least that I understand the art of making up. Now are you going to give me an engagement or wait for the police?'"

"And you gave him the engagement I suppose?" I asked.

"Yes; I have always regretted that he threw it up before the year was out, and returned to his former profession, that of a medical man."

"It was he, of course, who called for the latchkey in the morning?"

"Yes; he had been in the shop when I ordered it, and the fact finally determined him to carry out the affair, which he had been pondering for some time."

"Yet he must have haunted you like a shadow beforehand," put in Maj. Bennett, "to learn all your peculiarities and that I should hardly think the result was worth the trouble."

Many times, who had been sitting quietly in the background, surprised us by his knowledge of his friend.

"Excuse me, major," he said, in his usual quiet way, "but you make a mistake there. Any man would have been justified in going to any length to secure the services of the actor, for in the case of the story just told he would have copied his mouth, it was only to increase the accuracy of the effect, for it showed me that by double I

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

Among the well-known citizens of our county from the twenties to the forties was Martin Dilley, Esq. It is believed that he was a native of Maryland and of Quaker descent. His wife was Hannah Moore, daughter of Pennsylvania John Moore, the pioneer, and he located near Dilley's Mill, where his son the late Andrew Dilley lived. Here he settled in the virgin forest and reared from the wilderness quite a large estate and accumulated an ample competency His home was known far and near where a bountiful hospitality was dispensed, and a cordial welcome awaited strangers and friends alike.

In reference to his family the following particulars have been gleaned from the reminiscences of some of his surviving friends.

His son John Dilley married Isabel (Dibie). Dilley, daughter of Henry Dilley, a brother of Martin Dilley. John Dilley's daughter Margaret married Samuel Sutton near Green Bank, where she now lives. Jeremiah Dilley, a son of John Dilley, married Margaret McCarty, daughter of Daniel McCarty. Clayton Dilley married Mary Moore, daughter of James Moore. Clark Dilley, a Union soldier, married Margaret Arbogast, daughter of Rev Henry Arbogast, who was slain during the war, between Frost and Glade Hill.

John Dilley's second marriage was with Naomi McNeill, daughter of John McNeill, Esq., late of Swago. The children by the second marriage were as follows:

Hannah Jane married Wesley Irvine and lives near Verdant Valley. George Dilley married Amelia Warwick. He died in Lewis County. His widow married Hopkins Wanless and now lives near Dilley's Mill. Register Dilley lives in Iowa. Wilson Dilley married Margaret Rush, and lives on Brown's Mountain. Fletcher Dilley married Nancy Hannah, on Elk, and lives near West Union. Kenney Dilley is a journeyman printer, and founded the Pocahontas Herald at Huntersville, 1893. Davis Dilley at home. Summers Dilley married Amanda McLaughlin and lives on Elk. Peter Dilley married Georgiana Hamilton and lives on Knapp's Creek. Rebecca Dilley became Mrs Gratton S. Weiford and lives on the old homestead.

Elizabeth Dilley, daughter of Martin Dilley, was married to Peter Yeager and lived at Travelers Repose, where Peter Yeager her son now lives. Her other children were Martin and Ella Yeager.

Ann Dilley married William Sharp and lived on Thorny Creek, where Lindsay Sharp now lives.

Martha Dilley married William Cleek, of Bath, Virginia, and lived near Windy Cove. Her sons were William and Charles Cleek. Her daughter Ann Cleek married Geo. Simpson. Sarah Cleek was married to William Simpson, and both lived in Bath.

Rachel Dilley married William Sharp, junior, and lived near the Big Spring of Elk. Her daughter Ella died at the age of six years. Her sons Bernard, Henry, and Luther were Union soldiers and died of wounds received during the war. Hugh, Silas, and Harmon are well-known prosperous citizens living on and near the homestead.

Mary Dilley married Alexander Sharp, near Verdant Valley, and lived on a part of the William Sharp homestead. Her only child is Mrs Hannah Johnson.

Andrew Dilley, Martin Dilley's second son, married Martha Sharp, youngest daughter of the late William Sharp, senior, and settled on the homestead. His family were two sons and a daughter. Henry, Amos, and Elizabeth Francis, she died aged two years.

Amos J. Dilley married Amanda, daughter of Ralph Dilley, near Mount Zion in the Hills, and settled on Thorny Creek. Their children were Rhinehart Pearson, now Mrs George A. Poling, William Addison, Noah Patterson, Rhinehart Brown, Andy Garwood, Ursula Florence, Elizabeth Martin, Virgie Mae Rosina, and Ernest Amos.

Rosella Dilley married Christian Stalnaker, and settled at Dilley's Mill of which he is the present owner.

John Dilley and Andrew Dilley were worthy sons of their very worthy father, Martin Dilley. In his day Martin Dilley was one of the most widely known of Pocahontas citizens, and his presence and character reflected credit upon the citizenship of the county in the estimation of those coming from abroad. He was of that type of citizenship of which any county might be considered fortunate to possess. As a member of society Martin Dilley was worthy of high esteem because of his energy, industry, attention to his own business, honest economical thrift, and exemplary morals. He owned a family of slaves to whom he was very indulgent and lenient.

For many years on public occasions at Huntersville—musters, superior courts, and Presidential elections—"Dilley's George" was usually one of the most conspicuous figures in the crowd as the vendor of ginger-cakes, apples, and cider. He would be dressed "fine as a preacher," very dignified in his manners, and would count out the cakes and deal the cider as if it made no difference to him whether you wanted any or not. He put on very sanctimonious airs trying to look and act like the preachers, and the imitation of tone, look, and gesture was quite a success. The articles he vended were the admiration of the whole county, and the parsonic old colored man found it remunerative, and all was owing to the indulgence of his benevolent master.

Some years before his decease, Martin Dilley was waylaid, fired upon and severely wounded at the head of the road a mile or more east of Driscol. The event startled the whole county, and was one of the most pathetic and tragical scenes ever enacted in our county.

Mr Dilley deserves to be remembered as one of the more substantial and useful citizens of his generation. He should be held in esteem for what he accomplished in developing his part of our county, for he demonstrated that a rich reward awaited the diligent worker, and that an ample competence could be secured by such in spite of natural obstacles of dense forests, rugged soil, and seemingly capricious climate.

A chilly, rainy evening in April, 1847, the writer spent under the roof of this good old man, and shared the comforts so profusely provided. And he will ever remember how impressively the venerable man stood up, repeated and sang these words:

We lay our gratifients by,
Upon our beds to rest,
So death will soon disrobe us all
Of what we here possess.

And when we early rise
And view the unwearied sun,
May we set out to win the prize
And after glory run.

And when our days are passed
And we from time remove,
O may we in thy bosom rest—
The bosom of thy love.

Then he had us to kneel, and he the "priest and father" led in the family devotions preliminary to retiring for the night's repose. Such are the homes whence true peace and genuine prosperity come forth to bless our people at large, and may there be many such.

A Deserved Witness.—When Hamlin Garfield was gathering material for his life of Grant, he spent a day or two in Atlanta, where he met an old Virginia negro who said he had witnessed Lee's surrender. Garfield was interested and questioned him closely.

"You say you were present when Lee surrendered."

"Yes I was, sah!"

"Did you see Lee give up his sword?"

"No, sir. I didn't! General Lee gave up no sword! Not him! Dey tried for take it from him, but he made a pass at one or two or dem, an' dey let off. I tell you!"

"And where was Grant all that time?"

"Oh, he was right dere, sah! He to'd me to dat. Well, boys, let him keep he sword. He can't do much damage, kase he done whip out anybody!"—Atlanta Constitution.

OUR GREAT REUNION.

The executive committee met last Thursday at the court-house and transacted a great deal of the preliminary work incidental to handling and providing for such a great concourse of people as will be seen at Marlinton that day. The citizens of the town are especially urged to decorate their dwellings and business houses for the occasion, and the indications are that every man, woman, and child will do all they can to beautify the village and provide comfortably for its visitors.

The committee has selected the beautiful grove back of the residence of B. M. Yeager (the Harper McLaughlin place) for the grounds. Here the grass grows green underneath the lofty sugar-maples. The grounds will be on the bank of Knapps Creek, one of the clearest of West Virginia streams. The procession will form near the Greenbrier bridge, about a mile distant. They will march to the corner of Main Street and Fourth Avenue and turn in by the temporary court-house, thence by the brick court-house to the scene. The order in which they form will be as follows:

The parade forms on Camden Avenue, the young ladies and their escorts south of the Presbyterian church and the veterans across the turnpike to the north. The procession will defile into Main Street at the drugstore in the following order:

The Hillsboro Cornet Band.

The young ladies cavalcade, headed by the Pocahontas chapter of daughters of the Confederacy. The young ladies will endeavor to obtain the following uniform:

White waist with red sailor collar and red cuffs, with white stars in corner of collar; black or dark skirt. Sash—red, white, and blue; cap with thirteen white stars on band. If the morning is cool of course they will wear cloaks.

Their escorts will wear white caps and sash of red, white, and red. Let no young lady refuse to ride because she is not decorated with stars and stripes, for our blue grass girls and blue grass horses will be a sight altogether lovely even should they be dressed in any old thing.

Then follows the Monterey brass band.

Then the Confederate veterans of Pocahontas, mounted, by camps

Visiting veterans mounted and on foot.

All who do not find it convenient to bring horses will march on foot. All Confederate veterans far and near are urged to be in the parade.

The speakers will await the procession at the corner of the temporary court-house. After the young ladies' cavalcade has passed they will open ranks to right and left and the veterans will pass through followed by carriage containing the orators. On reaching the grounds the ranks of the veterans will open and allow the speakers and the young ladies to pass through to the stand.

Parade forms at 10 A. M.
Speaking begins at 11 A. M.
Dinner free for all.

After dinner the veterans will form by their old organizations and march on the grounds.

Three organizations will be present, and possibly others.

Pocahontas Riflemen, Major J. C. Arbogast, Green Bank.

Pocahontas Rowsers, Huntersville, Captain Jacob W. Mallows.

Company I., 19th Cavalry, Captain William L. McNeel.

Company I, 19th Cavalry, Captain J. W. Marshall.

Both Squadrons, Colonel A. C. L. Gatewood.

The chief marshall of the day is Adjutant-General A. C. L. Gatewood, who will select his own staff.

The officers of the Pocahontas camps are hereby called to meet at the court-house at 9 A. M. A. M. and effect a regimental organization.

On Wednesday night before the 30th there will be a reunion given in the town of Marlinton for the benefit of the association.

All stands and booths on the grounds will be under the auspices of the camps, and it is understood that no intruder will erect stands on the grounds that day to interfere with the proceeds that may accrue for the worthy object of caring for the Confederate dead. In this connection the help of the ladies by contributions of cream and cake is solicited.

Of course Union veterans, their families and friends are cordially invited to be with us that day.

Badges free for all veterans.

About 1000 flags have been ordered—both United States and Confederate.

Next meeting of the executive committee, Saturday, September 18, 1897, at court-house.

The indications are that the whole county will move en masse and invest Marlinton that day. Allready many a horse is being plied with grain and rubbed with assiduous care to be looking his brightest and best that day.

All committees hitherto appointed are retained and expected to work.

Committee to receive speakers: L. M. McClintic and W. A. Bratton.

Reception committee, to provide for all visiting veterans: L. M. McClintic, Dr J. M. Cunningham, Dr Price, W. A Bratton, E I Holt.

Auldridge, Preston Clark, L. M. McClintic, W. A. Bratton, Misses Mary Irene McNeel, Delia Edgar, Gleana Hill, and Maggie Patterson.

The province of this committee is to take charge of the dinner; they are to appoint their own assistants. This is a very important committee.

Committee to enlist young ladies and gentlemen to ride in ladies cavalcade:

Green Bank—Misses Lucy Sipe, Flora Moomaw, Gertie Yeager, Ella Pritchard; Hunter Moomaw, Jesse Warwick, Robert Oliver, Joe Hannah.

Put a pill in the pulpit if you want practical preaching for the physical man; then put the pill in the pillory if it does not practice what it preaches. There's a whole gospel in Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills; a "gospel of sweetness and light." People used to value their physic, as they did their religion,—by its bitterness. The more bitter the dose the better the doctor. We've got over that. We take "sugar in ours"—gospel or physic—now-a-days. It's possible to please and to purge at the same time. THE CUBAN SITUATION.

Our readers need not be much surprised to hear some exciting news about Cuba, about or soon after the soldiers' reunion at Marlinton. In the estimation of a well-informed party it appears morally certain that when the United States minister to Spain is ready for business about the first thing he holds instructions for is to inform the Spanish authorities that the Cuban war should cease, and offer the good services of the American government with a view to the immediate independence of the Cuban republic. Mr McKinley's words may be softer than butter, but to the Spaniards they mean war, and his offers of assistance will be rejected with such anger and contempt as only a Spaniard can justly express.

Mr Woodford has been aroused to see our ambassadors to France, England, and Germany, and what they have been saying about Cuba would make interesting reading. In his polite way Mr Woodford will tell the Spanish authorities how interested the United States have become in speedily ending a barbarous and devastating war so near the American coast. It is sometimes the case that a blister externally applied will relieve a severe internal ailment. It would look as if Dr McKinley has about concluded that a blister of Spanish fly preparation might soothe and allay the internal fevers and disturbances that have been so disagreeable to our own people at home, and seem to be getting but little better with the treatment heretofore used.

From all that we can gather it is the opinion of those in authority is is evident that the time for heroic treatment has about superseded, and when Minister Woodford reaches Madrid and opens up for business stirring events may be looked for. There will be talk of war and there may be war, but let that be as it may; the plans are all in course of development and Cuba will be lifted from the dust, her tears wiped away, and her liberties as fully assured as the powers of the United States can guarantee.

A WRITER in the Washington Post said that old residents dreaded the building of the railroad through the last great stretch of forest lands on the Greenbrier. Each of those residents would give what he hath to bring a railroad into the country. It is the dream of his life when he will be able to realize on the timber lands on which tax has been paid for a hundred years.

ALBERT VOTERS surrendered in Charleston to the officers of the law, and was taken back to Fayetteville, where he will have a day fixed for his sentence of hanging. He was out of jail three weeks and one would have thought that he would have gone further afield. Instead of that he waited around where he was well known and was captured in the next county.

GIOVANNI SAVRA and Michele Pizzo, Italian strollers, came by with their bag-pipes and "de little monk," and gave their performances to those who belonged to the kind that are soon parted from their nickles. It was not a high class show company; the performers sleep out and never bathe; the dirt is encrusted and they are regular "Dagoes." Lack of employment sent them on the road, so they say. They claim to be cousins. The Monkey and Italian are common enough sights in most places, but in this county they were very much of a novelty to the natives.

BEES have not done well for the past two seasons, owing to unpropensities and weather conditions at time when the working season is at its height. There will be very little honey on the market this year. Your enthusiastic bee keeper is not to be discouraged, but lives in hope of better luck another time. The bee is preeminently the poor man's friend, for, no matter how poor he may be, he can always have, at small expense and no trouble, other than what is a pleasure, an item on his bill of fare that is fit for the table of kings.

IN a recent tennis tournament between Cheyenne and Laramie, Wyoming, the representatives of Cheyenne won three events, taking all the acts played. Paris D. Yeager, lately of Marlinton, played for Cheyenne. The Daily Sun-Leader says: "The contest was arranged by Mr P. D. Yeager, who came to Cheyenne a few months ago, and who since his arrival has labored assiduously to revive interest in this popular sport among the young ladies and gentlemen of the city, and with very good success, as the courts are now the best courts in the city, where the devotees of the game put in many an enjoyable hour."

He is a public-spirited citizen and takes a lively interest in everything pertaining to the public welfare in a county, state and nation. He is the father of Editor Matheny, and had a lively time getting out of the town when surprised by the Federal troops led by General Kelley. A squad of eight or ten fugitives collected near the town on the way to Kennett's Square, in which two rigs belonged to the family of the Federal forces as they passed there the town in flies of four. General Kelley was a hospital guide in advance of the column accosted one of the fugitives and was passing him by unnoticed. HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Rev. Clawson as a Peacemaker.

Rev Samuel Clawson was, in his time, one of the most unique characters in the Conference. He had a genial disposition and an equable temper. But sometimes his temper would assert itself, as the following incidents will show:

In one of our circuits, at a certain appointment, a "church fuss" stood in the way of all advancement in church work. The pastor, altho a good man, was unable to bring about a reconciliation between the parties in the quarrel, so he sent for Rev. Clawson. When he came, he called a full church meeting, and set before them the litleness of engaging in church quarrels, and showed them how impossible it would be for success under those conditions. After talking for quite a while, he got all agreed to shake hands, but at this juncture an old lady arose, and said, "Brother Clawson, I'll tell you how the whole thing started." Brother Clawson turned to her and said kindly, "sit down sister and never mind that."

But the words had for the time stopped the hand-shaking, and Mr Clawson had again talked to that point when the sister rose again and said, "Brother Clawson, I'll tell who is to blame in this affair." Brother Clawson said rather sharply, "sit down or we will never get this matter fixed." Well, she sat down, but her words had their effect, and for a long time it seemed that Rev Clawson would not get them again to the point of shaking hands, but finally he did and just at the critical time the irrepressible sister jumped to her feet and said, "Brother Clawson, I'll tell you who is at the bottom of this trouble."

The strain was too much for Mr Clawson's patience and, turning to her, he said, "sit down, you old hag! I expect if the truth were known, you are at the bottom of all of it."—Exchange.

COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE LAW.

(Published at the request of the County Superintendant of Schools)

Be it enacted by the Legislature of West Virginia:

That chapter forty-five of the Code be amended by the insertion of the following, to be known as section ten (a).

SECTION 10A. Every person having under his control a child or children between the ages of eight and fourteen years, shall cause such child or children to attend some public school in the city, independent district or district in which he resides, and such attendance shall continue for at least sixteen weeks of the school year, provided the school be in session as many as sixteen weeks, and if every neglect of such duty the person offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction thereof before any justice be fined two dollars for the first offense, and five dollars for each subsequent offense. An offense, as understood in this act, shall consist in failure to send to school any child or children for five consecutive days, except in case of sickness of such child or children or other reasonable excuse. And it shall be the duty of every trustee and teacher to inform against any one so offending; and upon a failure so to do they shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be fined not exceeding five dollars: Provided, That if such child or children have attended for a like period of time a private day school, or if such child or children have been otherwise instructed for a like period of time in the branches of learning required by law to be taught in the public schools, or have already acquired such branches, or if his physical or mental condition is such as to render his attendance inexpedient, or impracticable, such penalty shall not be incurred: Provided, further, That in case there be no public school in session within two miles by the nearest traveled road of any person in the school district, he shall not be liable to the provisions of this act.

Any fines so collected shall be placed to the credit of the building fund of the district.

If sixty per cent. of the legal voters of any city, independent district, or sub-district shall petition the board of education against the enforcement of this act, the said act, so far as the sub-district is concerned, shall be null and void until the beginning of the next school year.

The Osborne
SPRING-TOOTH HARROW
The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable bosses secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth curling twothirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

Rattlesnakes, Butterflies, and . . . ?

Washington Irving said, he supposed a certain bill was called "Rattlesnake Hill" because it abounded in — butterflies. The "rule of contrary" governs other names. Some bottles are, supposedly, labeled "Sarsaparilla" because they are full of . . . well, we don't know what they are full of, but we know it's not sarsaparilla; except, perhaps, enough for a flavor. There's only one make of sarsaparilla that can be relied on to be all it claims. It's Ayer's. It has no secret to keep. Its formula is open to all physicians. This formula was examined by the Medical Committee at the World's Fair with the result that while every other make of sarsaparilla was excluded from the Fair, Ayer's Sarsaparilla was admitted and honored by awards. It was admitted because it was the best sarsaparilla. It received the medal as the best. No other sarsaparilla has been so voted or so honored. Good motto for the family as well as the Fair: Admit the best, exclude the rest.

Any doubt about it? Send for the "Curebook." It tells doubts and cures doubters.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

The Brown relationship trace their ancestry to Joseph Brown. He was of Scotch-Irish stock. His wife was Hannah M'Afferty. They lived a few years in Bath County, on the Bull Pasture, thence removed and settled on lands now owned by William C. Mann, near Edray. Some fruit-trees and a fine spring indicate the place where they lived, about three-fourths of a mile east of Mr Mann's residence.

Mr Brown died in a few years after settling here, but was survived by his widow for many years. She became suddenly blind and remained so for twenty years. She spent her time in knitting and taught many of her grand-daughters to knit. Among them was the late Mrs Thomas Nicholas. Mrs Nicholas would often tell how her grandmother would take her little hands into her hands and put them through the motions until she could do it herself. A few years before her death Mrs Brown recovered her sight as quickly as she had lost it, and could count chickens and geese forty yards away.

The widow Brown's daughters Polly and Hannah lived and died at the old home.

Rachel Brown was married to William Brock, and settled on the homestead.

Ann Brown became the wife of Jeremiah Friel, progenitor of the Friel relationship, and lived on the Greenbrier where Jasper Friel now lives.

Elizabeth Brown married a Mr McGuire, and lived in Nicholas.

Joseph Brown, junior, went to Nicholas County. His son Wesley Brown, a Confederate soldier, was at Edray during the great war between the States, and made himself known to his relatives.

John Brown was a soldier in the war of 1812, and never returned.

Josiah Brown, in whose memory this sketch is specially prepared and published, was the eldest of Joseph Brown's sons, and he married Jennie Waddell, a daughter of Alexander Waddell and Ellen Rouse his wife, near Mill Point. Josiah Brown was born June 22, 1777, his wife was born April 4th, 1771, married in 1799, and settled on the western section of the Brown homestead. Traces of the settlement yet to be seen near Mr Mann's residence. They were the parents of seven daughters.

Eleanor Brown, born August 6, 1802, was married to Zecheriah Barnett, from Lewis County, W. Va. Mr Barnett settled on a section of the Brown homestead, on land now owned by Andrew M. McLaughlin. In reference to her family the following particulars are given: John Wesley Barnett died died young; Josiah Barnett, John Andrew Barnett died in youth. Sarah Jane Barnett was married to George McLaughlin, late of Driftwood. He was a faithful Confederate soldier. Hannah Barnett became Mrs William Townsend. Martha Barnett lately deceased. James Barnett, Thomas Barnett, Stephen Barnett, and Newton Barnett are well-known citizens near Driftwood. The three first named were Confederate soldiers.

Hannah Brown was married to Jacob Arbaugh, who was from near Mill Point, and first settled on Sugar Tree Run, a part of the Brown homestead. Her children were Eliza Jane, Susannah Simon Lauretta Frances, Nancy Caroline, John Allen, George Brown, James Marion, William Houston, and Joseph Newton.

John Arbaugh was a Confederate soldier, and died in 1861 at the Lockridge Spring, near Dripod. George and Jasper passed through the war. George was in the 31st Regiment of Virginia Infantry.

Shortly after the war Jacob Arbaugh moved to Johnson County, Missouri, which he jocularly referred to as his twentieth change of homes since his marriage.

Jessie Brown, born October 9, 1805 was married to John Friel, son of Jeremiah Friel the pioneer, and settled on a section of the Friel homestead on the Greenbrier River. They were the parents of nine sons and three daughters. Fuller particulars regarding her family will appear in another paper

Ann Brown, born December 9, 1806, was married to James Courtney, and first settled on a part of the homestead. Their children were Andrew Jackson, Thomas, George Washington, Hanson, who died at the age of six years; Jane, who is now Mrs Adam Gliger; Julia, who is Mrs James Rhea; and Hannah Guy, who is now Mrs Godfrey Geiger.

Andrew Courtney was a Confederate soldier and died a prisoner of war at Fort Delaware. Thomas Courtney was also a Confederate soldier, survived the war, and now lives near Marlinton. George W. Courtney was a Confederate soldier, survived the war, but died near Buckeye about the year 1887.

Martha Brown, born February 14, 1808, was married to William Waugh, son of Samuel Waugh the pioneer, and settled at the old home. Martha was known in her family as "daddy's boy," since she was constantly out of doors with her father. She could harness the teams, plough, or drive the sled as occasion required. She was the mother of ten children—Davis, Zane, Robert, Enos, Ozias, William Clark, Jane Miriam, Mary Ann, and Almira. She died in Missouri, having lived awhile in Upshur County, West Virginia, then in Iowa.

Miriam Brown was born August 6, 1810, was first married to James Wriker Tyman, a native of Augusta County. Mr Tyman was a school teacher. They first settled on Elk where they lived two or three years. He and Robert Beale were friends and worked together in a sabbath school that was attended by the Gibsons, Varners, Hannahs, Mealys, and others. The land he worked on Elk had been a part of David Hannah's, and is now owned by John B. Hannah.

Mr Twyman put out a field of corn that grew finely and was very promising. But early in August there was a heavy frost, he became discouraged, gave up his land, and moved to Greenbrier River to land given Mrs Twyman by her father, Joseph Brown. Here he taught school, having the Friels, Moores, and Sharps for pupils. Mr Twyman had business in Huntersville the 17th of January, 1834, and on his return was drowned in Thorny Creek. His body was found on the 19th and buried the 20th. The Greenbrier home was just above the "Bridger Place." Their daughter Mary Frances is now Mrs Otho W. Rackman, on Indian Draft.

Mrs Twyman's second marriage was to the late Thomas Nicholas, on Indian Draft, near Edray. Mr Nicholas was a skillful mechanic, a much respected and prosperous citizen.

Mary Brown, born April 13, 1812, and was married to Jacob Waugh, and lived in Buckhannon. Jacob Waugh was a prominent citizen of Upshur County. Mrs Mary Waugh was the mother of fifteen children, ten only lived to be grown. Her sons were, Brown, Enoch, Homer, and John William. The daughter, Leah Waugh, was the third wife of the late Dr Pleasant Smith, of Edray.

With the patient assistance of Mrs Mary F. Rockman it has been put into the writer's power to furnish the preceding biographic particulars illustrating the family history of Josiah Brown, one of the early settlers of our county.

His history was one of humble toil and self-sacrifice for the good of his family. In the course of his life he endured great personal suffering and afflictions. He was bitten twice by rattlesnakes when in the ravines looking after his livestock. Once he was with his neighbor the late William Sharp, who cared for him and helped him home. The second time he was alone, and it is believed he saved his life by putting his lips to the punctures and thus extracted the poison. Finally a strange accompanied in the corner of one of his eyes and spread over most of the right side of his face. Many believed this sore was the result of the snake bites. It caused him excruciating sufferings that were greatly intensified by the efforts of sympathizing well-meaning friends to give him relief.

Sad and pathetic memories of his brother John Brown seemed to be ever haunting his mind, and the tears seemed to be ever ready to flow at the mention of his name.

In the war of 1812 Josiah Brown was drafted for service at Norfolk, Virginia. John Brown, a younger brother, being unmarried, volunteered in his brother's place, and was accepted, and was ordered to report for service at the Warm Springs. John seems to have been a very pious youth. On the evening before his departure for the seat of war he came over to his brother Josiah's to bid them all farewell and have one more season of social prayer and supplication. Then as he went away over the fields he was heard singing:

"When I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies,
I'll bid farewell to every fear,
And wipe my weeping eyes.

"Let cares like a wild deluge come
And storms of sorrow fall,
May I but safely reach my home,
My God, my Heaven, my all!"

This was the last that was ever seen or heard of him by his brother Josiah's family, as he never came back from the war. His remains are somewhere near Norfolk or perhaps most probably at Crany Island.

Truly, Josiah Brown's history is a sad and touching one. He now knows, no doubt, what Moses meant when he prayed: "Make me glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted me and the years wherein I have seen evil."

ABOUT MONROE COUNTY.

The town of Union is located in a charmingly picturesque region. It is convenient to renowned summer resorts. The railroad is sufficiently near to secure its facilities of transportation and travel without the din and annoyance those endure who live immediately on the railroad. There are four churches, whose pews are largely occupied by persons from the surrounding country. There seems to be no apparent lack of congeniality between the town and country people. The country people are proud of their town, newspaper, official and professional citizenship, while the town people are ever speaking in praise of their country friends.

The history of Union society is adorned by the names of such eminent persons as Senators A. F. Carpenter and Frank Hereford, Gen Chapman, member of Congress, and his son, Capt. Chapman commander of Chapman's Artillery Company, composed of the flower of young Monroe patriots, and did such gallant service.

It is near Union that Judge A. N. Campbell lives, the brave soldier, the pure Judge, and model Christian gentleman, and who is held in such high esteem by so very many of our readers.

For many years the eminent Divine, Rev. Dr Houston, resided in Union, one of the grandest men of his time then living in West Virginia. To his influence and instruction is due very much of the intelligence and refined culture and elevated type of piety for which a certain element of Monroe society is distinguished.

It was the writer's pleasure to meet in the editorial room of the Monroe Watchman the young Editor, A. S. Johnson, who is rapidly coming to the front as a live, progressive journalist. His history is one that illustrates how a youth of good morals, diligent application, and ever ready for any service, so it be honest and useful, can rise and be power for good in the community, in spite of serious drawbacks.

Much to the credit of Union society is the esteem and respect that is shown to Robert Crebs, a young master mechanic, who is devoted to his calling. Much of his handly earned gains have been lavishly spent in the rare comfort of an invalid parent and sisters, an example of self-sacrifice but rarely equaled. He is a worthy brother of his accomplished and useful sister, Miss Ella Crebs, organist, a distinguished teacher of high schools, and housekeeper for her brother Robert.

The more I write about Union, the more comes to my mind, and the more difficult appears the effort to do the interesting subject the justice it so richly deserves, and so the writer would conclude by remarking that to him it is a matter of proud congratulation that in West Virginia there is such a County as Monroe, and that Monroe has such an interesting county town as Union.

As our people are contemplating a reunion at an early day, it may perhaps interest them to listen to some faint echoes of the Monroe Reunion that came off so recently with such a tremendous out pouring of the patriotic citizenship of Monroe and adjoing counties. Such another gathering is hardly to be looked for in this generation. The almost universal opinion is that, as it was arranged, it was a melancholy instance of "vanity and vexation of spirit," and keenly felt disappointment of cherished expectations, and of every thing turning out differently from what was anticipated. It seems there was "too much chin music," to use the terse language of one of the bravest of the brave, an old artillery "rammer." "There was too much chin music, and too little hand music, and too little time for shaking hands, jokes, happy greeting words, and working the jaws on the good eatin's." Now, if the Marlinton management will take the cue from this brave old "rammer," happy memories will be carried home by all that may be present, unless it be the "chin musicians." Thousands of people are ready to say that there may be too much of a 'good thing,' of the kind hinted at, when reunions are on hand.

Three or four miles from Caldwell, near the roadside as one travels towards Union, is the comparatively hidden and unknown Organ cave. When it comes to be carefully explored and written up it will take its place among the most picturesque and interesting objects of its kind in our State. The Irish Corner basin finds an outlet for it drainage here, as has been demonstrated. Some years since parties threw handfuls of wheat bran into the rivulet that disappears in this cavern, and the bran reappeared at the Nickell mill pond, on Second Creek about four miles southward. Its tunnels and chambers have been explored for miles in various directions. The salt-petre rooms were worked in the war of 1812 and in the late war between the States. The nitrous earth seems to be very plentiful. Wooden shovels, hoppers and sleds used in 1812 have been found not so very long since in a room that had been overlooked for many years. This room is entered by a tunnel about as large as an oil barrel and seven or eight feet long. The earth was brought thro the tunnel in narrow sleds drawn by hand, by means of hickory wythes. There is a formation at one place bearing a striking resemblance to Pringle cave and is suggestive of a reed organ. When this formation is struck by something hard, sounds are produced in a variety of intonations, and hence the name Organ Cave. The primitive forests overshadow the entrance, and every thing around is awe-inspiring, and, in some respects, it is more impressive to approach this gloomy cavernous opening than it is to stand near the Natural Bridge in Virginia.

The late James Scott, whose home was near the eastern base of the "seven mile" mountain beyond the Sweet Springs, had a singular fancy for rattlers. He lived as a bachelor and was a person of remarkable corpulency, weighing about three hundred pounds when at his best. He had tamed thirty or four immense snakes and they had the freedom of his bed room. It was a favorite pastime with him to invite boys into their room on some playful pretext, and when they would enter the room and hook away from the unexpected snakes scattered about the floor, in their fright, he would shake all over with loud hilarious laughter. At night he would gather up his pets, giants of their kind, put them in bed, and sleep with them in his arms.

Mrs Ida Boone, the only daughter of Mrs Mary Caruth, who was for a time missionary to the Indians in the Indian Territory, is living near Organ Cave, Greenbrier County, wife of Mr William Boone. Among the curious things in her possession is a gourd bearing a striking resemblance to a baseball bat and could be readily taken for such at the first glance. It is about four feet in length and perfectly straight. W. T. P.

WHEN WE WERE NON-JURORS.

On the 16th day of September, 1861, Judge Robert M. Hudson held a whole term of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, Virginia, and adjourned it until the next term. Certain events transpired so that not another order was entered for over four years when we see Judge Harrison, of the 9th judicial circuit composed of the counties of Pocahontas, Monroe, Greenbrier, Mercer, and M'Dowell, entered an order in vacation, Aug. 17, 1865, appointing court officers, who were: Robert T. Gay, Clerk; William Curry, Deputy Clerk; J. F. Wanless, Sheriff. The courthouse at Huntersville not being in condition to hold court in, the first court was held at Wesley Chapel, at Hillsborough.

By looking at the files of the circuit court of Pocahontas County for the years 1865 to 1868 a large number of indictments for murder may be found against Confederate soldiers on account of persons killed in opposing the Confederate army in open fight. Some of these soldiers, in fact most of them, are those who stand highest in the estimation of the citizens of the county and who are leading members in church and state. These cases were never tried. The fact that a state of belligerency existed in America from the year 1861 to 1865, seems to have been generally recognized by all the civilized world, with the exception of the grand juries of Pocahontas County of the courts when an ex-Confederate sympathizer was so distinctly a non juror as any of the outlawed Jacobins who supported the Stuart kings of England.

When the citizens of this county are inclined to grumble at the inconvenience of jury duty, they should remember the condition of affairs when the privilege was denied them. In those days some of the men afterwards could wear the civil government of the county in white over way they would, and were leaders of the dominant party bad to libby for their lives.

Judge Nathaniel Harrison, a State appointee, was on the bench. He has been hated uniformly by our people since his term of service here, but we have heard sentiment always declare that he was an excellent lawyer. His private character was not above reproach, if we can judge from the tales we still hear of him, and it is not unbecoming to study the signatures with which each days proceedings were closed by him. Ordinarily it is bold and true, showing that he wrote a beautiful hand; while at other times it is so badly formed that it can hardly be read, indicating that the hand that held the pen was very tired or overcome. There is a tradition that soon after leaving here this judge died a pauper in the city of Denver.

At one of the courts an order shows that there was not an attorney present who could make oath that he had not borne arms against the United States or aided and abetted those in rebellion. Then the judge appointed Colonel J. W. Davis to prepare indictments and render such aid to the grand jury as they might require, "which he promptly and efficiently done."

On the 3d day of April, 1866, William Skeen, a practising attorney of Virginia, presented a full pardon and amnesty from the President of the United States and evidence that he had taken the oaths prescribed and that he had been a regular practising attorney of Pocahontas County since 1829, and that he was marked on the docket as counsel in 105 cases, but being unable to take the oath prescribed by the State of West Virginia his motion to practice law was overruled and exceptions taken.

It was about this time that Daniel Stofer, afterwards prosecuting attorney of this county, took the oath required by the State and was held in jail for perjury until the Supreme Court passed on the case.

The supreme court reversing the action of the circuit court convicting Daniel Stofer of perjury, the said Stofer moved the court to reinstate him as a practising attorney, but Judge Harrison took the view of the matter that the supreme court had passed upon a technicality and had not decided the case upon its merits, and that out of respect for bench and bar the said Stofer should not come back and be reinstated.

At the April Term, 1870, Judge McWhorter held his first term here, and the first order made was allowing "Count" Stofer to qualify.

At this term of court other attorneys who qualified were John M. Lightner, Henry M. Mathews, William M. McAlister, Joseph Mayes, George H. Moffett, and Alexander F. Mathews.

With the disappearance of Judge Harrison, who resigned two years before his term expired, the fear with which the ex-Confederates regarded the courts wholly disappeared. In a short their disabilities were removed, and since then they have taken the liberty to remain in power to the extent of electing county officials with more or less regularity.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN is running for mayor of Boston on the platform to license gambling dens and disorderly houses.

THE President of Mexico was assaulted by a man named Adolfo Arroyo, who struck him with his open hand. The next day the people broke into the police station and killed him with knives.

GENERAL LEW WALLACE is a candidate for Senator from Indiana, and is generally supported by the liberals of that State. While he is a champion chariot racer he is a foe to that modern invention the bicycle.

IN some States swindlers have been operating by telling farmers that all must erect sign-boards at their homes, by act of the legislature, and collecting fifty cents as a guarantee that they will furnish a sign.

ACCIDENTS with fire arms are not uncommon. Every boy should teach himself by constant care and attention to instinctively turn the muzzle of his gun towards the sky. When it becomes a second nature with him that boy or man is not apt to shoot either himself or anyone else.

THE authorities are discussing the legal points connected with the re-sentencing of Albert Voirs. He was not there the day of his hanging, and the code does not provide for this case. There is no question but what he may be re-sentenced, but whether it should be done at once or at the regular term.

IN New York there is a law against killing rabbits and squirrels. In Broome County the rabbits have become a great pest. A farmer whose cabbage was being destroyed squirted poison on a portion of his cabbages and the next morning counted 228 rabbits sitting on their haunches dead. The question is now whether the game law was violated.

MATTERS among the striking miners have been so arranged that by September 20 all the operators in the Pittsburg district are expected to be at work, numbering in all some twenty-three thousand persons. It is believed that so far as West Virginia, Ohio, and Indiana are concerned the trouble for the present is over, and that work will be pushed on a basis for the time being satisfactory; but not finally adjusted, as considerable time will be required for a permanent basis of future management of the mines.

As a rule our public schools hold too long sessions. The more haste less speed is generally the case with study. The child would improve more rapidly if he were confined four hours instead of eight, and the parent could get the benefit of his help at home without robbing him of the necessary hours of recreation. The long sessions of our public schools make them unpopular with the student, and when it becomes so the schools usefulness is ended. We would especially present this to the convention of Pocahontas since before and ask them what they think of long and short hours in school.

THE trial of the president of the County Court of Kanawha has been going on for some time before a jury of the Circuit Court of that county. One of the most startling parts of the evidence was that the defendant, who is known as J. S. McDonald, had borne the name of William Jones for a portion of his life. The trial brought out strong evidence of corruption in Kanawha County. Members of the council of the city of Charleston and of the county court were ready to monopolize the lighter business in the city of Charleston and grant licenses to themselves. The defendant was the principal witness upon his side, and has been accordingly denying charges and explaining and making all appear right and proper, but he had something of a task to do it.

CAPTAIN ANDRE, I or so called former and his wife living in K—y county, Indiana, were father & mother and came to parting ways in their last until they told where their money was kept. The farmers met quietly at the courthouse one court-day and talked the matter over, and came to the conclusion that a certain gang had to be wiped out. The matter was judiciously kept a secret, and when five of the suspected gang were arrested last week for a fresh offence the jail was entered by overwhelming numbers and five men were taken to a tree that had been selected months previously and hung until dead. Their names were Bert Andrews, Cliff Gordan, Henry Shuler, Bill Jenkins, and Lyle Levi. It has subsequently transpired that some of the parties had been killed by blows and shots before they were strung up. The act is justified by the citizens to such an extent that no jury can be ad to convict any one, even if it bould clearly ascertained who were the lynchers. Thieving and systematic robbery had become a business and the criminals had not been promptly dealt with is the glos. Governor M ant avows his purpose, however, to bring all the powers at his command, civil and military, to ferret out and punish the lynchers at all hazards. "No matter what the pretext is, men who take the enforcement of law into their own hands and lynch men shall be punished in Indiana," the governor most emphatically declares.

THE superintendent of a New Jersey Sabbath school noticed a colored boy as present for the first time, and inquired his name for enrollment, as he had come to join the school. The teacher vainly tried to look dignified when the boy his answer: "Well, massa calls me cap'n, but my maiden name is Moses."

HERE is what the famous Dr. Robington tells of an Irish gentleman that wanted medicine, and the Doctor recommended an emetic. The gentleman objected, saying in his polite Irish manner: "My dear doctor, it is of no use your giving me an emetic. I tried an emetic twice in Dublin, and it would not stay down either time."

SOME one gives this good counsel in regard to things to be complained of or that make us feel badly at the time: "Leave your grievances as Napoleon did his letters, unopened for three weeks, and it is astonishing how few of them by that time will need answering."

IT must have been a keen observer that found out the this important fact, and one worth remembering: "A man who is intimate on short acquaintance is very apt to be 'short' on a more intimate acquaintance."

Local Events.

H. M. TRAINER says the prospect for a railroad is very flattering and he thinks we are right in it.

THE public is invited to attend the exhibit of Mrs. A. H. Dills' art class at Academy next Saturday.

THE Wesley Chapel, at Glade Hill, was dedicated last Sunday by Revs Martin and Wheeler.

THE law protects wild turkeys, pheasants and partridges for two years. This will at least prevent their sale in the stores.

THE railroad engineers moved their camp to the mouth of Clover Creek last Wednesday. From there they expect to pitch their tents at Sharp's.

IT would be better for this town if the railroad came to this point and went up Knapps Creek. It would be better for the County at large if it followed the meanderings of the Greenbrier.

THE recent talk of a railroad has sprung up a talk of long ago when a road was being first spoken of up [illegible] and [illegible] dispute [illegible] see how they can build a railroad [illegible] Why, when the farmers can hardly get rails to build their fences."

TUESDAY morning the ground was covered with frost. Ice a quarter of an inch thick was formed on water pails. The vegetation was frozen stiff, yet for some reason it was not blasted. Most are of the opinion that this was due to the extreme dryness of the air.

THE writ of prohibition in the Eastham murder case from Tucker County was refused by the Supreme Court at its recent session. The writ of habeas corpus also failed. The case is remanded to the Circuit Court of Tucker for trial under the indictment for murder.

MARION COUNTY is to have a County-seat war. The town of Monington proposes to build the court-house and jail free. Fairmont is the old County seat, and has a contract let for a County court-house to cost $200,000. There has been a good deal of work done on the foundation. Ex.

IN her last issue we by mistake inserted in H. A. Yeager's letter all that part designating committee men, color of caps to be worn, and the arrangement with Mrs Cunningham for their purchase; which was the work of the executive committee. It was the desire to say that three bands would be in attendance when his letter does not mention bands at all.

FORTY squirrels were killed in one cornfield in the Levels in one day recently. It has ceased to be a laughing matter. One man reports that from a five acre field he does not believe there will be gathered a hundred undamaged nuts. In this town is a small hickory tree which has some nuts on it, and two squirrels were killed there Monday morning, right in the heart of the town, so to speak.

TO judge from the contents of the Randolph County papers, the County seat controversy is a hot, dangerous fight. The proposition made by the town of Elkins has been termed bribery and corruption by Beverly adherents. Some Beverly men have called the committee "carpet-baggers" in a way that makes it a term of reproach. We, to this County, know of the animosities aroused by this kind of election, which in this County equaled in some respects the feelings engendered by the Civil War. To the honor of this County, be it said, that the Court-house question has not entered into the election of County officers, except to prove disastrous to those who attempted to use it.

A DISTRESSING drought has prevailed in Greenbrier and contiguous sections of Greenbrier for the past six weeks. This will make seeding quite late and hasten the cutting of corn. Much of the wheat, now selling for 80 cents at Ronceverte, weighs 62 pounds to the bushel. Some of the oats weigh several pounds more than the regulation weight. Railroad ties are selling for thirty cents apiece; cross ties or sleepers make a two-horse load. Parties are hauling lumber and staves from the head of Little Clouk to White Sulphur on horses that should pay for their "critter and chollus." Rye is however much better than corn selling. The trouble in strong water is the scarcity of water, and the general dryness of the ground. A contractor at Union was connected to procure some flour from this point for a building he was fitting up. Upon going to Ronceverte he found the best he could get was shipped from Kansas. He had to pay four dollars a thousand feet. He procured, as a makeshift, timber cut at seventy-seven dollars per thousand. This lumber grew in Pocahontas. Now is that for high?

PETER OLIVER has been appointed postmaster at Green Bank.

ALL railroads lately have an increased business both in freight and passengers.

CORBETT will give a boxing exhibition at the Lewis county fair at Weston.

HIGHLAND County has still great hopes of an electric road laid on the road bed of the Staunton and Parkersburg turnpike.

THE mayor and town marshall of Cameron and a policeman were arrested for trespass on the complaint of a man who had been fined for disobeying a city ordinance.

THE Alleghany Collegiate Institute, at Alderson, has had a very auspicious opening. At the beginning this year the school had twenty-five more pupils than last year.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—All young ladies who expect to ride in the procession will prepare a red band with thirteen white stars for cap, as caps could not be secured with stars. Caps can be had at Mr. Cunningham's by Tuesday, the 28.

THE frost Wednesday morning completed what the frost of Tuesday began. We have frosts every fall, and in fact every month in the year at this altitude, so while some corn has been caught uncut still we should congratulate ourselves that we have had a reasonably long season.

CONGRESSMAN CLAYTON, of Alabama says that prosperity has not struck the south. Wheat is good for 50 cents per bushel, but cotton is less per pound than this time last year, although all the planter has to buy at an increased price, the prospects are not very brilliant for the southern people.

NOW WHEN squirrels are so plentiful that many persons are killing them and not using them a receipt for a squirrel pagnut mea, be in order. Boil the squirrel until done. Let it cool. Strip the meat from the bones and stew with onions and either cooked or uncooked potatoes. Season to taste. Break dry bread in it and serve hot.

THE amount of interest that is being taken in the reunion is wonderful. None would have believed three months ago that any social affair could have so stirred the people of the county. Visitors to our county will see it when the eternal hills have put on the varied dress of fall, the coat of many colors. The people within reaching distance of Marlinton have made arrangements to entertain the visitors the night before and the night after. In the Levels, particularly, the committee has consulted with the various citizens, and they have systematically provided for the visitors from Greenbrier and those who come from that direction. The denizens of Marlinton will all contribute towards the decoration of their houses and business places.

THERE is an interesting railroad survey on record in the clerk's office of the county court which lays off the route from Marlinton to the mouth of Clover Creek. It is the survey of the old Black Diamond road that was about to be built twenty years ago. The distance given by this survey from Huntersville to Clover Creek is 23 miles, to Marlinton seven and from thence 23 miles. Apparently it is an easy road to be built as long as they keep to the route on which the present engineers are working, but when they leave the Greenbrier and go up Clover creek to cross the divide to the waters of Elk the trouble begins. Cuts, trestles, tunnels, and fills follow each other in bewildering succession on an average grade of about two hundred feet to the mile. There are calculations for one hundred thousand cubic yards of excavations of solid rock and loose earth. Thousands of cubic yards of masonry called for. We can well understand how this road struck terror to the souls of its promoters.

THE Musicale of next week bids fair to be something worth seeing by all. The program will consist of entirely new features and the entertainment will not contain a feature that has been given here before. A one act tragedy, entitled the "Battle of Droop Mountain," will be put upon the boards for the first time, with that able histrion's genius, Mr Walker Yeager, playing the leading part. The scene is laid in a mountain home, five miles to good roaring distance of those days; from the battle ground on the day of the battle. A Confederate soldier, a member of Captain McDowell's company, comes in covered with gore, and very much out of breath by his long run, and tells his wife of the battle. The cannon are heard to roar

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Great Mineral Discovery in West Virginia.

Under the personal direction of Mr R. B. Hansell, of Baltimore, Maryland, and also of the Geological Society of London, England, during the past few months extensive iron ore prospecting operations have been conducted for over sixteen miles on the Beaver Lick Mountain in West Virginia. An enormous bed of excellent iron ore has been discovered and exposed, together with manganese ore of high grade. In its wonderful capability to yield the ores needed in the iron and steel trade, it is evident in the early future, this new mineral property will become a great and cheap source of supply. This discovery is in Greenbrier and Pocahontas Counties, immediately along the line of the proposed railroad from White Sulphur north thro these two counties to connect with what is known as the Dry Fork railroad near the headwaters of the Greenbrier. Mr Hansell has been for several months prospecting with a strong force, and has uncovered vast beds. The last find is said to be 60 feet thick.—Spectator and Vindicator.

Rescued Deer.

Man's relation to the wild creatures of the world is, in the present day, so commonly that of destroyer, that it is pleasant to read of a case in which man assumed the character of rescuers, and in which the rescued were not unappreciative of the kindness shown them.

In April of the present year two gentlemen of Bismarck, North Dakota, discovered twenty-four deer hemmed in by ice and water above Bismarck. They were in a clump of bushes, shut in by the ice, neck-deep in water, and had become so thoroughly chilled that they had no power to save themselves.

The two men went to the spot in a skiff and cut a passage thro the ice, but even then they had to drive the deer along and compel them to swim a shore. The poor creatures were nearly chilled to death, and two of them were quite helpless on reaching land. These two were taken to a barn and thawed. They made no resistance when carried in, and submitted to having their legs rubbed to restore circulation.

Even when they could walk again, they seemed in no hurry to depart, probably finding their warm quarters more desirable than the icy water in which they had so long stood. They showed no distrust of their rescuers, and were manifestly grateful for the help they had received.

Twelve other deer were found on a cake of ice, and in was necessary to splash water on them to get them to swim ashore. Both parties of deer would have perished but for the humane exertions of the two gentlemen.

THE WAR BAG.

Stories of the War first Published in the Sixties.

I belonged to the horse cavalry of old Bedford, so called, in contra distinction to the foot cavalry of old Stonewall. We would go out foraging sometimes, and our experience was very varied, and our success equally so. I never got completely put out but once, and that was by a good old country woman, in Upper Georgia. I knocked at the door of a rather rude hut, and on being invited to enter, found the old lady of the house knitting a pair of socks and her daughter carding by her side. She gave me a look, partly benevolent, partly curious, and partly forbidding, and then broke in with the query:

You belong to a critter company doesn't you?

Cavalry soldier. Yes, madam.

Old Lady. (Turning to her daughter.) That now, Lizer Jane here's one of them critter company soldiers and me just done throwin' all the butter milk to the yaller sow's pigs!

Mike D——, a stalwart and jolly Irishman, living in Missouri, had long desired to vote, but was afraid to try to register, as it was well known he was a Democrat, and no loyal Registrar will enroll one of that persuasion in "free Missouri." Just before the registration day, Mike came out to the disgust of his friends and the delight of the "trooly loil," in favor of "nager equality." He forestalled all argument by declaring the he was ready and willing to "hate any man who daffered in opinion with him." He was of course registered without difficulty, and his vote being now secure beyond all peradventure, he explained what he meant by negro equality. "What I mane by nager equality is this, d'ye mind, that one nager is aqual to another nager, and Till whale ony man that says he's any betther."

During the war, the Confederate prisoners at Rock Island were guarded by negro soldiers recruited at the South. Upon one occasion one of these sentinels hailed a prisoner with,

What you is gwine?

Prisoner—To the hydrant.

Loyal negro—Whar is dat?

Prisoner—I am going to get some water.

Loyal negro—G'lang Back. You done tole two tale about whar you 'se gwine.

On another occasion, a prisoner seeing a negro sentinel with his arms folded over his gun in the rain, trying to keep himself warm, made a rush past the careless sentinel and made his escape. The negro was so much astonished that he forgot his gun, but called lustily for the corporal of the guard. "Corporal of de ge-ard, corporal of de ge-ard, come here quick. One white man clar gone and de Lord know how many more is comin'."

Those who belonged to the Army of Northern Virginia know that to "run the blockade" was a very difficult thing, while very frequently it was done, regardless of martial law or anything else. While the —— regiment was in camp near Orange Court House, Va., Tom S—— received permission to "go to town," took his "war bag" which has been previously arranging by placing two black bottles (one filled with water) of the same size and with corks alike, he sallied forth without a cent in his pocket, except one dollar of the "promise to pay," which he soon spent at one of the Sutler's tents for a tin of cider and a ginger. He sauntered around until he found the place, where some of the boys told him a fellow sold liquor on the sly, when nearing the church at the gate, that is, he was to pay $25, cash, for one quart of brandy. Tom quietly pulled out his bottle which was very quickly filled, and returned to his "war bag," though very quietly, then feeling in his pocket for change, he found, as he said to the dealer in liquor, that "he had left his pocket-book in the pants that he pulled off in camp." That is very bad," said the liquor man. "Then good-bye," said Tom. "It is too bad, but you just please take bottle and contents up there on that shelf and wait till I see a friend who is out here, so that I can get the money, and I will come back," and at the same time handed him a bottle which on which was set aside as requested. Tom went on his way regretting that he had made such a good exchange a bottle of water for a bottle of brandy.

The above is literally true, and I doubt not, there are many who still survive, who, if questioned, would well remember how Tom S—— (the tar-heel) ran the blockade with his never failing war-bag.

Every soldier knows how angry the boys will get, when tired and weary, if a bungling or martinet officer is long in putting them in position. On the night of the 6th of May, 1864, after a hard day's fight, Brig. Gen. —— of ——'s division, kept marching his brigade back and forward until a Yankee bullet would almost have been welcomed. One of Wright's Georgians seemed to appreciate the 'fix' of the baffled and befooled brigade and hallooed in a voice, which was heard above the growls, mutters and 'cuss-words.' "Boys, why do n't you swap General —— off for a brush pile and set it on fire?" The brigade soon got into position!

Maj. W. was so persecuted with oath-taking during the four years of war that Boniface grew weary of his life, and was ready to swear that he was willing to die. He had twenty seven specimens of oaths inflicted upon him by military officials, binding him to support every sort of political party, and in every possible way. He had been sworn in and out, back and forward, front and rear, until he took to it so naturally that whenever a stranger rode up to the hotel of which he was landlord, he came out and held up his right hand. This apparent willingness to swear anything bluffed a good many of the truly loyal, and he began to hope that his case was generally understood and that no more oaths would be required of him.

One day a long, lean, slabsided Yankee captain rode up followed by thirty boys in blue. Boniface went to the door, took off his hat, held up his right hand, and put on a solemn, reverential look.

Yankee. What de z yeou mean by standing thar with yeour hand up?

Boniface. Every officer who comes here swears me to something and I suppose you are going to put me through like the rest. I am ready.

Yankee. Waal, yeou are smairt. I'll swear yeou. Yeou dew solemnly swear yeou will get the best dinner yeou ken for 30 men in 30 minutes. There now yeou are through. Attention, company! Prepare to dismount! Dismount!

Boniface never came out again to meet his guests with uplifted hand.

During the time that Allen occupied the gubernatorial chair of Louisana, he issued an order requiring all men, young and old, to organize into companies of minute men, whose duty it was to drill and be ready to assist the regular Confederate forces in case of State invasion. On one occasion the minute men of Bienville Parish, had been ordered out to serve a mock campaign of a week's duration. As they came "marching home with gay and gallant tread," the whole command was halted before a log cabin to permit an old man to go out of the ranks. Forthwith there issued from its doorway, a numerous progeny of Confederate townheads, joyfully crying:

"Yonder's daddy! yonder's daddy! "Hush! hush! children," said the fond father, softly waving them back with his hand. "I want to see if the old woman will know me with my soldier clothes on."

In the summer and fall of 1861, it was the misfortune of quite a number of young men, who wore the grey jacket, to be stationed for many weeks upon Valley Mountain in West Virginia. Nobody who has been there can forget the deluges poured down day and night there all those dreary weeks, and how the only "tap" for the poor soldier was the water which fell upon those everlasting hills. Rations were scanty; there being in the pocket of the fond, as he said to the dealer in liquor, that "he had left his pocket-book in the pants that he pulled off in camp." That is very bad," said the liquor man. "Then good-bye," said Tom. minds of soldiers naturally came up, and the length of the war and its probable results were fully discussed.

"Well, lieutenant," said the surgeon, "after this much experience in the army, what do you think of war?"

The lieutenant looked out on the falling torrents, and visions of a cool room at home, and decanters and glasses passed before him, heaving a deep sigh, he answered:

"I am no military man doctor, and therefore I am not able to express any opinion upon military matters, but I regard war as the most gigantic temperance movement the world ever saw.,,

At the battle of Lebanon, Tennessee, the 11th Texas cavalry belonged to John Morgan's command. It was made up of a set of brave and reckless men, thoroughly acquainted with all the peculiar accomplishments of their section, including the use of the lasso. Their skill with the lasso was often made available in procuring them certain luxuries, such as fat pig, fat turkey and fat chicken. On the day of the battle, one of the 11th lassoed a Dutch cavalryman in the Yankee service. He was a fat, thickset, surly fellow, with a stolid countenance, and as he sat squarely on his horse, giving a grunt of dissatisfaction when a playful twitch was made on the rope round his neck, he presented a spectacle of intense interest to the surrounding rebs. Approaching General Morgan, the Texan saluted him respectfully and told him that he had captivated the Dutchman at the end of his line.

Dutchy blurfied out, "Ish you General Morgans?"

The General replied in the affirmative.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

Among the earliest settlers of the Elk region was Joseph Hannah, a son of Dr David Hannah, the Irish emigrant who lived at the mouth of Locust Creek. Some mention was made of his parents in a former sketch that need not be repeated here. Quite early in this century he married Elizabeth Burnsides, on the Greenbrier east of Hillsboro. She was a sister of the late Robert Burnsides. Soon after marriage he settled on the "Old Field Fork of Elk."

His home was on Mill Run near where William Hannah, a grandson, now lives. This immediate vicinity seems to have been a place of more than ordinary importance in prehistoric times. One of the most frequented Indian trails seems to have been from Clover Lick up the creek to the Thomas Spring, thence over the mountain, crossing at the notch near Clark Rider's farm; thence down by James Gibson's to Elk. Here the valley runs due east and west, which was noticed, evidently, by the Indians, and at the point midway between the east and west horizon a symbolic circle was constructed representing two colossal rattlesnakes in the act of swallowing each other. One light, the other darkness. The day seems to swallow the night and the night seems to swallow the day—as the Indian medicine man saw it—and this marked the process that seemed to destroy something while making other things alive. It was here religious rites of more than ordinary solemnity were performed preparatory for hunting and for war. Nearly a mile further down was the encampment where about two acres of land had been denuded of trees for camp fires, and this was the "old field" that gave this branch of Elk its name, and was the first piece of ground planted by Joseph Hannah.

Mr and Mrs Hannah reared a large family of well-behaved, industrious children. This family did a good part in the development of this thrifty section of our county. In reference to their children the following particulars are given.

Joseph, William, Robert, and Sally died in childhood or early youth.

John Hannah married Mary Sharp, daughter of Joseph Sharp, near Frost, near Frankenton. Their children were Sarah Jane, who became Mrs Aaron Fowlkes; Margaret Elizabeth, who was married to the late John Hall, Rachel Ann was married to the late George Gibson, near Marlinton; Martha Susan, now Mrs James Gibson; Amanda Pleasant, the wife of William Lee Hambrick; Mary Ellen who died young. Joseph Bryson Hannah, late a merchant at Frost, and whose wife was Elizabeth Moore, daughter of the late Isaac Moore, of Edray. Sheldon Clark Hannah, on lower Elk, whose wife was Martha Moore, daughter of Samuel and Nancy Beale Moore, near Marlinton. His children—Georgiana, Davis, Albert, Virgie, Effie, Clark, Hugh, Feltner, Jane, Lee, Freddie. Andrew Warwick Hannah, who wife was Dora Hannah, daughter of Henry White, near Driscol. His children Lovie Sadie, Lucy, Mary, Maggie, Bessie, Marvin. William Hamilton Hannah, who married Sarah White sister of the person just mentioned. Their children Andrew, Willie, Myrta, Forest, Bryson, Carrie. George Luther Hannah married Emma Bell McClure, daughter of Arthur McClure, on Locust. She expired suddenly while attending public worship in Mary Gibson Chapel a few years ago, much lamented by attached friends and relatives. Henry Hannah, Peter Hannah, and John Hannah junior, died young during the late sad war between the States of our glorious Union.

David Hannah, son of the "Old Field" pioneer, married Hester Sickafoose from lower Crabbottom, and settled on Elk and opened a nice home. In reference to their children the following information is in our power to give.

Sarah Hannah was married to Silas Sharp, and settled near Linwood. Her son Luther David is a well-known merchant at the old homestead. Her daughters Mary Ella Frances is the wife of Robert Gibson, near Mary's Chapel, and Melinda Catherine is Mrs J. Ellis Hannah at the "Old Field."

Henry Hannah married Margaret McClure, and is now a merchant at Renick's Valley, Greenbrier County.

Another son Rev George P. Hannah married Leah Grimes, and his residence is at Rural Dale, Upshur County.

Melinda Hannah, a daughter of David Hannah, is now Mrs John Rose, and resides in Webster county near the Randolph border.

Mary Hannah was married to Samuel Gibson and settled near the parental homestead.

Otho and Joseph Hannah died young.

Jane Hannah, daughter of the pioneer, was married to the late Joseph Barlow, one of the sons of the venerated John Barlow, once of Stony Creek, and lived on Red Lick Mountain, settling in the unbroken forest and built up a nice home. Mr Barlow was occupied in a variety of industries in his mountain home. In connexion with clearing many acres of dense forest, he had a tannery, a blacksmith shop, cooper shop, made and repaired shoes, and could do neat cabinet work and carpenter work also. The number and variety of fruit trees planted around his home is the wonder and admiration of all that have ever seen his orchard.

Mr and Mrs Barlow were the parents of two daughters and one son. Silas Barlow married Miss Duncan and lives on a section of the homestead. Mary Barlow is now Mrs Amos Gay and lives on a part of the homestead. It was the writer's pleasure to officiate at both marriages. Martha Barlow is in possession of the old home.

Elizabeth Hannah, daughter of the Elk pioneer, was married to Dr Addison Moore, and lived near Edray. Allen Moore, Esq., near Huntersville, is her son.

Mary Hannah, another daughter of the venerable pioneer, was married to Henry Bennett, and settled on Cummings Creek, near Huntersville.

Thus far has the writer been able to review the family history of Joseph Hannah, who was an interesting character in the pioneer history of Elk, with the assistance rendered by his son, John Hannah, now living on a part of the "Old Field" homestead part eighty years of age, and his widowed daughter Mrs Lizzie Hall, who is devoting her useful life to the care and comfort of her aged father. This assistance is hereby gratefully recognized, hoping they may feel it was not time or effort spent in vain in this attempt to keep their friends from being forgotten, and thus preserve a knowledge of their ancestral and family relationship.

Joseph Hannah was a person of impressive personal appearance. His memory was remarkably retentive and his conversational powers something wonderful. He had committed to memory, it is believed by some, the greater portion of the Bible, and he could recite the Scriptures for hours at a time,—having a special preference for the historical narratives of the patriarchs and the wanderings of the Israelites and the conquest of the promised land under Joshua. He saw in these historical narratives illustrations of the life now to be lived by Christian people, and it was one of the greatest pleasures of his old age to have his neighbors assemble and repeat these narratives in their presence. The same God that led Noah, Abraham, Moses, and Joshua was now the one to take care of humble, believing people amid the Elk mountains and lead them thro sorrows night and danger's gloom. His idea seemed to be that since all the good men in the Bible have passed over to the promised rest, God would make it his special business to care for and help along those who were trying to be but strangers and pilgrims in the earth.

He seemed to be fully persuaded that God cared just as much for him in the lonely recesses of the forest wilderness of the Elk region as he once cared for Moses during the forty years he was handling sheep in the desert wilds of Horeb. That with God there was no difference between Elk and Horeb, or if there was a difference it was in favor of Elk. The man of Horeb was now safe at home, while the man on Elk was far away from home and needed special grace to help him on in his duties. Such seemed the filial way he reasoned about God and his relations to God, and who is prepared to say that he was not right in thinking that as a father pities his children so the Lord pities those that fear him.

Some years since an article written by a distinguished minister in Bath County stated that Simon Girty, the renegade, was summarily put to death by being burned in a log heap by an enraged and desperate party of men in the Little Levels. Joseph Hannah was reforced to as an eye-witness of the dreadful affair or as having some personal knowledge of it. Mr Hannah's children solemnly declare that they never heard their father say a word about such an occurrence happening to anybody in this county under any circumstances of provocation whatever. Simon Girty's grave is now to be seen near the city of Detroit, so he was not burned in a Pocahontas log heap.

When a mere lad Joseph Hannah was sent by his father to Elk to look after the lion stock in the range. He went to first Dingerville with his family in his youth and early manhood. He was remarkably active in his movements and very fleet of foot. He would often toll of a prank he made when a practical joke, or "trick" as he called it, was played on him by Richard Hill, Adam Bumgardner, one Mullins, and a colored man named Dick. Young Hannah and Dick were boeing corn. The party just named explained to Dick what they were up to and Dick cheerfully promised to set his part. While the two were hoeing away a shot was fired from ambush, Dick fell and made a dreadful outcry, rolled and kicked about in seemingly terrible agony. Young Joseph Hannah fled precipitately towards the house and in the race leaped a gully. When matters came to be understood and quiet restored, and Dick having gotten over his make-believe sufferings, the leap was measured and it was forty-two feet from track to track. Mr Hannah was fond of telling his friends that he had "jumped the decree." Forty feet was the "decree." "Decree" meant what "record" now means in races and athletic games. In "jumping the decree" he "broke the record" by two feet.

When the writer first remembers seeing Mr Hannah he was of very venerable appearance. His grey hair was combed back and plaited in a cue that hung down between his shoulders. The last time I ever saw him we were spending the night at Sampson Ochelbree's, in the winter of 1849. The two old men were in busy conversation until a late hour, and most of the talk was about the children of Israel and the dealings of God. The fire was getting low, the candle about burned out, when mother Ochelbree observed it was about time to get ready for bed. At this suggestion Mr Hannah arose and in a very soft solemn tone repeated the words and then sang:

"The day is past and gone,
The evening shades appear;
O may we all remember well
The night of death draws near.

"Lord, keep us safe this night,
Secure from all our fears;
May angels guard us while we sleep
Till morning light appears."

He then knelt in prayer and poured out his full heart in humble, trusting prayer,—in the tone and manner of a loving child to a kind and more loving father. The memory of that prayer, heard nearly fifty years ago, imparts a pleasant glow to my feelings while writing these memorial sentences.

It is not often we find a question and reply more to the purpose than the following instance: "Do you enjoy novel reading?" "Yes, one can associate with people in fiction that one would n't dare to speak to in real life."

In the preceding talk about wealth, it may have occurred to few that the richest man in the world is Li Hung Chang, with his finger nails nearly a foot long. His wealth is put down at five hundred million dollars, and he could buy five hundred counties at the assessed value of Pocahontas. The next is John Rockefeller with one hundred and eighty millions placed to his credit. Then come the Duke of Westminster, Colonel North, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Wish Gen. with a hundred million each. These six persons counted over a billion dollars. We know of six more, as good by nature and for virtue by practice, who cannot control a million each, and the many kings ten in their neighborhood.

CAPTAIN A. B. LEE, a London journalist who went to investigate the route to the Klondike has returned to his home and reports very discouragingly. He says that he has reliable authority for saying it has cost ten millions of dollars to extract about two millions of gold from this new gold mining region. He denounces the Klondike boom as an iniquitous conspiracy hatched by interested persons.

IT seems that our bitternut friends in Georgia do not take kindly to the colored office holders. On September 5th a colored postmaster at Hagansville, who had been appointed in spite of protesting citizens, was shot to pieces. He was alive when found but cannot tell who did the shooting. These same Hagansville people have also declared their purpose to shoot any colored revenue officer that may visit their vicinity.

RECENT observations of the sunspots has awakened much interest among the astronomers. One expresses the opinion that a new planet is about to break away from the sun and it will be attended with consequences of a very dangerous character to the planetary system having the sun as a centre. One scientific writer thinks this event is foreshadowed in Revelation viii 8-11: "And the third angel sounded and there fell a great star from heaven burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers and upon the fountains of waters. And the name of the star is called Wormwood; and the third part of the waters became wormwood, and many men died of the waters because they were made bitter."

SO FAR as European sentiment has developed with reference to American intervention in behalf of Cuba. Austria and Germany seem to be the more outspoken. A correspondent of a London paper writing from Vienna, September 24th, says that the general opinion there is that such action would be unjustifiable and that the propects is the Vienna Cabinet would intervene in favor of Spain should there be a conflict over Cuba. There is too much reason also for believing that Germany with Spain against America. Our statesmen never had more use for their thinking caps than right now. The President does not seem to see it in that way, as he is having a good time at the golf links and dining parties up in Massachusetts.

OUR attentive readers of current international events have no doubt been interested in the interchange of national courtesies between the Russian Tsar and the French President. Last Tuesday there was a scene of it repeating not recently witnessed as the President returned from his visit to St. Petersburg. These joyous demonstrations in Paris and St. Petersburg mean anything but peace on earth, as matters now stand, any more than the dancing parties, fireworks, and the sky-rending cheers at New Orleans, Charleston, and Memphis, on parting ordinances of secession, meant peace in 1860. As public sentiment now prevails in Europe, only two combinations of powers are reasonable or logical. The nations of liberal governments as France, Italy, and England, might be expected to combine in opposition to reactionary governments, as Germany, Austria, and Russia. On such a basis matters might be balanced and peace maintained with some show of success. As it is now appeared from the developments of the past few weeks there is a combination, but the basis on which it is made is that of powers having what they desire against those not having what they feel they must have at all hazards. Austria, Germany, and Italy are in a measure contracted with nations as they now are, while France and Russia have unsatisfied aspirations. The recently consummated duplex means war, while the triplex is in the interests of peace. The best that promises for the maintenance of peace depends on the life of Francis Joseph, now a decrepit person nearly seventy years old.

"MARYLAND, MY MARYLAND."

Nothing seems to illustrate how West Virginia territory is coming to be appreciated as the boundary controversy between the two states Maryland has just set up another claim and wants about forty-five square miles of Preston County.

When Maryland was first laid off the boundary line was made to follow the Potomac to its westernmost source, and thence due north to the Pennsylvania boundary. Maryland has never been pleased with this arrangement and has often tried to locate its boundary line and has never succeeded in pleasing itself. Some years ago Maryland brought suit in the United States Supreme Court against W. Virginia, the object of which was to settle the boundary line between the two States. In 1890, Governor Fleming appointed attorneys George E. Price and S. L. Flournoy, of Charleston, to assist the West Virginia Attorney-General in the defence. Mr Price quite recently spent a good part of a month with Maryland surveyors on the line they are now claiming for the true boundary.

The history of the matter is about this: In 1746 the Fairfax Stone was placed at a spring declared to be the true source of the Potomac, and from this stone a line due north marks the western boundary of Maryland. Between 1820-'30 Maryland agreed upon the Fairfax Stone as the western end of its southern boundary, and in 1852 the State constitution so fixed it. And yet, nevertheless since that time Maryland has presened several claims, all of which it is trying to enforce in the Supreme Court. The first of the Maryland claims amounts to about this: The South Branch of the Potomac, rising in Pendleton, being larger than the North Branch, therefore the Maryland line should trace the South Branch up into Pendleton County and thence run north to the Pennsylvania line. Were this allowed the outlines of Maryland and West Virginia would be materially modified. West Virginia would get the western part of Maryland, but would yield a part of the South Branch valley, the country around Piedmont and Keyser City, and a portion of the West Virginia Central Railroad.

The next claim Maryland presents is to the effect that even if the South Branch is not considered the main Potomac River, the line has not been run due north from the Fairfax Stone. Francis Deacons traced the present line in 1789, and it has been the actual line between the States ever since. In 1859-60 the Michler line was run, beginning at the Fairfax stone and sliced off a wedge-shapel section of West Virginia about a half mile wide at the northern end and coming to a point 36 miles south of the Pennsylvania line.

Mr Price has been with the corps of eighteen men recently sent out by Maryland to make another survey. This party discovered a spring about a mile and a quarter west of the Fairfax Stone from which there is a small stream trickling down until it reaches the little run that finally becomes the Potomac. The new surveying party claims this spring to be the westernmost source of the Potomac, and have run a line due north from it, thus taking from West Virginia a strip of land a mile and a quarter wide and 36 miles long.

The West Virginia attorneys make this contention that inasmuch the Fairfax Stone has been agreed upon and recognized for so many years as the western terminus of the southern boundary of Maryland, and as that State so fixed it in its constitution in 1852, the only question really involved in the suit is as to which is right the Michler or the Deacons line north from the Fairfax Stone, and the only land in controversy the narrow wedge thirty-six miles long and only half a mile wide at the widest part. West Virginia had a survey made in 1894 which followed the Deacons line, and will now test the adoption of any other line.

LOUIS PRICE, the article expert now retained from Missouri is dead in the far northern regions he brought with him a motorette it measures twelve by eighteen feet and weighs one hundred tons the congregation is very similar to most of the material used for gallows on war ships and looks like chickens of it.

HORTON, W. VA.

I will give the Pocahontas people a few items from this County.

The railroad line is extended to within four miles of the "Sinks."

The mills are all at work, except the pulp mill.

We have a good Sunday school at Horton.

It was very hot until last Friday since then it has been rather cool and damp.

We are glad to say that Bland Courtney, who has been down with fever is able to be out again.

Business has started up in a new way since Cornelius Vanderbuilt bought the railroad company's interests here.

Rev Charles Goodrich preached his farewell sermon on September 12, at night. He will attend Conference, which meets on September 29.

Much excitement prevailed in Whitmer over the burning of a saloon and a dwelling house. The fire was caused by a can of tar exploding on a stove in Dearmitt's saloon. It was all the mill hands and others could do to keep the fire from spreading all over town. Neither house was insured.

On September 11, the people of this vicinity had a picnic in behalf of the Sunday School. They were early at their places at the platform in front of the company's store awaiting the arrival of the log train which took them to a quiet grove, about two miles above here, where they, as one family, spread their dinner on a neatly decorated table. Every one enjoyed themselves and after a luxurious dinner and supper about twenty-five took the excursion train and went up to the end of the railroad.

COUNTY COURT met last Tuesday.

A PROTRACTED meeting is in progress at Huntersville, led by Rev B. L. Parrott.

BUT very little corn in upper Pocahontas had been cut before the late frosts.

IT IS said that when squirrels are plentiful it presages a hard winter. If that be true, we are to expect the hardest winter of the century.

HORSES FED: I will feed horses at the large stable near the Courthouse. Good stables, good hay and a full feed of grain. Put up your horses with me during Court.
WM. SIPPLE.

MOST of the corn of the county suffered frost-bite last week and the fields turned white. It made terribly dry cutting. Those who had corn binders fully appreciated the blessing this year. On one farm in the Levels a crop of forty-two acres of drilled corn was harvested in five days.

A PLEASANT home wedding at the home of S. B. Moore, Edray, September 22nd, by Rev. W. A. Sharp, A. R. Gay and the beautiful and accomplished Miss Flora E. Moore were united in the bonds of holy matrimony. The happy couple started at once for Washington amid the congratulations of friends.

A BUNCH of twenty-odd two year old cattle were sold by J K Bright of Academy, to Griffith & Stout of Pennsylvania. They weighted 1130. An offer to leg them at $36 a head was refused. They brough, after being weighted, nearly $40. They with other cattle will be driven a distance of 178 miles over land to Pennsylvania. These gentlemen report that they were unable to find any cattle for sale on the whole route traveled by them.

CIRCUIT COURT meets next Tuesday. The famous darkey trial in which hundreds of witness have been summoned will come up. The occurrence took place in the Brush May 24, 1896, when the Levels negroes were pitted against the Edray negroes. There is the usual amount of chancery and law business to come up in regular routine. A case which is attracting general notice is the slander suit of Mrs Emory Shinneberry vs. John Beverage, of Clover Creek.

A SOMEWHAT unsteady man in the matter of walking went up to the ticket office and slapped down a half dollar before the agent. "Where do you wish to go?" inquired the polite and gentlemanly seller of tickets. Sh-pose it's the lower regions. Got any tickets to there?" said the applicant. The agent declared he had none for that place, but in his accommodating way informed him the office for the ticket he asked for was just across the street, and he pointed out a saloon as the office that would issue the ticket inquired for.

THE preliminary examination of Theodore Carr for felonious assault on Henry Shinneberry was held before Justice Bird last Saturday The evidence was gone into pretty thoroughly by both sides and was of a contradictory nature. The State's evidence was that on Sunday, September 12, a buck sheep belonging to Pete Carr jumped into the backing of Henry Shinneberry, and that Carr's son Theodore, a boy of 18, came to catch it. After running it about some time, it came to the house of Shinneberry and joined his flock of ewes. Carr came up and abused Shinneberry and threw rocks at his sheep and beat his son, a boy of 18. Shinneberry asked him to leave, and when he continued to throw rocks and swear Shinneberry threw two rocks and missed. Carr advanced on Shinneberry and struck him in the head with a rock and knocked him down, and jumping on him beat him in the head with a rock. Shinneberry was badly beaten about the head. Evidence showed that a very strong feeling of enmity existed between the two families. Shinneberry offered to help catch the buck and put him out of the backing. The defendant's evidence was to the effect that he had attempted to catch the sheep and that Shinneberry had refused to allow him to take the sheep, and had advanced on him after rocking him and threw him down. That he had turned him loose when Shinneberry had released his hold and he had acted solely in self defense. His had only received one hurt, and that on the elbow. Previous threats were proved by both parties. Carr had said he would as leave or not go to the penitentiary fifteen or twenty years for killing "old Ed Beverly" (Henry Shinneberry's father-in-law) and on another occasion he had said he intended to kick both of the Clay boys as soon as they had reached the age of twenty years. The grounds of the fight had been about the sheep of the defendant getting into the backing of the plaintiff. After hearing the evidence and argument of counsel on both sides, Justice Bird held the defendant to bail in the sum of $100 to appear at the next term of the Circuit Court.

A STRANGE story is printed from New Jersey. A cow ate green apples and swelled up with a stomach ache. A veterinary was called and he gave her relief by puncturing her side with a tube needle. As the gas escaped a match was applied to the current and a bright blue flame burned and gave enough illumination for the whole proceedings.

A FORMIDABLE surgical operation was performed on Mrs Robert Miller on Wednesday by Drs Cunningham, McClintic, and Price for the relief of abdominal trouble. The patient is doing well. The operation is called ovaritory and is rarely performed outside of large hospitals and is the first operation of the kind in this section of the State so for as we are informed.

LAST week Smith & Whiting received word to be ready to cut the timber on Lee Burner's land at Traveller's Repose, by the 24th of October. The job amounted to about one and a half million feet, and belonged to the Sherwood Co. The seven-year lease expires on 24th day of October, 1897. Burner refused to renew for five years for $200. The teams were got down from the grass and shod and about fifty men employed to cut the timber. It required a-wet slide of about a mile and a half and then we will have to lie in the river for years, maybe. Last Saturday, however, D O'Connell and B. M. Yeager contracted for an extension of the time for five years, and the lumbering operations were nipped in the bud. There was a good deal of bluff apparently on both sides.

FRANK BURNER versus Paul Golden was heard in the justice court Monday. Burner was clerk and on winding up with Golden claimed that his salary was 17.50 for the second month and $20 for the rest instead of the uniform sum of $12.50. Also Burner presented an account of $11.59 for money advanced to make change. The most interesting feature was the impeachment proceedings against Golden. Four witnesses swore that his character for truth was bad and that they would not believe him on oath. Then Golden's friends rose up and the following men testified in unequivocal terms that his reputation for truth was good and that they would believe him on oath: J. H. Patterson, Aaron Kee, Aaron Moore, John Waugh, Harvey Manpin, William Irvine, J. H. G. Wilson, Norman Price, S. B. Scott, Jr., D. A. Fisher, J. A. McLaughlin, and Andrew Pyle. It was a dramatic scene. McNeil and Yeager and Scott and Price figured as counsel and witnesses. Burner pays the costs.

Dilley and Bird finished threshing last week.

Miss Florence Bively returned from Pendleton County where she spent the summer.

Adam Geiger was in this part last week looking after stock. He bought 33 calves and did not pay more than $13 for any.

The drouth still continues and water scarce in places. But little seeding done as yet, owing to fears that what would be injured by lying in the ground.

The sick in the Frost vicinity are much improved. The community is much in sympathy with Mrs E. M. Hannah in the affliction of her family.

Prospects for the railroad seems very flattering, but the people do not seem to be much excited over it. They are just waiting to see the results.

Quite a number from this part attended the dedication of the church at Oak Grove, and report good preaching. The people were agreeably surprised to hear Rev Vince Wheeler preach.

The Mt. Zion Sunday - school closed the 26th with good results, and is said to be the best school for years. W. H. Dilley was superintendent and teacher of the infant class. J. F. Bively teacher of the Bible class. One small boy eight years old never missed a Sunday or a word in his lesson. Mr Dilley was much liked by the children, and they will long remember the interest he took in them. Just as the young folks remember Rev W. T. GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

THERE were 291 business failures in the United States last week. During the corresponding week last year there were 315. This does mean the times are getting better or there are not so many people in business as there were last year.

JAMES A. HAWKINS, formerly of Monroe County, West Virginia, has been put in nomination for county clerk of Pawnee County, Nebraska. This is the result of a combine of Democrats, Populists and silver Republicans.

A STREET railway strike of such momentous proportions seems to have been expected to come off last Monday morning. The car conductors, motor-men, and grip-men in the employ of the Chicago City Railway Company had their affairs in such a shape as to go out on strike at the time just mentioned September 27.

WE are sorry to hear that orders have been received countermanding lumber operations at the head of Greenbrier. It is a sad disappointment to those who had made considerable preparation for a boom and for profitable winter's work. We would fain hope all will better farther on for our friends who are more than willing to earn their living by hard and honest toil. When they suffer we suffer with them.

THE news from Hazelton is that the miners have resumed work without any concessions from the company. The troops have gone home. The probabilities are that parties who did the shooting will get off very leniently when the coroner's verdict is rendered. Even the killing be pronounced justifiable then all claims for indemnity will fall through urged on the part of Italy and Germany. There is no indemnity for those who die in the violation of law.

FOR several weeks there has been much trouble and anxiety, as well as suffering and death, from yellow fever in various places in the southern and southwestern States. It would seem from the latest news that the disease is on the wane and the fever may soon disappear. It is feared, however, that the germs may lie dormant and break out early next summer. Sanitary precautions may prevent this if used effectively and in time. An ounce of prevention is worth pounds of cure.

A VERY sorrowful occurrence took place at Huntington, September 29. Allen Watson was a big, by respected employe at the C & O machine shops. On that Thursday morning he kissed his wife and three little children good-bye and started for his work. There was a heavy fog, and, as he was passing along the track, the engine of a train was upon him before he knew it, and, striking him fair in front, knocked him out several feet. And when almost instantly he was raised up by fellow workmen, life was found already extinct.

In the expedition against the Afridis General Lockhart of the Punjaub frontier force, has 6,000 to go slow and will not attempt a forward movement just at present. General Jeffreys sends satisfactory news from the Miranand expedition. The tribesmen find out that guns are dangerous in spite of the promises made by the mullahs to close the muzzles of the British guns by their incantations. The officers think that while the Afridis are demoralized and that British guns cannot be "spiked" hostilities may close, but there is no telling.

GOV. MCCORT, of Indiana, is becoming desperate over the failure of Ripley County grand jury to bring in indictments against the persons who lynched the five negroes at Versailles. If the Governor gives way to his impatience and the law's delay much more, he will be a lyncher himself to all intents and purposes by overriding the regular legal procedure and ordering more harm than the lynchers have yet done by fair show. He ought to tell him that two wrongs will not make a right. Will Judge McLaughlin go and see his grand jury and try to quiet him down.

An important trial has just terminated at Harrisonburg, Va., in which M. Sibert, a constable, and C. Rice, a deputy, were on trial for the killing of Isaac Bowers, a Rockingham moonshiner, last December. They were found guilty of voluntary manslaughter and their punishment fixed at one year in the State prison. They tried to serve a warrant on Bowers for the killing of a lot of corn. After a considerable parley Bowers surrendered. Sibert ordered Rice to stop threatening he said to stop the fuss, but the shot took effect and Bowers died in a few days of pneumonia. Many fines and threats had been made against Sibert and Rice, and the shooting was done in self-defense. Both parties are of good character as citizens and farmers and yet they were convicted.

SUICIDE FROM GAMBLING.—Hedrick, W. Va., one hears the sad and awful news that another life has been sacrificed to the demon gambling. Last Saturday night, October 1st, a young man named Lewis, an orphan boy of eighteen years of age, was found dead in the river. He had been drowned. Lewis had been gambling and had lost all his money. He was then seen to go to the river and jump in. His body was found next morning. Lewis was a good boy and his parents are heartbroken over his death. Let this be a warning to all young men to shun the gambling hell.

...LAST week Smith & Whiting received word to be ready to cut the timber on Lee Burner's land at Traveller's Repose, by the 24th of October. The job amounted to about one and a half million feet, and belonged to the Sherwood Co. The contract lease expires on 24th day of October, 1897. Burner refused to renew for five years for $200. The teams were got down from the grass and shed and about fifty men employed to cut the timber. It required a set slide of about a mile and a half and then would have to lie in the river for years, maybe. Last Saturday, however, D O'Conn I and B. M. Yeager contracted for an extension of the time for five years, and the lumbering operations were nipped in the bud. There was a good deal of bluff apparently on both sides.

...FRANK BURNER versus Paul Golden was heard in the justice court Monday. Burner was clerk and on winding up with Golden claimed that his salary was 17.50 for the second month and $20 for the rest instead of the uniform sum of $12.50. Also Burner presented an account of $11.50 for money advanced to make change. The most interesting feature was the impeachment proceedings against Golden. Four witnesses swore that his character for truth was bad and that they would not believe him on oath. Then Golden's friends rose up and the following men testified in unequivocal terms that his reputation for truth was good and that they would believe him on oath: J. H. Patterson, Aaron Kee, Aaron Moore, John Waugh, Harvey Mangus, William Irvine, J. B. G. Wilson, Norman Price, S. E. Scott, Jr., D. A. Fisher, J. A. McLaughlin, and Andrew Price. It was a dramatic scene. McNeil and Yeager and Scott and Price figured as counsel and witnesses. Burner pays the costs.

The Value of Legs.

Few people appreciate as they should the advantage of having legs. It is true that many have awakened to the fact that legs are good for working the pedals of a wheel, and others think them serviceable in whittling their bodies two by two over the polished surface of a ballroom floor in the early morning hours, when they had better be sleeping. But how many there are who do not appreciate the blessing of having two sound legs to walk on, and who do not realize that, having them, they are independent of circumstances.

Young or old, rich or poor, in good weather or in bad, in the city or in the country, over rough roads or smooth, or no roads at all, they can take themselves out, they can spur up the circulation to its work of supplying new fuel to the boiler of the body and removing its ashes; they can expand the lungs with fresh, pure air and blow out the seeds of disease that only ask to be let alone to take root and bear deadly fruit; they can clear the brain, brushing away the cobwebs of disappointment, doubt, and melancholy, filling their place with the iridescent tints of content and healthful hope.

Here we have a machine that is always ready for use, chainless, with self-lubricating and dust-proof bearings, close tread, changeable gear, absolute puncture-proof tires, and an anatomical saddle superior to any in the market.

Perhaps the reason why so few appreciate the treasure they possess in their legs is because so few know how to use them. The walker should step briskly, with head erect, shoulders back, and arms swinging, breathing deep with closed mouth. Strolling is better than nothing, for even that takes us into pure, open air; but there is nothing like a good swinging gait for putting life into one.—Youth's Companion.

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other, Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The pencil or shape of the teeth curling toothbirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

ALL THESE FEATURES COMBINED HAVE MADE THE OSBORNE CELEBRATED.

5,000 PEOPLE.

THE REUNION THE BIGGEST THING THAT EVER HAPPENED IN THE COUNTY.

The success with which this great event passed off far exceeded the hopes of the most sanguine of its promoters. The people were there—they came in fine style—they were good humored, and they were well fed. When announcement was made in this paper that at least five thousand people were expected, many thought the statement was ridiculously high, and opinions were freely expressed it would be that many hundreds instead. But the actual count showed that there were over in the town of Marlinton that day. Every now and then somebody would guess at the number in the crowd and the estimates were put at from four to six thousand. But several partial counts were obtained by persons stationed at narrow points on the parade route. One man counted 3,500 and on looking up saw thousands still coming on their way to the grounds and gave up his job. Another held his place until the most of the people passed him and counted 4829. But a number were on the grounds before the parade started and the writer saw a large lot of people coming up the creek bank to avoid the dust of the other route. Another man counted 5,000. A number of persons who had been at the famous Union (Monroe County) reunions said that this crowd was to be compared very favorably with the crowds that assembled on those occasions.

5,000 People

The Parade.

The parade was pronounced by Mr Preston and others to be equal to the best they had ever seen on occasions of this kind. It was composed of the Marshall's staff, 110 mounted veterans, 98 veterans on foot, three chapters of Daughters of the Confederacy and their escorts and a camp of Sons of the Confederacy, and the speaker's carriages, followed by the unorganized masses of people on foot, in carriages, and on horse-back.

Colonel Gatewood, the field marshall, worked with his staff so expeditiously that the parade was ready on time, which was without precedent. It is said that the veterans were harder to form than the young people. On one side of the street the grassy sycamore was ablaze with the color of the hope of the land, while on the other the veterans set their bones like statues, gray and grim.

Some perfectfully beautiful flags were waving aloft and banners bearing strange devices. The band music was enjoyed fully as much by the horses as by the people and every old standby was looking like a four-year-old colt. The infantry was formed with fifer at the David S. Creigh Camp at its head.

The girls of Pocahontas express themselves as being delighted with the uniform, the idea of which was borrowed by a man mind from the girls of Monroe. The man did not have any other lamp by which his feet could be guided, but he made no mistake. The neat Confederate gray suits of the Julia Jackson Chapter were much admired. The parade reached the grounds at eleven o'clock.

The committee had erected a reviewing stand at the Temporary Court-house and there Hon John A Preston, Hon E. I. Holt, and Rev W. T. Price, chaplain of Pickett's Brigade, reviewed the procession. The young folks had fed up so to this point had not admirable skill and horsemanship opened their ranks and formed on either side of the street and the veterans and speakers passed through. At the grounds the veterans were leading opened ranks and the speakers and ladies marched down into the grounds. The Hillsboro Cornet Band led the young ladies and the Beverly Band headed the veterans.

The Music.

The Southern Band, of Beverly (16 pieces, and the Hillsboro Band (12 pieces) furnished excellent music. A music by the of the erly band spent three nights in Marlinton and their music was greatly appreciated. The members of the band were very much concerned over the possibility of Beverly losing the court-house and did all they could for their town on their way to Marlinton and with Randolph voters while here. They played for the people frequently, seemed to have an endless repertoire of musical selections. Thursday night they gave the following program to a crowded house. One of the prettiest pieces of band music was composed by a member of the band, Mr John T. Reger, of Phillipi.

The Fifer.

Speaking of music we must not omit to mention the fifer of the Greenbrier Camp. Fifer Shafer was not discovered in time to secure a drum for him, but he took his "reed" and marched at the head of the infantry and piped most beautifully. His modesty prevented him from heralding his arrival to the committee, and it was with feelings of utmost concern they learned that he had passed the night in a barn and had to hunt for his breakfast next morning. The next time he comes here to a reunion we will make up for the discomforts he experienced this time.

The Hillsboro Band.

The Hillsboro Band made exceptionally good music, and the county has a right to be proud that it has such a band. They appeared in brand new uniforms and were led by Mr Kramer, of Rosecrete, their instructor.

In the Speakers' Stand.

The band played an accompaniment to 'Nearer My God, to Thee,' and the people sang. Rev W. T. Price offered prayer. Hon E. I. Holt gave an eloquent address of welcome and Hon J. A. Preston followed. We give a description of his address elsewhere.

Decorations.

The citizens of Marlinton responded most nobly to the appeals of the committee, or to their own favorable idea of the theme of things, and every house in Marlinton was either with or but not greatly colors of the red, white, and blue. The committee decorated the temporary court-house building, the court house, the grounds, and rest of the market and a reviewing stand. In the decorations the 'Stars and Stripes' were used to the "stars and bars," looking to the future to the flag under to see here, and for the flag that can command the best that is in us. For decorative uniforms Mrs J. M. Cunningham must be thanked for her unwearying zeal in arranging and making the waists, caps, badges, sashes, etc.

The Grounds.

The place chosen was very beautiful. About five hundred feet of table was provided. Five stands were erected and the sale of the simple refreshments offerred footed $140.

The Grub.

We had dinner to burn. A two-horse team could not have hauled away the lunch left. There were eight large boxes unopened; and there never was as large a crowd as well fed, considering that every thing was done away from the haunts of men. Five thousand people in the woods on the shores of Knapp's Creek. This situation in Bible times was appalling. Five thousand people who had each taken a hurried breakfast by candle light on a frosty morning came on about nine hours afterward to be fed. And it was no soup house repast either. Every man there had a dozen different delicacies spread before him. There was roast-beef, hams cured to perfection, chicken, turkey, roast pig, roast pork, mutton, duck; the best butter in the world; the whitest bread; pickles galore; "spread"; cakes without end. Four hundred feet of table-cloth was spread without making a serious reduction of the boxes in the commissary tent.

Mr Preston was speaking in the distance when the word was given to eat. The people charged the table and taking a handful fell back, and in about ten minutes they had eaten up everything except the dishes. Then followed a food panic. Thousands were listening to the speech, and the patriotic ladies on this committee mobbed the quarter-master and he fled for his life. They were going to see that their beloved veterans did not miss their dinner, and they held it too, and nobody else got to eat, however nimbly they capered for a hand out.

The detachment fell in when the speech was over, and those who had had dinner came back to destroy some more. The stringency on the food market was relieved, and the hospitable ladies of Pocahontas were trying to get their delicacies eaten by the very men on whom they had turned a frozen face when they begged for a morsel of food after the market had contracted.

They had left enough to feed an army. One lady, a noted cook even in Pocahontas, almost tearfully declared that she was taking back more than she had brought with her. If ever there was a good cold luncheon served it was that one.

The dinner if the hospitable people had charged for it must have brought in hundreds of dollars, but they knew that they could not preserve that kindly, unselfish feeling that was so beautifully demonstrated that day, by raking around for dinner tickets and worrying people half to death by regarding every man who came to the table with feelings of distrust as to whether or not he had paid for his dinner or was stealing it. It was the crowning achievement of the hospitable people who live in this county, and their hospitality is widely known and appreciated.

Was It a Confederate Reunion?

Well, yes, but the "brave honored the brave" and those who had espoused the Union's cause were there; did what so did, brought food, enjoyed what we enjoyed, and in every thing participated in a way that the committee appreciated more than they can express. If anything had been needed to wipe out the bitterness that is said to have existed in this county during the war this would have done it.

The Reunion Orator.

The theme has been expressed that the admirable oration made by Hon J. A. Preston on reunion day should be published in full in The Times. When this done it would have to appear in installments and the effect, intended to be produced, would be lost. It would be well for the Pocahontas Regiment of Confederate Veterans to have it appear in pamphlet form, for sale or distribution and the proceeds added to the monumental fund, should the distinguished orator consent to prepare it for such use.

This address gives a very clear and instructive analysis of the Confederate Soldier, and what it meant to be a veteran in behalf of "The Lost Cause." It presents the motives that prompted the thoughtful col lier to offer l imself to the service of his country, and explains the principles by which he was guided when he had to decide under which banner he should battle, in the war between the States.

The friends of the 31st and 25th Regiments of Infantry, which Regiments were so largely composed of Pocahontas, Highland and Randolph companies, will never have an abler or more convincing presentation of the reasons why these regiments are to be remembered as among the most useful and heroic bodies of men attached to the Army of Northern Virginia, than this oration affords. Then too the 60th Regiment, Edgar's Battallion, the Bath Squadron, Greenbrier Cavalry, the 27th Infantry, and other organizations have complimentary mention made of them. A large element of the organizations last named consisted of men from Pocahontas, Bath, Greenbrier, and Monroe. Persons interested in the good name of the soldiers who fought and died, and of those yet living attached to the organizations mentioned in this oration, cannot afford to let it be forgotten or lost. Its way of presenting history may be disputed but never refuted so long as truth will be respected as an arbiter of mooted questions.

The review of the Lee—Grant campaign given in this oration is not surpassed by anything yet written or spoken about that memorable series of battles between one hundred and forty thousand Union troops commanded by Grant and Meade, and eighty thousand Confederate citizen soldiers led by Lee and his generals. The result of Lee's strategy (largely rendered effective by some of the regiments mentioned in this oration) was that instead of taking Richmond General Grant came within eleven hours of losing Washington City! There were quite a number of battle scarred veterans present who had been there which added zest to the speaker's words.

The speaker expressed his great respect for the Union veteran that went to the front and stayed there to the bitter end. Such Union veterans he conceded to be as brave and conscientious as the true Confederate antagonists, and such are to be held in honorable esteem.

General Grant's magnanimity towards the defeated Confederates was eulogized as one of the grandest instances of moral heroism yet found on record in all history. This should stone for whatever else may be deemed faulty, so far as Confederate veterans are concerned. Henceforth so far as the Confederate veterans have a voice the Union as it now is shall and must be preserved. And wherever an assault is made the blue and the gray will be found shoulder to shoulder keeping step to the march of the nation as it is, one and inseparable, now and forever.

The orator implored that the truth be told in our school histories; it is no disgrace to be defeated; it is honorable to make a manly acknowledgment that the Confederates were defeated, and badly defeated at that. That is the truth he told. The eternal gates of God are here, and the silvered will not remain in obscurity, and the crushed to earth will rise again.

Notes and Incidents.

The street was packed with people from the court-house to the bridge, not counting the parade that passed up by Hull's Hotel.

Whenever the orator had been mentioned times and tears expressive of opinion that there would be great trouble in keeping order

Drs. Maybe and Mustbe.

You choose the old doctor before the young one. Why? Because you don't want to entrust your life to inexperienced hands. True, the young doctor may be experienced. But the old doctor must be. You take no chances with Dr. Maybe, when Dr. Mustbe is in reach. Same with medicines as with medicine makers—the long-tried remedy has your confidence. You prefer experience to experiment—when you are concerned. The new remedy may be good—but let somebody else prove it. The old remedy must be good—judged on its record of cures. Just one more reason for choosing AYER'S Sarsaparilla in preference to any other. It has been the standard household sarsaparilla for half a century. Its record inspires confidence—50 years of cures. If others may be good, Ayer's Sarsaparilla must be. You take no chances when you take AYER'S Sarsaparilla.

As it happened not a drunken man was seen by the majority of the people. It was a very remarkable feature of the occasion.

Reunions should always be held the week before a grand jury meets. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Not a single arrest was made on the grounds.

Marlinton has no saloons, but a couple of enterprising law breakers had brought on a supply of mean whiskey. The committee frightened them out pretty badly, and only a few insignificant bodies got poisoned.

A constant stream of buggies miles long came in on every road. A traveler who wished to cross the bridge was detained two hours before he could get a clear track.

As the parade passed up by the Marlin's Mountain the Chesapeake and Ohio engineers were surveying along the side of the road. One of them was brisk enough to say "Look out for the locomotive."

The night before ice formed on vessels of water. There was a chill in the air. The town was crowded and slept on floors in every room. At the Yeager Hotel a party of young people from Lewisburg occupied the dining-room.

Colonel Gatewood was moving constantly forming the procession, and was accompanied by a color bearer in little Ted Kling who carried the flag most faithfully.

Colonel Polk Ford, of Lewisburg, says the Pocahontas people can get up anything; and there is no doubt but what this one day put the county in a higher class—when we wring such a word of approbation from a Greenbrier citizen.

Captain H. A. Yeager worked for weeks on this thing and wound up by filling the town so full of people that he had no place to board. He remarked sadly to a group of friends that it had knocked him out of a boarding place.

The Beverly Band very kindly serenaded this office, and it is with feelings of regret we think of how our pap bowled an accompaniment to the music.

THOMAS LANIER CLEMENS, of North Carolina, who like old Tom Newsome of lender memory, was sent to a public institution yesterday to end his days, was in his time a conspicuous figure in American public life. He was a member of Congress more than fifty years ago, and as a Senator took rank with the foremost men of that body in the days when the greatest men in the States were sent to the Senate. He was one of the most eloquent of the Southern orators in the Senate, and during the Civil War distinguished himself as a Confederate general. Clemens is now 85 years old and has been an inveterate tobacco chewer since his boyhood. He has always used natural leaf, and about three years ago he said that tobacco was the chief stuff of life. He chewed a half a pound a day, and for twenty-five years past has gotten up a couple of times nightly "to change quids." He said he expected to live until he was 90. If the tobacco crop of North Carolina held out. He was a delightful old man, and looked Colonel Clemens. Clemens the part.

THE farmer's wife who takes her dozen eggs to market and gets ten cents for them does not feel quite so rich as the man who has eighty dozen eggs and gets eight dollars for them. Does the one feel as rich as the other? Not at all. Yet the farmer's wife has a long time before she can accumulate such a large lot that increases the price of eggs. Quantity

A Good Day for Bears.

On Wednesday evening the citizens of McDowell were treated to an unusually large amount of genuine excitement, and as long as there is an old bear hunter left in these mountains he will bemoan the sad fate that kept him from being there with his Winchester, but the town boys needed drilling in this line, and they were swift in taking advantage of it.

No less than nine bears in a gang made a raid on the town, or rather the near by corn fields. The scarcity of mast in the Shenandoah and Buffalo Mountains is the reason given for their boldness. The alarm soon spread and in a short time a small regiment of men, boys and dogs, with all kinds of shooting-irons, were in hot pursuit.

In a short time there were only two bears left, and "bar" meat in McDowell went down, away down. The last we heard was that the remaining bears were being hotly pursued, and we suppose they were laid low before the close of the day. Dr Brady has two bear scalps dangling from his belt and has the name of champion bear hunter of McDowell. We did not learn who killed the others.

This was the most exciting bear chase ever known to our people, and the strangest feature about it is that they were Augusta County bears, for they came from Buffalo Mountain and the east side of the Shenandoah.—Highland Recorder.

Too Much Salt.

The New York Journal of Hygiene discusses what it calls "the salt habit"—the excessive use of salt in food. Some salt is necessary in food, perhaps, but many persons take it on articles which it is unnecessary. They want their meat, fish, potatoes, melons, beets, tomatoes, turnips, bread, &c., positively salty. They hold that salt "brings out the flavor" and consider it in the same class with sugar—as a sweetener. The result is that the skin and kidneys are excessively taxed to get rid of the salt, and both are injured by it. Few people have healthy skins and it is believed that many cases of derangements of the kidneys are due to the salt habit. There is a reaction against it in progress. But little salt is required by the human body, and those who know this are disposed to discard the voluntary use of it altogether.

Gold in Jack Mountain.

For a long time it has been the talk that a Mr McCoy, one of the early settlers of the country, found gold on Jack Mountain, three or four miles from Marlinton. This talk has in the last month been given a life by the coming into that section of two gentlemen from West Virginia, who have spent several days prospecting. We learn that they have found what they consider something valuable in the mineral line, and have sent away a large quantity of it for analysis.

The land in on W. E. Reynolds's land, and the report is that the prospectors have ordered, or are about to enter, into an agreement with the owner of the property for the development of their discovery. Jack Mountain is large, and the appearance of gold for nothing, but stronger things than the finding of a gold mine in such places have happened.—Highland Recorder.

Hawk is a crown of bear meat from Buffalo Mountain. The Hawks have killed eight. The pup over the fact that Augustans seem to be getting tender-hearted as to cutting timber. Perhaps we have been a little hasty in the fact that it is not "doing" when foreign people fly the game, but if when it is permissible.

The board of supervisors of Greenbrier county has levied a tax of 50 cents on the $100 worth of property for the benefit of the county. The levy for the benefit of the road is 20 cents, and for a special purpose 10 cents.

The Pocahontas Times.

ANDREW PRICE, EDITOR

Marlinton, Friday, Oct. 1 1897.

AT the opening of the public schools of Statesville over 800 pupils were enrolled. This cotton-mill country hamlet and present oil metropolis now boasts of a population of over 3,000.

AN organization of cripples has been perfected and 6,000 met in St Louis in convention. The object is to afford each other comfort and support. It was instigated by William Tower, who lost a leg as a railway conductor.

TAMMANY HALL has nominated Robert A. Van Wyck for mayor. As was expected, they did not say whether or not they still believe in Chicago, Bryan, and Free Silver. The contest will be between the Tammany man and the regular Republican candidate.

WITHIN the last week two suicides have occurred in West Virginia for love. A young lady in Blacfield drank carbolic acid, and Edward Evans shot himself. It is a pity that these two people had not met and committed matrimony instead.

WITH all the blast against Mark Hanna, we would as leave see him Senator from Ohio as any other member of his party. The reader can infer from this that we are either speaking well of Hanna or very ill of the other Ohio Republicans, as he may be inclined.

HON C. P. SNYDER, of Charleston, has secured a good consular appointment at Diaz, Mexico, with a salary of $2,500 attached. He has a mania for holding office, and seems to be destined to spend his life holding fat appointments. We would be glad to see him come back to the Democratic party for then we might be assured that victory was near at hand.

THE West Virginia M. E. Church Conference convened in annual session at Morgantown Wednesday morning; Bishop Mallalieu presiding. On calling the role, 154 ministers responded to their names. Rev J. Engle, secretary; Rev S. P. Crummett, statistical secretary; and L. W. Roberts, treasurer, were each re-elected to their respective offices. There are 191 pastoral charges included within the conference, and nine presiding elders. The membership of the church within the bounds of the conference is about 46,000.

THE famous McDonald trial at Charleston has terminated in his acquittal. The exposures of official corruption in city and county affairs made in the impeachment proceedings have greatly aroused the citizens and they seem to think that forbearance is no virtue in their case. Their indignation grows more intense as the affair is discussed over the verdict in view of the evidence that was produced. The call for a meeting signed by thirty-five leading business and professional men is as follows, to-wit and in a late issue of the Gazette: "A mass meeting of the citizens of Charleston, at the Court House, on Tuesday, September 28, at 8 o'clock, is hereby requested and urged. The expression concerning the city and county affairs, developed in the McDonald trial, make it imperative that all citizens should assemble and consult for their common good.

THE chief mine inspector of West Virginia, J. W. Paul, reports the miners at work every where in the State except the Kanawha district. The Norfolk and Western is moving more coal than ever before, and the scarcity of cars is the only limit to the output of the mines. A week or so since 1,630 empties were brought in one day, but they did not last two days, so the output was about 800 cars a day. Everything on wheels holding coal is being used and sent off. Nearly all the cars are at regular work on New River. In the Pocahontas and Winding districts the miners are pushing things, more struggling operators' forces, while some of the operators nobility in the shooting district, have agreed to the 60cts scale. This gives the Kanawha district in such a condition that business is being handled and orders operators and miners alike settle matters there will not be much to do when agreed as to scale.

THE REUNION DAY.

The thirtieth of September 1897 is to be noted as one of the most memorable days in the history of our county. This time had been selected for a reunion under the auspices of the Confederate veterans, and while promoting good feeling among the people by social amenities, and reviving friendships formed amid the stirring, perilous scenes of civil war, incidentally it hoped that something might be accomplished towards honoring the remains of the dead by gathering them to one place and marking the hallowed spot with a suitable memorial shaft. The day was such as we sometimes see in our happiest dreams. The forests that drape the surrounding hills overlooking Marlinton were radiant in their richest autumnal hues, and could not have been more appropriately beautiful had their umbrageous decorations been specially elaborated for the occasion. The location selected for the speaking and the reunion banquet is one of the most beautiful among all the charming and picturesque points that make up Marlinton scenery. A half-mile southwardly from the court-house is a bend in the creek formed by a precipitous amphitestre. Here there is a grove of large sugar maples interspersed with splendid specimens of the red oak and hemlock and fringed with laurel, while the creek with its pure, bright waters encircles the most of it. It was here the promoters of the reunion erected and decorated one of the finest grand stands for the accommodation of the speakers, marshalls, musicians, and privileged guests from abroad that has ever been seen in our county. Seats were arranged for the camps of Confederate veterans, chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Confederate Sons, and visiting Union veterans whose presence lent interest and pleasure to the occasion.

The exercises were opened by the Beverly Band playing "Nearer My God to Thee," after which the assembled thousands arose and sang the first and third stanzas with an enthusiasm hard to surpass, and then were led in prayer by the regimental chaplain, W. T. Price. E. I. Holt, Esq., delivered the address of welcome, that was well arranged and so expressed that all were impressed with the idea that they were never more welcome anywhere than just where they were at that moment. Hon. J. A. Preston arose amid cheers, that seemed to penetrate the overhanging skies. He spoke for more than two hours on the Confederate soldier and reviewed the Lee-Grant campaign of 1864 in his own peculiarly happy style that places him in the front rank of the West Virginia orators.

Long before the speaking ceased those who could not get in hearing were invited to eat and they were regaled with music and feasting. Then by the time the speaking was over those who were in hearing of the addresses had their turn at the well filled tables, and so no one was left out, or if he was it was his own fault.

The music discovered by the Hillsboro and Beverly bands was a charming feature of the occasion. It may be a long while before these bands will perform where so artistic has done so much to add charms to the efforts of their performances. The echoes from the forest clad amphitheatre and the softening influences of the grand outdoorgeous trees are aids to the best efforts of melody that most occasions are rarely favored with.

Late in the afternoon, Douglas McNeill, son of Capt James McNeill, whose absence was so much regretted, recited the charge at Gettysburg, where the high tide mark was reached and wherein the fortunes of the Confederacy began to wane. After this the audience dispersed to their homes between four and five o'clock, and may all be happier and better from the grand soothing influences of the glorious occasion.

renowned Alleghanies and beyond the people came and mingled like blending streams into one vast sea. As the writer surveyed the thrilling scene and its significance opened up to his perceptions, he felt as never before what a grand future awaits our Pocahontas people could they be only reached and properly influenced and have their minds concentrated on things that are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report. Our people must be an improvable people, or they would not be here to revere the memories of Lee and Jackson, the inspiration of whose lives was drawn from Philippians iv: 8, just referred to. The sentiment of that verse was the ruling sentiment that moulded and shaped their characters and the characters of the noble ladies whose names are blended with theirs—Julia Jackson and Mildred Lee. There were hundreds present susceptible of becoming in character the peers of the model characters referred to; and character, after all, is the only thing we can take with us when we go hence as they have gone, taking nothing with them but their characters—all else is left below.

Many Revolutions.

A new revolution is brewing in Hayti. The new President, Tirésias Augustine Simon Sam, is not a man of much caliber, and his disagreements with his ministers and the state of depression from which the country has been suffering during the last twelve months have excited unrest.

Fouchard, minister of finance, is his prospective rival. Money is required to start things, and Fouchard, now in the United States, is supposed to be in quest of it. Events in Hayti are interesting, because it is to Hayti that Cuba will be assimilated if the elements dominant in Hayti become dominant in Cuba. Costa Rica also has trouble. Its consul in Nicaragua is in prison there. Its President, Iglesias, has been invested by Congress with extraordinary powers which will continue in force until after the coming election. There has been disorder and several arrests have been made.

Gautemala's revolution continues. President Barrios has fortified his position by a change of cabinet. The rebels hold the port of Ocos.

A Chillian paper reports that President Erazuriz, of Chili, was hissed by the crowds at the Cathedral recently—an unusual proceeding in a country remarkable for its regard for the decencies of public life. Partisan feeling seems to be running high.

The Peruvian corporation which eight years ago shouldered Peru's debt of $220,000,000 in consideration of certain railway concessions is about to be "investigated" by legislative committee. The State and then the corporation failed to keep the compact and the debt and concessions are now to "go."

Nicaragua is reported to have a new revolution. The city of Granada and town of Jintepec are said to be in the possession of the insurgents.

Disagreement at Canudos among "the fanatics" led by Conselhiero promises to give the Brazilian government a chance to suppress persistent rebellion in Bahia.—Baltimore Sun.

Local Events.

THE State Guards have just held their annual encampment at Charleston.

THE public school building at Prestytown was burned last Wednesday. Loss about $5,000; loss about $1200.

A NEW paper has been started at Clifton Forge, called The Virginian. It is Republican in politics. Kirk Snyder is working in the printing office.

OUR County seems to be the object of a good deal of attention. From the number of strangers who take an interest here and visit us, we infer that some people have some inside facts. Axtell, the railroad magnate, was in Pocahontas last week.

SPUREAL new cases of fever developed in Marlinton the past week. It is a malarial fever that is not considered especially dangerous, but which reduces the victim in a very few days. It is hoped that the frost will insure no more cases this year.

ON the day of the Reunion, Frank Thomson, who was riding a young mule, was thrown with great violence near the residence of B. M. Yeager. His collar bone struck a locust post and was broken in two places. The bone was set and he remained several days at Mr. Yeager's. He was able to go home last Sunday and it will be a matter of a short time until he is about again.

A FEW weeks ago we made note of a tennis tournament between Cheyenne and Laramie, Wyoming, in which Paris Yeager, formerly of Marlinton, figured prominently. We learn from the Daily Boomerang that in the return match, played at Laramie, the Cheyenne representatives were again successful; thus demonstrating their superior skill as tennis players beyond the shadow of a doubt.

MRS JOHN G. BEARD and daughter experienced an accident on the Pyles Hill last Thursday. A horse driven by Lee Beard, of the Levels, became frightened and dashed into their buggy. The blow broke the harness of Mrs Beard's horse, and the occupants had barely time to get out of the buggy before it and the horse went over the precipice bank on the lower side of the road. The main damage was breaking a pair of shafts.

PASSENGERS on the steamer Pocahontas, from Richmond, tell of an exciting and novel deer chase which occurred in the James River. Shortly after the steamer had passed Claremont a large buck was seen swimming in the stream. Those passengers who had revolvers fired a number of shots at the deer, but without effect. The deer passed the vessel, after which the boat was put about and the chase commenced. When the animal was reached a boat was powered with several men in it and they captured the buck, bringing him aboard.

THE C. & O. R. R. engineers have been about this place for a few days, and on Monday moved their camp equipage to Dunmore, it is supposed to run another line. We learn they finished the survey down the river, joining it to the survey completed in January, 1886, from White Sulphur to Marlinton by Driscol. The corps then did two days work about the town, surveying in every direction, and running a number of lines more or less parallel with each other. It is said that it makes a right difficult head to come down Knapp's Creek and turn up the River. It is reported that the surveyors got a beautiful grade for a railroad up the river. They surveyed it an average elevation of thirty-five feet above low water mark. While here the tents were pitched at the mouth of Stony Creek. They are very comfortably fixed for camping out, their camp equipments loading three wagons.

MARY BARNES has been appointed as being the owner of a "spanking" at this town for several weeks. He had a barber shop and people would accost him at shops to get shaved at his shop rather than patronize the latter barber shop of Matt McDowell, who only shaved people on the outside. Last week Justice Reid got information of his operations and it is reported he became frightened, but got wind of it and fled the scene. He seems to have had a stock on hand and he converted it to some dozen winds up the row. It speedily became known that the money had only to go to a certain point and would not on consecutive days, so he could not throw whose he came. Joel Barnes, C. F. C., and W. W. Teter special constable, aged this person and on hearing the whole, Barnes got off. As soon as Barnes was clear it was the opinion of the town that some prompt action would be taken in the matter. He warned the preliminary examination and was committed to jail to await the action of the grand jury. It is not known whether he has left Upland for a change or not.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Prof M. G. Matthews is teaching the Ponge Lane school.

Mrs Flora Gay will teach the Edray school the current session.

J. L. Herbmer, of Grafton, has been in Marlinton for the past week.

Congressman C. P. Dorr spent several days in Pocahontas last week.

Miss Allie Baxter is teaching the Fairview school with an encouraging enrollment.

Miss Lucy Baxter opened the Pine Grove school, Monday October 4. This is her first session.

Anderson Barlow is building a nice barn on his Hazel Ridge farm near Hamline Chapel.

Mr and Mrs Charles Arbuckle have removed from their former home in Missouri, and will live on the Clover Lick farm at the site of the old Clover Lick house.

Among the visitors from Monroe to the reunion were Mr Alex. Campbell, of Union, and Miss Nettie Campbell, the accomplished daughter of Judge Campbell.

Ligon Marshall and John Yeager left Saturday to pursue medical studies; the former at the Baltimore Medical College and the latter at the University of Louisville.

Mr and Mrs Alvin Gay, of Edray, returned from their bridal tour last Friday. They came near meeting a serious accident at Covington, but fortunately escaped without injury.

REUNION PERSONALS.

George Cleek, Bath County Surveyor, was one of the reunion visitors. He was a guember of the Bath Squadron and was indentified with it throughout the war.

Mr A. M. McLaughlin, of Lewisburg, was one of the visiting veterans of the Marlinton Reunion. He came near losing his life in the Imboden Raid and barely escaped capture at the Battle of Droop Mountain.

J. Andrew Warwick, lately of the State of Washington, was at the reunion. He was a Confederate lieutenant in the Bath Squadron, was wounded, and was ever held in high esteem for his gallantry and unflinching fidelity to the duties of a soldier.

Colonel Polk Ford, of Lewisburg, whose reputation as a brave and efficient soldier ranks with the highest of those who were to be found in the foremost ranks of danger's dark server when duty called, was at the reunion and assisted in conducting the parade.

Captain J. W. Marshall, of Randolph County, was able to be present reunion day and met several of those who were members of his command. He also assisted in managing the procession. The Captain looked as much like living as he moved with the column last Thursday as he did when leading a charge more than thirty years ago. Sparks of the same old fire flashed from his eyes.

Captain John Adam McNeel, from Rockbridge, was honored with a seat on the speakers' stand. He expressed himself as more than pleased with the way things were managed. He was able to speak by the card, as he was one of the marshalls at the unveiling of Jackson's statue at Lexington a few years since, which was one of the most memorable days in the history of Rockbridge County.

Dr H. H. Jones, of Doe Hill, Highland County, was among the visiting veterns. He was one of the youngest of the Highland Volunteers that were among the first to volunteer at the beginning of the war and was in the expedition to Grafton. He belonged to the 31st Virginia Infantry, but being disabled by wounds early in the war he was honorably discharged, and thereupon entered Washington College and afterwards prepared himself for the medical profession and is now an eminent physician. He has 8 son who is demonstrator of anatomy at the University of Virginia.

Captain J. W. Johnson, Greenbrier County, was one of the distinguished Confederate visitors at the reunion. Among the reasons that his name will be remembered in Confederate history may be mentioned the fact that he was the original owner of Traveller, Gen. Lee's war horse. In 1860 Captain Johnson got his colt on exhibition at the Lewisburg Fair and received a premium. The colt was named Jeff Davis, but when put into General Lee's possession his name became Traveller. Captain Johnson was one of the most able in the procession.

One of the touching and thrilling episodes occurring during the reunion oration was when the speaker referred to Captain W. H. McNeel taking the bridle rein from the wounded hand of his standard-bearer and sweeping in from range at the imminent peril of life. He spoke of the gallant veteran as honor so grandeur by boldly redressing as to render it impossible to be passed by unnoticed, and he was to be honored by the audience and as he left the platform it was impossible to suffer to him and their sincere regrets expressed that they were not to have him present. Whereupon one of the comrades shouted, "Speech! speech!" and the whole audience in the body for the special purpose to see Lookout thoughts.

DUNMORE.

Dry and frosty.

Earl Arbogast is doing very well at this writing.

Auctioneer Sweeker will attend the Beverly court next week.

Miss Lucy Kincaid will commence the Dunmore school Monday next.

Rev D. C. Hedrick's meeting at Green Bank was largely attended on Sunday last.

Several of the farmers have hooped their hogs so they will hold slop.

Mr Lanty Wooddell and Miss Cora Conrad were married near Green Bank last week.

The railroad engineers are surveying in the neighborhood of Dunmore.

Miss Alice McLaughlin has commenced her school at the McLaughlin School-house. A big spelling match every Friday night.

Ed Jackson says, (in order to satisfy some people) he shot Harry Moore with a shotgun accidentally and not with a .44 Winchester.

H. M. Moore, who was shot some time ago, is doing very well, and thinks if he gets another load of shot or two in him he will be ballbearing.

There is some talk of getting up a joint stock company in Dunmore for the purpose of building a first-class mill. Success to the enterprise.

The fall term of the Pocahontas County Musical Association will be held at Green Bank, and we think a good time would be October 21, 22, 23. Let all take a part and make it a grand success.

Mrs Grant Dilley died at her home near Dunmore on the 30th of September. She leaves three small children. Her age was 21 years. Mrs Dilley was an affectionate wife and loving mother. The bereaved family has the sympathy of the community.

A Romantic Marriage.

THE following, taken from the Webster Echo, will be of interest to the friends of the parties named therein:

One of the last social events of the closing season at the Springs, was the marriage of Mr Marvin Carter to Miss Leva Gibson, at the Standard House, on Monday evening, September 6. The contracting parties are well known and prominent young people of Pocahontas County, and in a romantic spirit chose a journey across the summer mountains, and coming for a few days to rest at this hospitable hostlery, joined their lives together for weal or woe. The bridal party left the following evening for Clarksburg to attend the fair.

THE REUNION IN OUR TOWN.

There is joy among the people, far away in warring strife,
And our fathers take vacation from the dull routine of life,
And we'll have a gay reunion, yes reunion in our town,
We'll hear the fife and bugle call all up the streets and down.

The trouble it would make us we deplored it o'er and o'er;
Anxiety from first to last was sitting at our door;
But the mother shopped and dress-made, doing all with painful care
To make her young folks on parade the very swellest there.

Ah the dear old place was crowded with a radiant, rapturous throng,
And each old war-scarred Johnny felt he owed the world a song,
When he saw the people coming from miles and miles away
And heard the speaker's voice ring out "Honor the men in grey!"

Oh the music, oh the speaking, oh the gorgeous pumpkin pies;
How the people feast upon them, choked with dust up to the eyes!
And as the good things vanished I could no more refute,
"A good cook's half the battle and all the world to boot."

'Twas over: that we'd reened there could not be a doubt,
For Johnny had the toothache, ma said she was "all worn out,"
And the fever was giving "pa" a chase for marching in the sun;
And every one was nearly dead before the day was done.

But the doctors they look chipper as they gallop up and down,
And they say they love reunions—yes, reunions in the town.

SUSIE ALEXANDER PRICE.

Card of Thanks on Behalf of the Executive Committee.

On behalf of the executive committee for the reunion, I desire to thank the citizens of Pocahontas County generally for their liberal support. Over five thousand people were fed on the ground, and yet there was an abundance of provision left. To the several committees and other persons who aided to make the reunion a success our thanks are due for valuable assistance. Especially are we indebted to E. D. King, chairman of the committee on grounds; for his untiring zeal, effective work, and intelligent management. We acknowledge material aid from the Marlinton Literary Society by a donation of funds arising from their entertainment.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the ladies cavalcade, composed of the chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy, and others with their escorts, who added so much to the effect of the parade and the pleasure of the occasion; nor do we forget to pay proper tribute to the organization of Sons of Veterans, who added materially to the effect of the parade.

To the Hillsboro Cornet Band and the Southern Band, of Beverly, we are indebted for inspiring music, good appearance, and gentlemanly conduct.

We tender our thanks to Hon. John A. Preston for his able and patriotic address; to Hon. E. H. Holt for his address of welcome; and to our young friend Douglas McNeill for his oration on Pickett's charge at Gettysburg. The thanks of all are due to Colonel A. C. Gatewood and his staff for the able manner in which the parade was handled. We congratulate the people of the county and visiting friends upon the splendid order and good behavior manifested throughout the day. Let us all be thankful to our all wise Ruler that no serious accident occurred to mar the pleasure of the occasion.

Trusting that the reunion may have been the means of cultivating a more deep and lasting spirit of friendship and fraternal good will between all, I am, very truly, etc.,

H. A. YEAGER, Ch. Ex. Com.

THE Confederate Veterans of "John Burgess Camp" desire to thank the people of Little Levels district and especially the young people for the cheerfulness and good will with which they contributed to the success of the recent Reunion at Marlinton.

Respectfully,
M. J. MCNEEL, Commander.

The Southern Band.

The Southern Band from Beverly, West Virginia, was the first to put in its appearance at Marlinton with a view of participating in the reunion demonstration. This band was welcomed with hearty cheers and the music charmed many enthusiastic hearts, and the sweet sounds went up with resounding echoes until lost in the silence of the stars on Tuesday night. This organization is one year old, and was instituted by F. A. Bowers, Esq., a young member of the Beverly bar, and consists of twenty-two members attached to the choice families of the town and country citizens.

The following professional and business correspondence was handed us for publication:

Three printers, one lawyer, one shoemaker, one tailor, one carpenter, one dressmaker shortly to be and you ex-post master. Congressional editor and one of the prominences of this band to engage locally good for the State it has been in practice.

DEATHS.

James Moore.

Died, at his residence near Marlinton, at five o'clock Monday morning, October 4, 1897, James Moore, aged 84 years and 6 months. He had been suffering the past six weeks of dropsical affection and heart trouble, but endured his afflictions with great fortitude and Christian submission.

In his sphere, Mr Moore was justly regarded as one of our best citizens. Early in youth he became a professing Christian, and for nearly seventy years was a member of the M. E. Church and in whose pale he died. He was a grandson of Moses Moore, the noted pioneer. His wife was Anna McNeill, daughter of Squire John McNeill, of Bangor, who survives him, an aged and highly esteemed lady. J. Register Moore and Mrs Rachel Kee are his surviving children. A few days before his decease he was asked what portion of scripture had been in his mind as specially interesting and consoling. Without hesitation he replied: "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want, and the rest." Whoever reads that 23d Psalm then will have an idea of the thoughts that comforted the soul of our departed friend and neighbor in the final hours. The Good Shepherd is Jesus, of whom it may be so sweetly said:

"Jesus can make the dying bed
Feel soft as downy pillows are
While on his breast he laid his head
And breathe his life out sweetly there."

W. T. F.

Captain J. W. Mathews, widely known in business circles as the cash er of the Lewisburg Bank, died suddenly at his residence last week. His age was about 56 years and was a brother of the late Governor H. M. Mathews. He was a Confederate veteran and was a good record as such. His daughter, Miss Mary Mathews, has been a frequent visitor at Marlinton and has many friends to sympathize with her in this sad bereavement.

Miss Lucy E. Amiss, a sister of the late A. D. Amiss., died in Washington City, September 28th, and was brought to New Erection Church, in Rockingham County, Virginia, for burial. She was 58 years of age and was a lady of much refinement and culture.

The Musicale.

The musicale was given Wednesday night, according to announcement. It was a good performance and netted the reunion fund $42. The music was of a very high order, and those having sufficiently sensitive ears appreciated it and all united in praising it, with the exception of a visiting farmer who has a better ear for a cracked dinner bell than he has for a piece of music, and he admitted that it did very well for the backwoods but was not quite up to a concert he had once heard in Grafton.

The burlesque on Droop Mountain was very well received. The Confederates were worsted in that engagement, and no effort was made to gloss over their defeat. The battle lines were well taken, especially the one in which Colonel G. S. McNeel was made to say, that he "wooud sooner be George McNeel living than General Lee dead?" a memorable saying of that distinguished soldier, who never failed in a duty, but who was somewhat notorious for taking care of himself when it did not conflict with his duties as a soldier.

The tableaux were very beautiful. It was a good show and the results very gratifying to the management and audience.

FOREST fires have been raging in southern Indiana, central Kentucky and central Mississippi. Owing to the severe drought the leaves and grass are like tinder. The noted Dismal Swamp is also on fire. Whence comes some of the recent smoke, perhaps.

MAJOR LEWIS GINTER, of Richmond, Virginia, died on the second of October. He was a person of great wealth and did much to improve the city. He was one of the wealthiest men in Virginia and among his achievements was the erection of the Jefferson Hotel in Richmond, which ranks among the finest hostelries in the South.

GEN. NEAL DOW, noted all over the country as the Maine Liquor Law promoter, and Prohibition candidate for the Presidency, died October the second at his home in Portland, Maine, aged 90 years One of the truest friends of the home and country has passed away. His methods might be questioned, but his aims were unquestionable.

THE Charleston Gazette seems to be a very conscientous journal. It has been giving President McDonald a severe exposure, and came very near writing Monday for Sunday because William Barrett caught a fifty pound catfish at Point Pleasant on a late Sunday. Upon reflection the Gazette decided to let the moralites take care of themselves when it comes to the matter of fishing. Let way be made for the moral sprinkler, good is bound to come when the nasty dust is laid that's now blowing about.

A VERY disagreeable duty seems to have been met and discharged by a United States circuit judge in Tennessee. He declared the anti-cigarette law of that State to be in violation of the inter-state commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. Judge Larton says in rendering his decision that if the act were limited to cigarettes which have lost their character as imports by the breaking of the original packages, the Tennessee law would not be unconstitutional. Congress recognizes the interstate traffic in ardent spirits in original packages as lawful commerce, so also is the cigarette traffic in original packages is legal. The Judge also says that while he comes to this decision without hesitation, yet he is "reluctant to break down a statute aimed at the suppression of an evil of a most pronounced character." It is hoped our West Virginia law makers will do something to keep the "coffin nails" away from our precious youth.

ONE of the most remarkable trials in the whole history of jurisprudence is going on in Chicago known as the Lonergent case. The accused is charged with murdering his wife and burning the body in caustic potash in the vats of his sausage works. The prosecution introduced expert testimony that the bones found in the vats were those of a human female of slight build. The expert for the defense testified that the same bones were those of a small hog. In a cross examination a skull was shown to the expert for the defense, and he pronounced it a monkey's, when in fact it was a dog's. This same expert afterwards identified as the bone of a man, that was a gorilla bone. Both the prosecution and defense have had experts to hunt bodies and the results reported have differed greatly. Then it appears the whole case has become a battle of experts and tends to make circumstantial evidence and expert testimony a doubtful method of arriving at the truth. the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

This paper is devoted to the memory of Samuel Waugh, one of the early settlers of "The Hills," seven or eight miles north-east of Huntersville. The progenitor of the Waugh relationship, according to the most authentic of family legends, was James Waugh, senior, of Scotch-Irish descent. His wife's name was Mary. This pioneer husband and wife opened up their home just previous to the Revolution on the place now held by John Shrader, one of their descendants by the third remove. Samuel Waugh, the subject of this sketch, was one of their sons, and upon his marriage with Miss Ann McGuire settled at the old Waugh homestead, Their family consisted of nine sons and five daughters. Concerning these children the following fragmentary particulars have been collected.

Elizabeth Waugh was married to Caleb Knapp, and first settled in Greenbrier. Afterwards lived awhile on Knapp's Creek, thence settled on the Greenbrier, known as the Knapp Place where McCoy Malcomb now resides. Her daughter Ann Knapp was married to Richard B. Weir, and lives near Verdant Valley. Nancy Knapp became Mrs Henry Shroeder, lived some years in Huntersville, where Mr Shroeder operated a tannery, and finally settled on the Waugh homestead. Mary Shroeder, her daughter, was married to the late William Fertig, of Huntersville, lived some years on Anthonys Creek, and now lives near Dilley's Mill. Mr Fertig was a saddler by trade, then a merchant, was a member of the Pocahontas Court, and upon his removal to Greenbrier devoted his time to farming.

B. Franklin Shrader died in the war. Robert C. Shrader lives on a part of the Waugh homestead, and conducts a farm and tannery successfully. His wife is a daughter of the late James Lewis, of the Levels. John Shrader lives at the original homestead as mentioned. His wife was a daughter of Nicholas Stulting, lately of Hillsboro.

Jacob Shrader married a daughter of the late David Kincaid, in Highland County, and lives near Dilley's Mill. Luther Shrader married a sister of Jacob's wife, and lived in Greenbrier. Ellen Susan Shrader became the wife of Oscar Sharp, a local Methodist minister, and lives at Frost. The names of the other members of the Shrader family are Enoch, William, Charles, and Margaret Ann.

Eleanor Knapp married Sampson Bozzard. Elizabeth Knapp married Peter Shrader. Margaret Knapp married McCoy Malcomb. John Malcomb, whose wife was Fannie Carter, a daughter of the Dr P. D. Carter, living in Greenbrier; Thomas Malcomb, who married Levie Moore, daughter of Jacob Moore, of Elk, and lives on Knapp's Creek, are her sons. Hannah Malcomb, now Mrs W. B. Johnson, near Marlinton, is her daughter. B W. Knapp lived in Tucker County. A. J. Knapp went to Missouri.

Rebecca Waugh married Andrew Moore, son of Levi Moore, junior, and for some years lived near Frost, then at the head of Stony Creek, and finally her family moved to Jackson County.

Her John Waugh, son of Samuel Waugh, Married Martha Moore daughter of Levi Moore, junior, and settled on that part of the homestead now held by Robert Shrader, thence settled on the Indian Draft near Edray, where his son John Waugh now lives. His son Samuel died in youth, and was preparing for the Methodist ministry. Levi Waugh, a Confederate veteran; Beverly Waugh, a Union veteran; and John Waugh, lately deputy sheriff of Pocahontas county, are his sons. Mrs Erving John son, near Marlinton, and Mrs Richard Major, of Blue Ridge Springs, Va., are his daughters.

The Mr John Waugh is worthy of remembrance for many reasons He was a skillful worker in metals. His specialty seemed to be the manufacture of hoes, one of the most useful of implements in his time when with many persons it was the main reliance in cultivating a crop and working a garden. He excelled also in tempering axes —another implement of precious value and essential use in preparing the land for cultivation. He taught school, and preferred the vocal method when all the pupils would con their lessons audibly, as well as recite them. It was his contention that pupils trained thus would not be embarrassed by any confusion, and could attend to business no matter what the surroundings may be at sales, courts, stores, or mills. He studiously improved his limited opportunities for mental improvement and became a well-informed, intelligent citizen, and had his own well - matured opinions about questions of public interest. He was for many years a prominent member of his church and a local preacher that seemed to have but little regard for what persons might say about his discourse. He had a parable about throwing rocks in the dark at certain things, and if there was an outcry he knew that something was hit. He died a few years ago, apparently in the full possession of his faculties, at a very advanced age.

Samuel Waugh, junior, moved to Missouri in early manhood, and there upon his marriage with a Missouri lady, Mary Canterbury, he settled and we are favored with no farther particulars.

Robert Waugh, remembered as a very bright and interesting young man, devoted himself to schoolteaching. From exposure on the damp ground he contracted a rheumatic affection that disabled him for manual labor. He was held in high reputation as a teacher, and some of his scholars yet speak of him with affection after a lapse of fifty years or more.

Robert Waugh seems to have been gifted with fine oratorical powers, for some of the older people tell me that they have never heard anything that could best Robert Waughs speaking when he got warmed up on any subject. He died comparatively young at the old homestead, and never lived to realize his hopes and aspirations in this life. In his case the adage seems to apply "Death loves a shining mark." In his lonely grave amid the "Hills" a tongue is silent that may have enraptured listening audiences and secured for Robert an illustrious name. It was when thinking of just such characters that these words came to the poet's mind:

> "Full many a flower is born to blush unseen
> And waste its fragrance on the desert air.

William Waugh, another of Samuel Waugh's nine sons, married Martha Brown, daughter of Josiah Brown, near Indian Draft, and settled on the Brown homestead, now in the possession of W. C. Xa n. They were the parents of ten children, whose names appear in the memoirs of Josiah Brown. Upon leaving this place Mr Waugh settled in Upshur County, thence he went to Iowa, and afterwards to Missouri, where Mrs Waugh died many years ago. In 1864 Mr Wilson Waugh was struck by a passing train not far from his home in Missouri and died in forty minutes from the shock.

Alexander Waugh, son of Samuel Waugh pioneer, married Annie Cochran of the Levels, and settled in Nicholas County.

Arthur Waugh, another of the nine sons, went in early manhood to Kenawha, where he married Henrietta Boswell and settled.

Jacob Waugh married Miss Sarah Ann Gay, youngest daughter of the late Samuel M. Gay, near Marlinton, and first lived at the Waugh homestead. Then he moved to Barbour County, and finally returned to Pocahontas and took charge of the Dolbeff mill, near Edray, where he died a few years since. The mill is now operated by his son S. D. Waugh. Mrs A. Cowan, Mrs John Waugh, Isaac Waugh, and Lizzie Waugh, and R. A. Waugh, of Barbour County, are his children. Isaac and Lizzie are living with their mother, Mrs Margaret Waugh, near Frankford. Jacob Waugh's second wife, who survives her husband. She was a Miss Carrington, of Taylor county.

Beverly Waugh, the last to be mention of this remarkable list of sons of Samuel Waugh, married Martha Bradshaw, daughter of the late William Bradshaw, on Browns Creek. He lived many years on the place now occupied by Robert Shrader. He then moved to the *Levels, near Hillsboro. Mrs Ken*ney Wade (first wife) and John E. Waugh were his children.

Mr Beverly Waugh was an estimable man. He led the Mt. Zion class for sixteen years, and yielded the position to the regret of his Christian Brethren when it became necessary to change homes. He died of a cancerous affection but a few years since, and bore his dreadful sufferings with becoming resignation. He left an honorable reputation as a gentleman and a Christian.

In reference to Samuel Waugh's other three daughters we are able to furnish but the few particulars herewith given. Margaret Waugh was married to Samuel Martin, and lived first in Upshur County and then moved to Iowa.

Mary Ann Waugh became Mrs Reuben Buzzard, and lived near *Glade Hill a few years. After*wards Mr Buzzard purchased Dilley's mill and lived there a considerable while, and finally emigrated to the far West.

Truly our attention has been given to a family group whose history is suggestive and instructive. Samuel Waugh and Ann M'Guire his wife, imbued with the faith and energy so peculiar to the genuine Scotch-Irish, endured all that is implied in rearing a family of fourteen sons and daughters, and all living to be adults. The sons all lived to be grown and not one was ever known to use tobacco or ardent spirits. This seems scarcely credible, yet it is asserted to be a pleasing truth. Samuel Waugh was one of the original members of the old Mt. Zion Church, one of the strongholds of its denomination for so many years. His history shows that in the face of pioneer hindrances and privations sons and daughters may be reared that may faithfully serve God and support their country in their day and generation. W. T. P.

Coining Silver Dollars.

The government is at this time engaged in coining several million silver dollars for the redemption of Sherman notes. As is well known these notes were issued under the act of 1890 and given in payment for silver bullion. They are payable in coin, but under the clause in the act pledging the government to maintain the parity of gold and silver, gold was not refused for the notes when demanded. There is a considerable demand for silver dollars among the colored laborers of the South, who prefer them to paper dollars. It is to meet this demand that several million dollars are coined each year out of the ricks of pig silver bought under the sherman act. The Sherman notes so redeemed may be reissued. The amount of these notes issued is $154,867,220, of which about $31,000,000 is in the treasury. A great many of the silver dollars find their way back to the treasury, where they are deposited and silver certificate taken instead. Hall the Sherman notes should be redeemed in silver and withdrawn from circulation or cancelled, there would still be a vast bulk of silver left known as the "seigniorage." The government bought this silver at a far higher price than the present market value. But the price paid was less than the coinage value—that is, with the silver bought with a hundred dollars of the Sherman notes over a hundred and fifty dollars may be issued. So there is enough pig silver in the treasury to coin dollars for the redemption of all the Sherman notes and many millions besides. The disposition of the seigniorage will be in the hands of Congress, but until all the Sherman notes are retired it must remain as a pledge for their redemption.—Baltimore Sun.

MORE THAN HE COULD STAND.—How about that walking delegate walking out of the church Sunday night in the middle of the sermon? Had he got so to the habit of working that he did it subconsciously?

It makes no difference whether you answer or not. It is always true that "a woman is as old as she looks." Nothing sets the seal of age upon a woman's beauty so deeply, as gray hair. IRREGULARITY IN SCHOOL SUB DISTRICTS.

I do not wish to impose an article upon the people which is not of general interest; but there is one subject which interests every tax-payer in Green Bank District, and that is the present arrangement of the school sub-districts.

As I understand the intention of the school law on this point, our sub-districting is a most miserable failure. If I interpret correctly, every school should constitute a sub-district, with three trustees to each, of whom two must sign a contract to make it valid. But in Green Bank District THREE schools constitute a district with a trustee to each, which makes it necessary for the trustees to trade signatures with each other, and that trade is with "boot," the "boot" consists of an agreement that each is to withhold his signature from a contract until that trustee is on it who belongs to the school for which the contract is made, which virtually puts the control of a school within the power of one trustee, who can arbitrarily use that power to gratify his own taste or interest, whether it please or displease every other patron in the district. I do not mean to say or intimate that all the trustees abuse the trust imposed in them, but I do say that some do practice corruption along that very line, and that thing does a great deal to cause dissatisfaction and jangle in the schools.

No teacher in the district referred to knows what school he may teach (legally), for three schools being in, say, No. 2 Sub District, any one could be claimed by any teacher of the schools, so farss the district is concerned, and no recourse could be had by the other teacher—who may have had an understanding with the people that he was to teach that particular school.

It is hoped the County Superintendant will take such steps as will set this matter right, both for the good of the teacher and the people.

Respectfully, W. T. P.

HE WAS NO FOOL.—He—Did you hear of that Pennsylvania woman who used a man for $1,000 for one kiss?

She.—Yes, what a homely creature she must be.

He—Homely? Why so?

She—Oh, of course, she just used because she wanted to advertise the fact that somebody had summoned up courage enough to do it, and not because she was pretty.

He then proceeded to take a branch.—Cleveland Leader.

SAMUEL SCHNEIDER, 78 years old, living near Morgantown, has undertaken to bring suit against the descendants of the captain of the ship in which Israel sailed from Joppa on his memorable voyage from Nineveh, for the recovery of damages for the loss of his brother's fare. His claim is based on the fact recorded in the Bible that Jonah was thrown over board. Schneider has spent twenty or more years hunting his own ancestry and that of certain wealthy descendants of Van Noah, Lindley Murray, Baronets of England and Bankers of Paris. He claims he is the last surviving descendant of Jonah's and that the other people are the descendants of the captain of the ship. He will go to New York in the spring to place his case in the hands of his attorneys.

Indians Scared by an Elevator.

An Indian yell which made the blood of the people at the State House run cold reverberated thru the halls and offices. It sounded like the dying moan of a thousand souls going down into perdition. It was wild, uncanny and weird and terrifying in the extreme. Chiefs Mugh Nose and Little Talk were doing the State House and stepped into the elevator at the solicitation of their guide. The carriage started up and then the Indians yelled. One dropped down on his knees and lifted up his voice in a weird, discordant supplication to the Great Spirit, while the other seized the iron grating of the cage and yelled in savage style. The muscles of his face stood out in bold relief, so great was the exertion of yelling. The squaws fell upon the floor of the elevator and seemed in a faint. When the elevator stopped the Indians scrambled out, but visited the State House no longer. They hurried down a stairway leading to the main entrance and disappeared as if by magic toward their camp.—Topeka State Journal.

A GRATEFUL WOMAN.—A Prattville, N. Y., woman whose husband died recently sent the following communication to a local paper: "Mr Editor—I desire to thank the friends and neighbors most heartily in this manner for the united aid and cooperation during the illness and death of my late husband, who escaped from me by the hand of death on Friday last while eating breakfast. To the friends who stood all night and willingly toward making the last moments and funeral of my husband a success, I desire to remember most kindly, hoping these few lines will find them enjoying the same I am doing. I have got a good milk cow and roan gelding horse, eight years old, which I will sell cheap. 'God moves in a mysterious way. His wonders to perform. He plants His footsteps in the sea and rides upon the storm;' also a black and white shote, very low."—Greenbrier Independent.

"CHILDREN'S feet grow so fast," says The Hospital, "that to keep them always properly shod is a matter that requires considerable care and some expenditure. It matters very little to a child's future well-being that at some period of its childhood the sleeves of a jacket have been too short or the skirt of a frock too scant; but the compression of feet in boots too tight or, even worse, too short may be a cause of torment in future years. Infinitely better are bare feet than ill-chosen, badly adapted boots. In the winter the feet may indeed want some protection from cold and wet, but during the greater portion of the year children may safely and healthfully go bareheaded. Some medical men, by no means of the poorer class, are convinced that the comfort and symmetry of the feet in mature years are largely to be gained by giving them freedom during the time of growth.

PRINCESS COUNTY recently sent two men to the penitentiary. One of them stole a $600 diamond and the other stole a $600 diamond should it and was convicted after a locally trial. The other had stolen an $8 suit of clothes, confessed and saved the county the expense of a trial. The diamond thief was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, while the man who stole the $8 suit got a life sentence. Such are the horrible crime there pears in the sister institution.—Greenbrier Independent.

IF MOSBY HAD BEEN CALLED.—"It is not allowed to members of the church to be superstitious," said the good minister, "yet it may be deemed a curious coincidence that two of eighteen couples I have joined in matrimony in this county have since been divorced."

"Why do you not bring out your own Bonaparte Mosby, asked his neighbor Democratic Congressman.

ANDREW PRICE, EDITOR

Marlinton, Friday, Oct. 15, 1897.

At the close of Senator Daniel's speech at Fredericksburg, last Saturday, he was presented with a silver dollar dated 1789. He said he would preserve it all one of the "dollar of our daddies." Everyone has a weakness for our "mother's pins" and the "dollars (and other estate) of daddies."

Dr Benjamin Andrews, the bimetalist of Brown University, was one of the notables at the inauguration of the new President of the State University, at Morgantown, this week. There will be no one to the distinguished company which will indict the new nutrie President into his office. When he goes it will be with less noise.

Rev Dr Goodknight, late president of the West Virginia University, and pleasantly remembered by our public school teachers for his genial presence at the Pocahontas Institute a year ago, has turned his attention to farming. He remarked in his speech at the Institute that he had at command some twelve or fifteen ways of making a living. He has bought a farm in Ohio, where he will soon move his family and engage in farming. So this must be his choice of the many methods of making a living these prevarious times.

Mrs Atkinson, the first lady of West Virginia, is on trial in Gilmer County for forgery. The trial seems to have grown out of the fact that Mrs Atkinson had enemies, who would accept no other construction of the passing of certain receipts than such as pleased them. The late Judge Camden was her second husband and she transacted most of his business for him. It is alleged she receipted for money due his estate after his death. Mrs Atkinson declares that in case she is convicted she will not accept a pardon from the Governor, her husband. We sincerely hope Mrs Atkinson's adversaries will not prevail against her, for the very nature of the case shows that it is not prosecuted solely through a desire to see justice upheld.

C. C. Brown, Secretary of the Board of Agriculture, came to hold a farmer's institute at Marlinton in September, and on his return wrote up his trip the article printed in the West Virginia Farm Reporter, the journal that claims him as editor. The province of his article seems to be to deal with farming topics, but he went a little out of his way to give the town of Marlinton a black eye. The best word he had for it was that it was a "touted boom." The inhabitants had endeavored to put the village at his disposal and to make up for the alarming deficiency of farmers present. We do not seem to have pleased him as a town, and will not try to do so again. We resent the words he used and the light in which he held us up before his readers. While we did not receive him as we did the Veterans, he got a better reception than will be accorded him another time.

SAND STEALS.

Within the last two months the office of the county clerk of McDowell has been literally flooded with deeds conveying hundreds of thousands of acres of land which, it is said, have no existence in the county. Already the land books of the county show that titles to three million acres in the county have been recorded, while as matter of fact the entire territory of the county does not exceed six hundred thousand acres.

A portion of this large excess may be accounted for by conflicting titles. When two parties have conflicting claims to land they each record their deeds and pay the taxes, the land books thus showing twice the amount of land that actually exists. But it can not be said even of McDowell County, with all its conflicting titles, that there is an average of five claimants to every acre of land within the county, and the larger part of the excess of titles over acreage may safely be set down as fraudulent, bogus titles being set down fraudulent, bogus titles being entered of record so that they may be sold to the unwary.

The scheme of fraud is simple enough and has been worked by the same parties for some time. The swindlers prepare a deed for a large tract of coal land in McDowell County and have it acknowledged before some fictitious notary public in some far away State. They send it to McDowell County, to be recorded, and have the clerk of the county court to forward them certified copies of the deed from the record. This places them in a position to dispose of the pretended titles for a good price to unsuspecting parties.

It is not unusual for a stranger to turn up at Welch, which is the county seat of McDowell County, with a deed for several thousand acres of land, which is all straight on the record, but when he comes to look for the land he cannot find it.

These frands are not committed *by persons in this State to any*body's knowledge, but are by outside parties. Efforts are being made to ascertain their identity.—Gazette.

Quid Pro Quo.

She had an enormous shawl-strap in one hand, and a diminutive dog tucked against her waist with the other, and she invaded the smoking-car with a gust-out-of-my-way-or-perish air a trifle more than terrifying. She flounced into a seat, and proceeded to make her horrid little pet comfortable beside her with affectionate pats and caresses. Just then the conductor came in and saw her. He went up and explained her being in the wrong car very courteously, and offered to assist her into another car, as the train had begun to move, and all without appearing to see the vile little violation of the rules curled up beside her.

"I know it's a nasty smoking car," she snapped, "but no gentleman will smoke in the presence of a lady." Then she glared at the unfortunate official until we could see him shrink together and shrivel up like a newspaper struck by lightning. With a deprecatory look about into our sympathetic faces, he staggered out, to sit in the fire-box and cool off gradually, I presume.

It was a warm day and the windows were all open, and we one and all, with more or less cunning, dropped whatever we happened to be smoking outside. I dropped a pipe I that I would not have taken $50 for. That is, all but the young man with the square jaw who occupied the seat across the aisle from the intruder, and who had not hitherto been smoking. He now, however, with great deliberation drew a cigar from his vest pocket, carefully snipped the end off, and lighted up. We all watched this date-devil then recklessly assert his rights with absorbed eyes, and our femal terrorizer did more. She watched him with blazing eyes, of which he seemed ignorant. And just as his cigar was puffing finely she suddenly reached across the aisle, jerking it from his lips, and threw it out the window, exclaiming, "My! how I do hate cigars!"

An involuntary shudder rustled all but the young man remained immovable until she had triumphantly settled herself back into her seat. Then he quickly reached over, seized her pet by the scruff of its neck, and tossed it out of the window, saying, "My! how I do hate pooches!"

We gave one irrepressible cheer and proceeded about to shake hands with our champion.—Harper's Bazar.

SPREES AT A CHURCH FESTIVAL.

Contracted for by Synagogues in the Rhineland Village of Oberingelheim.

It is a custom of the country in Germany to get drunk at the consecration of a new church. This custom has been regarded as unlovely and unChristian by many influential Germans of the new school, most notably by Emperor William II., but still it remains unreformed, and the comic weeklies do not tire of depicting the scenes, in and out of the police court, that follow the consecration sprees and fights. Some three weeks ago the festival of a new church was celebrated in Oberingelheim, in the Rhine country. In anticipation of the usual trade in exhilarating liquors a saloonkeeper who does business near the sacred edifice advertised thus in the Rhinemal Observer:

"Jacob Muller herewith pledges himself for a subscription price of three marks (75 cents) to serve every one of his guests with as much wine as he can drink on the occasion of the church consecration.

"Inviting my friends and patrons to visit me in response to this request, I remain, respectfully yours,

"Jacob Muller."

Within an hour after the newspapers containing this advertisement appeared, 39 citizens of little Oberingelheim had bought subscription tickets from Muller. At the current price of ordinary loose wine in the Rhine country, each of the 39 and their colleagues in this speculation had to drink 12 large glassfuls before he could begin to benefit by the subscription tariff. The final results of the speculation cannot be known until the police court reports of the Oberringelheim district arrive with the newspapers from the continent.

LIFE IN THE GREAT CITIES.

Its Tendency Is Not to Enervate Nations.

And as to the tendency of the growth of great cities to enervate nations there is no proof of it at all unless we identify the life of great cities with the passion for idleness and pleasure and self-indulgence, which sometimes, but by no means universally, accompanies their growth, says the London Spectator. When you get a large proletariat living, as that of ancient Rome and possibly of Nineveh and Babylon did, on the alms of the rich and powerful, then no doubt you have the conditions of a thoroughly unnatural and unhealthy life, and no one can wonder at the rapid decay of such cities and of the activity which offered to sustain them. But where the honest working class far outnumbers the proletariat, where the middle classes of distributors and manufacturers and professional men are laborious and energetic, and even the class that lives on its accumulated wealth contains a considerable sprinkling of serious and disinterested workers, we do not believe that there is the smallest evidence of any greater danger in the life of the city than in the life of the agricultural village of the pastoral tribe. Indeed, we should regard Olive Schreiner's picture of the life of the modern Boers as indicating a condition of things more prolific of morbid elements, with its almost complete absence of any stirring or active intelligence, than any kind of modern life that is honestly laborious at all. The Boer life is too sleepy, too destitute of stirring thought or effort, to be altogether natural. It needs at least the old element of danger and necessary vigilance to render it even bracing.

MIXTURE OF STRANGE BLOOD.

Few Reigning Families of Same Nationality as the People Governed.

There is hardly a reigning monarch in Europe whose family is of the same nationality, absolutely, as the people governed. The house of Austria is really the house of Lorraine, and even in their origin the Hapsburgs were Swiss. And if Emperor Francis be not, strictly speaking, an Austrian, still less is he a Hungarian, although he is a king of Hungary, says London Tit-Bits.

The king of Belgium is a Saxe-Coburg, the King of Denmark a Holsteiner, the infant monarch of Spain is a Bourbon, the king of Italy a Savoyard, the king of Roumania and Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria are both foreigners, the founder of the Bernadotte dynasty in Sweden was born at Pau less than a century and a quarter ago, the czar is a Holstein Gottorp, and the king of the Hellenes is likewise a Holsteiner.

Even in England's royal family there is very little English blood left. The Hohenzollerns were originally Suabians, and, therefore, partly Bavarians and partly Swiss. Neither was the historic house of Orange, in which protestantism has nearly always been the first instinct, Dutch to begin with.

Making War Balloons.

Women make the aeronauts, or war balloons, used by the British government, and also do some part of the rigging of the balloons. They work in sheds built specially for the purpose. There are about 40 women engaged, and all earn good wages. They are mostly the wives and daughters of soldiers, and have all been carefully trained by the superintendent of the balloon department. The making of the balloons requires a very delicate touch, one thin film of bubble's skin having to be laid over another with the greatest care. The ends of the cigars have also to be woven into each other with extraordinary deftness.

Isolated Weather Station.

Rockall, a desolate granite rock, topographically the most isolated spot in Ireland and the Hebrides, is to be made an English meteorological station. It is but 100 miles from land, the nearest point to it being the little island of St. Kilda, 100 miles away, and itself nearly 100 miles from the main group of the Hebrides. Rockall is in the path of the Atlantic depressions as they approach and the stations there would give timely warning of storms approaching the British coast.

Locale Events.

DIED—Mrs Mahala Kinnison, on Swago Monday evening, at an advanced age.

A RAM measuring 32 inches was caught at Buckeye by a young man visiting there from Ritchie County.

THE rains of last Monday allayed the dust. Before that a perpetual cloud overhung the road and the dust choked both man and beast.

A TEACHERS' examination was held here last week. There were thirteen applicants. Four number zero were passed, and there was one failure. We did not learn the names and grades.

SAM HIGGINS, of Clover Creek Mountain, caught a white coon the other night. It is evidently an albino. It had red eyes. On its tail were rings of a darker color. He has caught fourteen coons already, and the season has just begun.

DR. L. W. EBERIDGE, of Acadia, a veteran of the 1st Maryland Regiment, wore his relief uniform at the Marlinton Reunion, and was the only "dressed up" "Johnny" on the grounds. He was proud of his clothes.—Phillipi Pinindex.

A POCAHONTAS man went down to East Virginia. The inhabitants of that dreary townland were inclined to throw off on the mountaineer, and asked him whether we raised cattle. "Cattle," he said. "We grow cattle out there five feet across the hips! Down here you kill a beef and salt him in the horns!"

COL. JOHN T. MCGRAW was in Marlinton last week. This gentleman has already done more in shaping the destiny of Pocahontas County, and apparently the effects are just beginning to show. It is about five years since he was last here. Then he said he would not be back until he came on the railroad. While he did not quite live up to this, we do not think the railroad is very far behind him.

THE great jury case of the term was Shinnebarry vs. Beverage, a damage suit for slander. It shared the fate of all other damage suits brought in this county in recent years. Both parties were encompassed about by a great cloud of witnesses, and the case was two days in being heard. It was not argued by counsel. The witness costs amounted to $354.

ESTRAY—At my place at Buckeye, where they have been since July 3 or earlier, two hogs of the following description: One sow has about two years old, black with white nose, crop off the right ear; one shoat, no ear-mark, nine or ten months old. The owner can have the same by paying for their keep and the cost of this advertisement. W. MCCLINTIC. (Printers fee 75c)

HON. ROBERT F. DENNIS, for many years a leading lawyer of Lewisburg died Friday last aged seventy-five years. He raised the first volunteer company that left Greenbrier in 1861, and was attached to the 27th Virginia Regiment, Stonewall Brigade, commanding his company at Kernstown and First Manassas. For many years he attended the courts of this county and had a large clientage here.

Persons unacquainted with the facts are inclined to smile when they hear of the enormous meals by farmers that wild turkeys are coming into their cornfields and devouring great quantities of corn. The sayers of the oppression of other countries where the game of the rich men leaves his preserves and eats up the crop of his poor neighbor, who cannot protect himself against such depredations. However the readers may teach the turkeys to keep their distance, and the it may be a crime in the eyes of the law to kill a turkey, but should a turkey be killed standing in a corn-field it is not to eat it.

THE county seat war in Randolph is over and decisively retains the court-house because the majority is in favor of Elkins locks 20 votes of being large enough. The vote cast was 1662 in favor of Elkins and 1442 for Beverly. The Elkins Inter-Mountain says they have found that there is very little grounds for boasting. A resident is quoted at and will probably accept as an increase or a decrease of the merger. Beverly has a very strong organization and will hold it together. CONTRARY to all hopes the fever situation has not materially improved in the Southern States. New cases occurring, and new territory invaded. Yellow fever is in quarantine at the mouth of Dog Bay, with fever patients on board. This is the most northern point yet reached by this fearful disease. The losses already amount high up in the millions, to say nothing of valuable lives.

CATTLE are being weighed and delivered. Col G. S. McNeel sold four two year-olds which weighed 5185 lbs., averaging 1296¼ lbs. J. S. McNeel sold a bunch of two-year-old spayed heifers to Sheets Brothers, of Lewis County, which averaged 980 lbs. Alvin Clark sold 30 two-year-olds to Wm. Revener, of Highland County, which averaged 1027 lbs. A. M. McLaughlin's two year olds, of his own raising averaged 1256 lbs. Col G. S. McNeel sold a bull calf for $50 to Sheets Brothers.

WILLIAM SHIELDS, of Keystone, went to the house of John Young, at Algoma, where he sat down to rest. He had been there five minutes when Brown Galloway came into the room, with revolver in hand, and fired four shots at Shields. A lively fight then ensued. Shields grabbed Galloway, who in turn placed his revolver against his side and fired, killing him instantly. Galloway went to the mountains, where he was captured. It seems that Shields indicted Galloway in the United States Court and an old grudge has existed between them ever since then.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY GAINES has received instructions from the Attorney-General, at Washington, to ask for a continuance of the cases of the Democratic Deputy Marshalls against the United States until the next term of Court at Clarksburg, which will be next April. These officers are holding their positions by virtue of a decision of the United States District Court on the civil-service law. Their terms have not expired. Under the decision of the controller of the currency for several months and the deputies claim that the instruction to the district attorney asking for a continuance was given for no other reason than to starve them out of their positions.

PROBABLY the most important decision of the late court was that made in the case of Andrew Herold vs. Amos Barlow. The suit was brought to set aside the deed from H. M. Lockridge to Amos Barlow. The suit was brought to set aside the deed from H. M. Lockridge to Amos Barlow for a farm on Knapps Creek known as the home place of the late James T. Lockridge and one of the most valuable plantations in the county. The deed was made about ten years ago while H. M. Lockridge was operating in Buena Vista. The court held that the transaction was that of an insolvent preferring creditors, and that it should be for the benefit Lockridge's creditors generally.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Rev J. H. Dills is conducting a protracted meeting at Academy.

Miss Rae Stripling has gone to Lewisburg to school.

Rev. D. S. Sydenstricker, D. D., preached at Falling Springs last Sunday for Rev J. M. Layton.

W. H. Brady, Esq., of Dry Branch, paid a welcome visit to this office last week. He has occasionally favored our readers with news items from his section.

Porter Maxwell, of Harrison County passed Marlinton Saturday afternoon with 80 head of such cattle as he usually handles. They were some, however, whose rise could be counted.

Miss Belle Clark, accompanied by her brother, Mr. Albert Clark, passed thro Marlinton last Friday on her way to open her school, four miles above Green Bank. She is in for ten months' service this year.

Professor Terry, from Nelson County, Virginia, is conducting the Hillsboro Male & Female Academy with signal success. The patrons are apparently pleased with him as a disciplinarian and as a preparer of students for college. The school is quoted from the student paper, the Echoes of Hillsboro, the is a graduate of Washington and Lee University, of the latter institution Professor Terry is an alumnus by honor. They say they found it might be regarded as an effort to outrage the sentiment by saying.

DILLEYS MILL.

News is rather scarce.

Wheat is up in places and likely to be frozen out this winter.

O. B. Sharp, who has been down with fever, is able to be out again.

Mrs John Beverage was visiting Mrs Hanna at the Mill last week.

George Bambrick is off to Beverly on business.

Miss Lillie Gibson has gone to Indiana to spend the winter with her brother.

J. L. Carpenter and son have killed one hundred squirrels this fall and plenty left yet.

Rev J. H. Sharp, of the West Virginia Conference, is visiting relatives in this part, and will preach at Mt Zion next Sunday at half past ten A. M.

The cane crop is very light this year. Mrs Manda Sharp has a fine three-roller mill running, which does much better work than mills heretofore used.

HUNTERSVILLE.

Col R. S. Turk spent Saturday night at Huntersville, enroute to the Hot Springs.

William A. Kelley, on Brown's Mountain, has been much afflicted of late with sciatica.

Miss Mary Cole, a member of Colonel Fisher's family, is still prostrated by her long and tedious illness.

Amos Barlow, Esq., accompanied by Mrs Barlow, Miss Mary Barlow, and Isaac Barlow, is visiting Mr Rice Moore, near Staunton.

The most emphatic objection to the late reunion so far as it has come to our notice, was that the day was too short. As there was no Joshua to control the sun and moon, this brevity of daylight could not be well obviated.

The alarm of fire aroused the citizens of Huntersville very much last week when the residence of J. C. Loury, Esq., was found to be in a blaze. Were it not for the timely discovery this pleasant home would have been reduced to ashes as the flames were wellnigh beyond control.

Information comes that Mr Roy Gum died at Bluefield on the 20th of September, aged 24 years. He had been connected with the Norfolk and Western railroad for about a year. He was a nephew of Mrs Preston Harper and a grandson of James Moore, once a resident of Mill Point. He was a son of J. H. Gum. Mrs Gum was Miss Dannie Moore, well remembered by many of our people as a very worthy person, and they sympathize with her. Roy had a great many friends. Fifty ladies adorned his casket with floral tokens of their esteem.

TOP OF ALLEGHANY.

Rain is badly needed in this section, and if it don't come soon it will be needed still worse.

The two schools opened up on October 4 with a fairly good attendance, with Messrs Spencer and Grimes at the helms.

Mr and Mrs Worth Phillips, of Rockingham County, have been visiting relatives during the past week.

W. B. Freeman contemplates starting to East Virginia wite a lot of "pigs," next week.

Since the railroad has come people are getting industrious and up with the times.

W. F. and Henry Willfong finished hay making on the first day of October.

He Made a Lawyer.

The Youth's Companion knows a good and useful anecdote and is ever ready to share the benefit and pleasure with its readers. One of the latest and best is told of a Nova Scotia lawyer examining a candidate for the profession.

"Well, young man, so you would like to be a lawyer?"

"Yes, sir; I think I would like to be one."

"Where's your gun, my boy? I want to see your gun, my young gentleman. Fond of sporting, eh?"

"I have no gun, sir; don't know whether I'd like gunning."

"No gun! Well, you keep a boat, then? Like boating?"

"I have not even a boat, sir; do not know how to row one."

"You wear a watch, or keep a dog?"

"I am too poor to wear a watch, and I have no dog."

"Not fit do, my lad, if you propose to be one of us. You have begun. The law is a jealous mistress, and cannot be won except by undivided attention. Remember this, my lad, and I will insure you success; you may rely on my assistance I need hardly tell you.

The young man entered the office, and became a famous lawyer.

COURT INCIDENTS.

Contempt of Court—One of the most interesting scenes in the court-room at the late term of circuit court was the case of a refractory witness. The grand jury had Charles Beverage, of Clover Creek, before it for the purpose of making an indictment for the illegal sale of whiskey. The witness said that he had bought the whiskey, but he would not tell who had sold it to him. The judge sent for the grand jury and they came into the court-room and arranged themselves in a semi-circle facing the bench. Inside this circle stood the witness. He was a tall, broad-shouldered man of about twenty-eight, steel grey eyes, and a firm looking chin. The court asked him the questions, and the witness explained that when he bought the whiskey he had promised not to tell. The judge asked him if he held a promise more binding than an oath taken not to conceal anything. The logic did not appeal to him, and when the judge said "Take that man away to jail," he went without weakening.

The court-room during this scene had been as still as death, and opinion as to the witness' position was very much divided. One lawyer told of some college students who would not testify and who boldly declared they would rot in jail before they would divulge, and how they weakened after days of confinement, and were willing to tell everything they knew and some things they did not know to get out of jail. All agreed who knew the man that he was not likely to weaken. The word got about that the judge intended to leave him there until spring unless he answered to the grand jury, and then another phase of the case developed itself. The heavy taxpayers protested against paying the man's board. It so happened that the witness was thrust into the same cell with the man from whom it was supposed that he had bought the liquor. His friends, who feared he would be kept in jail all winter, tried to move him, but he said he did not come to that jail and he di l not intend to bother himself about going away. An effort was made to have the illicit liquor dealer indicted for impeding a witness from testifying, but the grand jury instead of respecting the impeding promise claimed that it was no impediment and should not be trested as such. The grand jury adjourned and on the last day of court the witness moved the court to release him until the next grand jury, which was done, the clerk taking his recognizance in the sum of $100. The witness did not show the worst trait in the world in shielding his partner in crime, but still the witness certainly had the courage of honor, to go the length he did to shield a man who had probably sold him mean whiskey at an exorbitant price.

The Forger.—There was but one felony case disposed of, that of the State vs. Thomas Douglas, colored, the dangerous forger. He is about four feet high and has a way of making himself agreeable to the powers that be. He watched his opportunity and told Judge McWhorter that he was very sorry he had done it and that he would never do it again. He made such a good impression on the Judge by his very evident contrition that the Judge referred to him as a "child" and said it would be a shame to send so young a boy to the penitentiary. Douglas had forged Miss Bessie Edgar's name to an order for forty cents' worth of whiskey and shot. Captain and Mrs Edgar were very unwilling to see the boy go to the State prison for a long term. Douglas threw himself on the mercy of the court. He said his name was Tommy Douglas and that he was fifteen years old.

The court asked him if he was sorry he had done wrong or was only sorry he had been found out. This was a question too deep for the young prisoner and he did not know what answer he should give.

Upon consideration of the case the court gave him a lecture and sent him to the Reform School. Pending his transfer the prisoner will be held on bail, and when he is entered at this famous college he will remain until he graduates.—that is until the superintendent of the institution considers him reformed. The reform school will better the condition of this colored youth and in his case the sentence is less like a punishment than a reward of merit. On the whole, Tommy Douglas of the Reform School may be said to favor compulsory education.

Not an Indictable Offense.—In answer to a question by the foreman of the grand jury as to whether or he knew of any violations of the law, a witness answered that he did. He had been a witness to some of dave pokes and had seen the dealer deal himself a jack from the bottom of the deck. For some unknown reason they failed to find an indictment.

The Advantage.—In sending to an argument where he had had his point, an attorney stated that when the court and the counsel arrived at different conclusions the court had the advantage.

A Clouded Witness.—A witness who had been summoned by both sides in a case insisted on being sworn twice so that he could testify for both parties. His position was explained to him and the additional oath proved to be unnecessary.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if when you pass them it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. COUNTING OF THE VOTES.

In Recent Elections There Has Been Little Fraud in New York.

The counting of votes has been in the past more fruitful of trickery and falsification than any other part of the election process. In 1893 the canvassers in certain districts reduced the matter to its lowest terms by simply reporting a majority for their own side, and then going out to fling up their hats for the rest of the night. In the subsequent election contempt and incorruptible men supervised the canvass so strictly that the percentage of fraud was so small, if any existed, as never to be heard of. This watching, says a writer in Century, at the count not only prevented intentional lying, but saved accidental mistakes. In one case the board of inspectors confessed they did not know how to count the votes, and submitted entirely to the guidance of a well-informed watcher.

The counting is done in public, and is often an interesting sight. Every organization that each candidate may send a representative to observe it, though nobody but the inspectors is permitted to touch the ballots. The straight tickets are first counted in sets by four men in succession, and a tally is kept by at least two assistants. Each name is credited with as many votes as there are tickets for his side. Then one inspector reads off of those tickets which are "split," or have pasters attached, or upon which names have been erased or new names written, and each candidate is credited with a vote every time his name appears. When this is finished the most prominent office is taken up, and the sum of the votes for each candidate is ascertained.

HE VOWED VENGEANCE.

And Got It with a Will—Lord Reginald's Path.

"He struc-e-k me!"

The villain strode up and down the stage cycle path and ground his teeth with rage, says the New York World.

"He struc-e-e-k Cecil Legree!"

In a very ecstasy of fury the villain stamped his feet and tore his hair.

"He struck Cecil Legree! No man ever did that and lived to tell the tale. And as for the girl—ah, me proud beauty, you shall yet feel the vengeance of a Legree!"

What venom, what hatred there was in the bitter words.

Even the pale moon wobbled in the canvas heavens.

"I have the papers; ha, ha, ha! I'll bide me time, and then, then I'll cross his path again!"

Raising his clenched hand the villain served notice upon high heaven and the property moon that some day he would puncture proud Lord Reginald's tire.

"I'll cross his path again! I'll cross his path again!" he repeated.

A whirr on the air of the stilly night, an enthusiastic grinding upon the theatrical macadam, a percussion of the "tire" with the "rim" of a pile-driver, a bent, battered shape crashing into a pale-green tree trunk with a dull, sickening thud and then silence—silence!

It was even so.

He had crossed Lord Reginald's cycle path again!

A POLITICIAN TESTED.

A Congressman Who Could Not Play Checkers to Suit Constituents.

"One of the ablest men in congress will lose a number of votes in his district in Georgia," said a department clerk to a Washington Star reporter.

A friend of mine wrote me some time ago that the judge was safe so far as his reelection was concerned, but my friend visited some of the back counties a few days ago and found that a decided change in sentiment had come about. He asked one of the political leaders:

"What is the matter with the judge?"

"He ain't no good."

"Why, what did he ever vote for that you are not in favor of?"

"I dunno."

"Did he vote against anything you wanted passed?"

"Not as I know on."

"The newspapers all speak well of him."

"Newspapers is allus lyin'."

"What is the matter?"

"Well, he comed out here, an' Tom Wilkins beat 'im playin' checkers. Tom kain't play a little bit, an' for a figger kin a man cut in congress who kain't play checkers better'n thet?"

Strategy Well Employed.

The wise men of the east understand the value of strategy and know when to use it. A rich merchant died. He had one son, who when quite a lad had been sent to an uncle in India. When on his way home the young fellow was shipwrecked. It was believed that he escaped drowning, though no tidings of him could be obtained. His father died, leaving his fortune to the care of an old friend, not to be handed over to the claimant until certain injunctions had been fulfilled. At the end of a year a young man appeared, who declared himself the heir. He was told that a third arrived on the scene. The guardian gave to each a bow and arrow and charged them to use the deed me e's pleasure as a target to aim at the heart. The first nearly hit the mark, the second drove his arrow home, but the third burst into tears and refused to dishonor his father's memory by desecrating the portrait of one whom he had loved and revered. Then the guardian knew which of the three was entitled to the fortune.

Cheese Sandwiches.

At the convention of the Irish race last month in Dublin two speakers, who had come from the United States, contributed the following sentiment to the course of their speeches. One of the men, in giving some details of personal history, informed his hearers that "he had left Ireland a poor boy, with not a red cent in his pocket, without a dollar in his pocket." Said the other: "Until last week I had never set foot in the land of my birth."

A SERMONETTE.

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.—Proverbs iv 23.

Those who may favor this little sermon with their attention are requested to put the word "mind" in place of the word "heart" in this text. Hence the exhortation is to be understood in this manner keep or watch thy mind with all diligence, for out of it are the final results of life.

How impressively this should remind us of what is declared in the Bible to be a fact, as a man thinketh in his heart (mind) so is he. It is all important to keep the mind with all diligence for what a person may be thinking about today, or may be most interested in, may be what that person will try to do tomorrow; for present actions are most likely to be the visible thoughts of yesterday. If you disclose to a friend what your mind is most interested in today he virtually knows what you will aim to be at the day following.

It is a law impressed upon our nature by our Creator that we are influenced by or partake of the nature of whatever things we may look at with our minds and eyes. You enter a room where persons are sitting in silence or conversing in low tones, and a little coffin is near by wherein lies a sweet child. When your mind and eye take it all in you are imbued with solemn sentiments, partaking of the nature of the scene the mind is kept fixed upon. At another time your mind and eyes are kept upon another scene where there is beauty, music cheerful conversation, and flowers, and the first thing you realize is one's whole being is imbued with the aroma and beauty of the surroundings.

This being the case, the text is one of great significance, and no wonder one of the apostolic writers should so earnestly write: Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things. Or in other words, keep your heart on them with all diligence. By so doing the character becomes saturated with truthfulness, honesty, justice, purity, loveliness, and high reputation. Character is all that we take with us to another state of existence. The elements of such a character as result from keeping the heart with all diligence will be tenderness of conscience and a scrupulous mind.

An aged minister, in giving some reminiscences, speaks of a lady who was more than ordinarily gifted in mind and spiritual attainments. She opened her mind to him in confidence desiring counsel in her troubles. She was a tender hearted, self-sacrificing mother, and had placed her affections upon her much-loved son as the hope and stay of her life. For years her highest hopes gave flattering promise of a most happy realization, but now these hopes were so clouded that her heart was ready to break over the sad issue that seemed to confront her. In substance she said: My son has been walking a good while in the counsel of the ungodly and standing in the way of sinners, and I fear he is about to take his seat with the scornful. He seems to have tender feelings for his dog and caresses the cats affectionately, but when he sits down at the table if there is the least thing wrong with the victuals he raves and tears and comes very near saying bad words, and it all hurts me worse than a serpent's tooth. What am I to do in this great trouble? The aged preacher advised her not to lose confidence in God, and referred to that impressive case in Mathew xvii 14-21, and counselled the heart-broken mother not to lose hope long as her son was alive and she could "fast and pray" in his behalf.

There is something in the prevailing spirit of the age of an ominous, dangerous tendency, and it behooves us to keep our hearts with all diligence or the issue will be as this instance illustrates, tendencies of manners to brush and destroy cruelty to persons. The spirit of Lawrence Sterne seems to be marching on and may enthrall many a promising youth, who may disregard this duty of to keep the mind with all diligence. Sterne sneers most heartily and talks very pathetically about a poor homeless donkey; but is harsh, unfeeling, and in short hearnin his no sense

JAMES F. CLARK, of Greenbrier, an ex-member of the legislature, dropped dead at his home at Columbia Sulphur Springs. He was a teacher by profession, and was an ex-Confederate soldier of Bryan's Battery.

AN interesting article published in the last issue of the Independent, from Rev Rec R. L. Telford, advocates a system of water works for Lewisburg. The want has always been apparent to him, and, after the late fire there, many persons remembered his words which seemed almost prophetic.

THE hopes of the people of this county in respect to a railroad have been blasted so often, yet there is now such evidence that a railroad will be quickly built that, in spite of all that is past, the intelligent observer believes that we are on the very eve of a great railroad development. We can see now that what we once took for signs and indications could not be relied on, and that when the time did begid to draw nigh we would see and understand. It is no shadow this coming event casts—all is joy and gladness—and those owning land here see a bright future before them. The time is now coming when the people of this county will cease to be "land poor."

A SALE of the real estate of W. H. Overholt was made at this place last Thursday by T. J. Williams, of Lewisburg. The 2250 acres, on Greenbrier River, sold for $1,000, to B. M. Yeager; 50 acres, adjoining H. W. McCoy and others, $53.50, to T. A. Sydenstricker; 350 acres, on Hill's Creek, $165, to R. W. Hill; the Locust Creek mill property was taken down at a bid of $300. Sweeker was here acted as auctioneer. The Greenbrier real estate brought the following prices: The store-house, dwelling-house and lot in Frankford sold at $1300, and his store-house and dwelling, at Falling Spring, sold at $650. Both were bought by the Calvert Building and Loan Association, of Baltimore. Which he'd first lien on said property.

THE BUCKEYE.

One of the most common trees of our section is the buckeye. At this time of year the cow is apt to feed upon the nut, which produces a stupor and often kills them. It is said that only a portion of the nut is bad and that the squirrel knows what to eat and what not to eat. We have always regarded the buckeye as being the horse chestnut, but the Wheeling Intelligencer says that it is not altho they are of the same species. The horse chestnut is a native of Europe and was brought to this country from Constantinople in the sixteenth century. Horse chestnuts are so-called because they were formerly ground and fed to horses. They are now found in the temperate zones of both hemispheres. The buckeye is a native of America, and, while known as the American species of horse chestnut, is differ ent in shape as well as in other respects.

THE Bishop of Worcester England, once had occasion to travel thro Banbury by rail. Being desirous to test, and of the same time encourage the far-famed industry of that town, and the train having stopped at the station for a short time, he beckoned to a small boy near at hand, and inquired the price of the celebrated bun. "Threepence each" said the boy. The Bishop thereupon handed him a sixpence and desired him to bring one to the car, adding: "And with the other threepence you may buy one for yourself." The boy shortly returned, complacently munching his Banbury, and handing the threepence in coppers to the Bishop, explained, "There was only one left, got no."—Baptist Union.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

"Pennsylvania" John Moore is represented by a worthy posterity and deserves special mention as one of the Pocahontas pioneers. He was among the immigrants from Pennsylvania, and as there were several John Moores the soubriquet "Pennsylvania" was and is attached to his name. Upon his marriage with Margaret Moocre, daughter of Moses Moore, scout, hunter, and pioneer, John Moore settled and opened up the place now occupied by David Moore, near Mt. Zion Church in the Hills. Their family consisted of three sons and eight daughters.

Martha Moore became Mrs John Collins, and lived in Upshur County, West Virginia.

Jennie lived to be grown and died of cancerous affection.

Nancy Moore was married to Peter Bussard, and they had their home near Glade Hill.

Hannah Moore married Martin Dilley, and lived where Mrs Martha Dilley now resides.

Phebe Moore became Mrs Samuel McCarty, and lived where Peter McCarty now lives.

Elizabeth Moore was married to Daniel McCarty, a soldier of the war 1812, and lived where Sheldon Moore, Esq., a very prosperous citizen, now dwells.

Margaret Moore married Eli Bussard, and lived where their son Armenius Bussard now lives.

Rebecca Moore was married to John Sharp, from near Frost, and lived on the place now occupied by Joseph Moore near the Bussard neighborhood.

William Moore, son of the Pennsylvania immigrant, married Margaret Callahan, of Bath County, Va., and opened up the homestead now owned by William Jeff Moore In reference to William Moore's family the following particulars are in hand:

James C. Moore married Hester Nottingham, from Glade Hill. Their children are Adam C., William, and Mrs. W. H. Gabbert, near Huntersville. Adam and William Moore live on the old homestead with their widowed mother. James C. Moore, their father, was a Confederate soldier. He died of wounds received during the memorable seven days fight around Richmond and was buried near Greenwood tunnel, Va.

William Jefferson Moore married Loretta Grimes, daughter of the late Charles Grimes, and lives on the paternal homestead near Mt Zion. They are the parents of these sons and daughters—Mattie Elizabeth, George Ellsworth, Ches King, Caroline Frances, Fannie Amoret, Myrtle Florence, Ira H., and Hattie. George E. Moore is a teacher of schools. Fannie Moore is now Mrs Christopher McLaughlin, near Dunmore.

Mary Jane Moore, sister of Jas. C. and Jefferson Moore, was married to Ralph Dilley and lived on another section of the paternal homestead. Their children are Cronin, Emma, Martha, Margaret, Minta, and Amanda.

This worthy man William Moore came to end his industrious, useful life under very sad circumstances. A fire had broken out from a clearing near his home and with no one with him he endeavored to check its progress. In doing so he seems to have been overcome by fatigue and was suffocated by the smoke and flames. He was therefore found dead in the track of the fire on the 4th of April, 1866.

John Moore, son of John Moore the Pennsylvania emigrant, married Mary Hannah, one of Joseph Hannah's daughters, on Elk, and settled on a portion of the pioneer homestead now occupied by David Moore, Esq. One of his sons, Joseph, married Susan Bussard, and lives between Frost and Glade Hill. Another son of John Moore junior, David Moore, married Martha Moore and lives on the homestead where his father had lived before him. Two of his children, Forest and Elbert, died in youth. Lucy, his daughter about grown, lives with her parents.

Alfred Moore, another son of John Moore, junior, lives with his brother, Joseph Moore.

James W. Moore, a son of John Moore, junior, married Margaret Nottingham, daughter of the late William Nottingham, junior, one of the pioneers of the Glade Hill vicinity, and lives on a section of the Moore homestead. They were the parents of two children. Mary Moore was married to Clayton Dilley and lived on the parental homestead. Her son Francis Marion Dilley married Izzie McCutchon, daughter of John B. McCutchon, near Dunmore, and lives near Mt Zion. Anderson L. Dilley was a proprietor and founder of The Pocahontas Herald at Hunstersville, which was afterwards published at Marlinton.

William Moore, the only son of the James W. Moore just mentioned, was a Confederate soldier. He was captured near Richmond in 1862, and was never heard from afterwards. He sleeps the years away in some unknown grave, far from his kindred and the friends that remember him so tenderly.

John Moore, the ancestor of this branch of the Moore relationship, was one of the Scotch-Irish families that came first to Pennsylvania and thence to Virginia, early in the seventies of the previous century. Except by marriage, there is no well authenticated relationship known to exist between his family and the other families of the Moore name, so numerous in our county and who have performed such an important service in opening up prosperous homes in the face of such serious obstacles so bravely and perseveringly met and overcome by them. We younger people who were permitted to begin where the pioneers left off, can scarcely realize what it all cost in laborious privation, in personal discomfort and inconvenience, in wear and tear of mind and body to make possible what seems to come to us as naturally as the air we breathe. In a modified sense, the same qualities that were requisite in clearing lands and rearing homes and making improvements in the first place are needed to retain what has been done and add thereto. Eternal vigilence is said to be the price of liberty that cost the blood and lives of the brave; so in a higher sense, eternal industry and wise economy is the price of something to wear and plenty to eat from the lands reclaimed at such a cost by those who worked and suffered while they lived for our good and their own. Science Utilizes All the Ox.

In an article on the "Wonders of the World's Waste," William George Jordon, in the October Ladies' Home Journal, details how science at the present day utilizes the ox. "Not many years ago," he says, "when an ox was slaughtered forty per cent. of the animal was wasted; at the present time nothing is lost but its dying breath.' As but one-third of the weight of the animal consists of products that can be eaten, the question of utilizing the waste is a serious one. The blood is used in refining sugar and in sizing paper, or manufactured into door knobs and buttons. The hide goes to the tanner; horns and hoofs are transformed into combs and buttons; thigh bones, worth eighty dollars per ton, are cut into handles for clothes brushes; fore leg bones sell for thirty dollers per ton for collar buttons, parasol handles and jewelry; the water in which the bones are boiled is reduced to glue; the dust from sawing the bones is food for cattle and poultry, the smaller bones are made into boneblack. Each foot yields a quarter of a pint of neat's foot oil; the tail goes to the soup; while the brush of hair at the end of the tail goes to the mattress maker. The choicer parts of the fat make the basis of buttorine; the intestines are used for sausage casings or bought by gold beaters. The undigested food in the stomach, which formerly cost the packers of Chicago thirty thousand dollars a year to remove and destroy, is now made into paper. These are but a few of the products of abattoirs. All scraps unfit for any other use find welcome in the glue pot or they do missionary work by farmers by selling for fertilizers."

"ROCKEFELLER even controls poetry now."

"How do you make that out?"

"A great critic defined poetry as a combination of sweetness and light, and doesn't Rockfeller control both sugar and oil."—Judge.

JESSE HUGHS, PIONEER.

From an old history we cull the following account of Jesse Hughs, a pioneer of Clarksburg. Harrison county was created in 1784 from Monongalia and included portions of what is now Pocahontas county. The town of Clarksburg was established in 1785. This region suffered greatly in the Indian wars until the treaty of 1785.

Jesse Hughs acted a conspicuous part against the Indians. He was bred from infancy in the hotbed of Indian warfare, and resided in Clarksburg. He was a light built, spare man, and remarkably active on foot, and from his constant practice of hunting, became one of the best woodsmen and Indian hunters of his day.

About the year 1790, the Indians came secretly upon the settlement at Clarksburg and stole some horses. Next morning at daylight a party of about twenty five men started in pursuit and came on the Indian trail, and judged from its appearance that there were only 8 or 10 of them. The captain and a majority of them, in a hasty council, were for pursuing the trail. Hughs opposed it and advised them to let him pilot them by a near way to the Ohio, and intercept the Indians in their retreat. But this they would not listen to. He showed them the danger of following their trail; and that in that in that case they would be waylaid,—that the Indians would secure a safe position, shoot two or three of them and escape. The commander jealous of Hughs' influence with the party broke up the council by exclaiming: "All the men may follow me—the cowards may go home." He dashed off at full speed. Hughs felt the insult but followed with the rest. The result proved as he had predicted. Two Indians in ambush on the top of a cliff, fired and mortally wounded two of the party in the ravine and escaped. Now convinced of their error, they put themselves under Hughs; but on arriving at the Ohio they found the savages had crossed it. Hughs then got some satisfaction of the captain for his insult to him. He told them he wanted to find out who the cowards were; that if any would go with him, or even one, he would cross the river in the pursuit. They all refused. He then said he would go alone and get a scalp or leave his own with them. Alone he crossed the river, and the next morning came upon their camp. They were all absent hunting except one Indian, who was left to guard the camp. He, unsuspecting danger, was fiddling on some dry bones, and singing, to pass the time, when Hughs crept up and shot him; and with the poor fellows scalp returned to his home, some seventy miles distant, thro the wilderness.

At a time of great danger from the incursions of the Indians in Virginia, when the citizens of the neighborhood were in a fort at Clarksburg, Hughs one morning observed a lad very intently fixing his gun. "Jim," said he, "what are you doing that for?" "I am going to shoot a turkey that I hear gobbling on the hillside," said Jim. "I hear no turkey," said Hughs. "Listen," said Jim; "there, did n't you hear it? Listen again." "Well I'll go and kill it," says Hughs, after hearing it repeated. "No you won't," says Jim, "its my turkey; I heard I first." "Well, but you know I am the best marksman; and besides, I don't want the turkey, you may have it." The lad then agreed to let Hughs go and kill it for him. Hughs went out of the fort on the side that was farthest from the supposed turkey, and taking along the river, went up a ravine and came in on the rear; and, as he expected, he espied an Indian sitting on a chestnut stump, surrounded by by sprouts, gobbling and watching to see if any one would come from the fort to kill the turkey. Hughs crept up behind him, and shot him, before the Indian knew of his approach. He took the scalp and went into the fort, where Jim was waiting for his prize. "There, now," says Jim, "you have let the turkey go. I would have killed it if I had gone."

"No," says Hughs, "I didn't let it go;" and taking out the scalp, threw it down. "There, take your turkey, Jim, I don't want it." The lad was overcome, and nearly fainted, to think of the certain death that he had escaped, purely by the keen perception and good management of Mr Hughs.

The Greenbrier Extension.

There is now throughout Greenbrier and Pocahontas Counties considerable anxiety about a proposed line of road to be built from White Sulphur Spring into Pocahontas County, and north to connect with what is known as the the Dry Fork road now about completed to the Sinks, which is the northernmost extremity of Pocahontas County. There is a corps of engineers at work making surveys. As the meeting point for trains from east to west over the C & O. is about White Sulphur, it is claimed that the proposed line can be so shaped as to make a quick and easy line to Pittsburg, as passengers could be transferred almost without a moments delay from the main line to this branch. Besides the terminal features, there would be an immense freighage gathered from the very start, especially in lumber bark, etc., and which will last many years, as the timber region affected is one of the largest undeveloped in West Virginia. It is stated by those closest to the head of the scheme that the road, if built, will go up Anthony's Creek to Knapps Creek, thence down Knapps Creek by Hunterville to Marlinton, the county seat, thence up Greenbrier River to its head and connect with the Dry Fork road. There are two modes of reaching Knapp's Creek, one up the main Anthony's Creek and the other up the North Fork of Anthony's Creek. The grades are good on both except at the summit which on both routes is a little heavy tho the N. Fork is nearer by several miles.

All along the route from the White to Marlinton there have recently been developed the finest beds of iron and manganese ever found in that quarter of West Virginia, and the timber tho a great part of it is virgin, tho probably not as heavy as at the head of the county on Knapp's Creek from Lockridge's to Marlinton, a distance of ten miles, cuts the mountains at right angles, and by going thro the gap thus made it is closed practically to any competitor. From Marlinton to Traveler's Repose, a distance of 37 miles, the road follows Greenbrier River and the grade no where reaches 16 feet per mile. One little tunnel of a few hundred feet thro one of the spurs of the mountain cuts off a considerable bend in the river, but with this exception the work is light side cutting. One bridge is is said to be contemplated over the river. The road by experts is pronounced one of the best branches ever contemplated by the C. & O., and will be a freight yielder of great value as it is not paralleled by any road. But for the fact that the people of that section have had their hopes of a railway blasted so often, they would now be in fine spirits.—Staunton Spectator and Vindicator.

MR KIPLING was criticised by Canadians for speaking of Canada as "Our Lady of the Snows." In Wee Willie Winkie he refers to the criticism in the following humorous strain.

There was once a small boy of Quebec,
Who was buried in snow to the neck;
When asked "Are you free?"
He replied, "Yes, I is,
But we don't call this cold in Quebec."

Our I's and Other Eyes.

Our I's are just as strong as they were fifty years ago, when we have cause to use them. But we have less cause to praise ourselves, since others do the praising, and we are more than willing for you to see us through other eyes. This is how we look to S. F. Boyer, wholesale and retail druggist, Duluth, Minn., who after a quarter of a century of observation writes:

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than 25 years, both at wholesale and retail, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. I believe Ayer's Sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier that has been introduced to the general public." This, from a man who has sold thousands of dozens of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is strong testimony. But it only echoes popular sentiment the world over, which has "Nothing but words of praise for Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

Sawdust as a Fertilizer.

The Columbus Enquirer Sun says: "The statement made by a gentleman in Alabama that there is wealth for the farmers in the old sawdust piles of the South, if the sawdust be used as a fertilizer, strikes one as being a little improbable. That well rotted sawdust, which has been exposed for years to the elements, might possess some fertilizing properties cannot be denied, but we think it safe to say that as a fertilizer such sawdust would be worth nothing like $20 per ton, as stated in an article clipped from the Montgomery Advertiser and published in another column this morning.

"Many of the experiment stations of the United States have tried sawdust as a fertilizer, and their reports do not set much value upon it. They all declare that its chief value is in increasing the porosity of the soils, thus enabling plants to appropriate the plant foods which the soil contains. Pine straw, wheat or oat straw, leaves, scrapings from the woods, or weeds would no doubt serve this purpose as well as sawdust, and these are often added with profit to the soils from which all the humus has been taken and which naturally tend to run together."

THE Duke of Argyll advocates reading. In a speech the other day he said:

"I am bound to say I never had any other education in my life. I'm a great extent educated myself. I was at neither school nor college, and have very often found that any success I had in speaking in public life and in Parliament was due to my having read what others had not read."

ANDREW PRICE, EDITOR

Marlinton, Friday, Oct. 29, 1897.

THE Board of Agriculture has appointed C. C. Brown Institute Director for the State.

THE coal miners of the Kanawha Valley have failed to come to terms with the operators and the strike still remains on.

ALBERT YOUKE was sentenced by the criminal court of Fayette County to be re-hung on the 12th of November. The prisoner smiled as he was sentenced and said that he would make another escape before the day arrived.

THE Harrisonburg Free Press says: "A monster rattlesnake, five feet and ten inches in circumference, with nineteen rattles and a button, was killed near West Union." This would be a very respectable girth for a cow.

AT the recent meeting of the board of regents of the University an order was made allowing women to enter the preparatory department. This is wrong, for the simple reason that parents will not send young girls to Morgantown to lead independent and unprotected lives, and only those girls who live in Morgantown or have friends there who will care for them, can take advantage of the educational facilities offered by this institution. Any step taken by the board should be for the State at large, and this measure makes the University appear too much like a local school. There is no father who will send his daughter to Morgantown with a gripsack in her hand to hunt up a room to live unprotected by any one, in the way in which it is customary to send a boy. Another move made by the board was changing the school year to four terms of twelve weeks each.

IT is with sincere pleasure that we hear that Mrs Atkinson was virtually acquitted by the jury, after a long and tedious retirement, by seven to five—seven for acquittal. The prosecution was for forgery pure and simple, and when seven are for acquittal it is a virtual acquittal. With the fewest exceptions, the sympathy of the people has been in her ladyship's favor, and that too from the very outset. Were it not for dealing with delicate matters in which we have no concern, we would like to enter somewhat at length upon the history and conduct of this unique trial, the first of its kind in the annals of West Virginia jurisprudence. As it is we think it best to extend our congratulations to Mrs that the attempt has so far failed to convict her of a crime for which we cannot see that she could have any motive whatever. With the Wheeling Intelligencer we would say: "As the wife of the governor of West Virginia Mrs Atkinson has had the profound sympathy of the people of this State from first to last, and they will now rejoice with her that she has been spared the greater humiliation that might have befallen herself and husband."

CHARACTER.

As a man's "life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth," so the higher life of a community has not been attained until the religious element is developed and its genuineness demonstrated by its beneficent fruits. Ragged old Thomas Carlyle was not dealing either in cant or in religious platitudes or speaking professionally, as preachers are sometimes said to do, when he declared that "A man's religion was the chief fact in regard to him —the primary thing and determined all the rest." What is true of the individual is also true of the community, because religion is but another name for the right use of all the faculties, physical, intellectual, and moral, holding them in harmonious balance, developing them to due proportion, freeing them from the blinding power of prejudice, passion, and evil habits, giving them whole-some exercise, training them all to keep step to the music of duty, and inspiring them with an intense and well directed aim for the good of others. Thus writes the Rev Dr Hoge in the Richmond Times.

It is one of the greatest features of the higher order of secular journals that more and more attention seems to be given to the opinions of persons eminent for their piety, eloquence, and personal integrity. Journalism conducted on a plane so elevated will in due time concentrate the support and influence of the genuine piety and intelligent patriotism of our citizenship. It will usher in a better day when religious character will be deemed of equal if not greater importance with whatever may be pertinent to the social, moral, and statesmanship qualifications of all persons.

CHARLES A. DANA DEAD.

The New York Sun of last Monday contains a ten-word notice of the death of its great editor.

"Charles Anderson Dana, Editor of the Sun, died yesterday afternoon."

The first newspaper editor in the land passed away at his home at Glenecove, Long Island, Sunday at 1.20 P. M., aged 78. He had been ill four months with inflamation of the liver.

He was born in New Hampshire in 1819. His boyhood was spent in Buffalo where he worked in a store. He entered Harvard College but his eyesight failing him he was compelled to leave in 1841. Mr Dana joined the staff of the New York Tribune in 1847, and was with that paper until 1862. The extraordinary influence and circulation of that paper during these years was in a great degree due to Mr Dana's genius for journalism. The great struggle of the Tribune under Horace Greely and Dana was not so much for the overthrow of slavery but to prevent its spreading unoccupied territory, and against the acquisition of slave holding territory outside of the Union.

During the first year of the war differences of opinion as to military operations arose between him and Greely, and he resigned from the Tribune. He was immediately appointed to work for the War Department, his province being to supply information of what was transpiring at the front. In 1863 he was appointed Assistant Secretary of War. He was in the saddle at the front in the campaigns of Virginia, Northern Mississippi, Vicksburg, and the rescue of Chatanooga. By his reports the President and Cabinet had vivid pen pictures of the actual events of the campaigns.

In 1868, he formed a stock company and began the publication of the Sun. The Sun has always been a democratic newspaper, independent and outspoken in the expression of its opinions respecting the affairs of either party. The word "democratic" as used here must be taken in its literal meaning and not as pertaining to the political party.

He fought the South as few fought while the war was on, but when it was over did all that man could do to reconcile the combating elements.

So great a man was he that we can almost say that his place cannot be filled.

He has published several books but almost his entire fame is due to his ability as a newspaper man. He was pre-eminently honest, and his greatest fault was his intolerance for those whose interest or whose different judgement caused them to take other views of public matters. He showed no mercy to those who he considered in the wrong, and made no distinction between the man honestly mistaken and he who knowingly espoused the wrong cause. Ignorance excused no one with Charles A. Dana; he was as indelible as the law, and was a safe man to follow.

AMERICA has the fastest trains, but England has the longest runs made daily without stops. The longest run in the world is a daily train between Paddington and Exeter, 194 miles, the best average being 53.4 miles per hour. American trains have run from New York to Albany, 140 miles, in 135½ minutes. The Lake Shore Special covered 510.1 miles at the rate of 52.6 miles an hour, deducting stops, and reached prodigious speed of 62.3 miles an hour.

SOME one has put out the report that Colonel Ingersoll has seen the error of his way and will soon receive the Bible. Whereupon some one facetiously remarks that it is a prime moral certainty that unless he has seen the error of his way of speaking and writing the Bible will not endorse him.

STATE NEWS.

HUNTINGTON has a mayor only 29 years of age; Fairmont one 30 years, and Grafton one 31.

JOSEPH COSTELLO, a youth of nineteen, committed suicide at West Union, Monday, because a young lady would not go driving with him. He evidently had more wheels than those on his buggy.

DICK VANDIVER, of Huntington, took morphine Wednesday night, with suicidal intent, and died Thursday afternoon. His wife suicided almost a year ago, and Vandiver has been despondent since that time.

IN the Circuit Court of Ritchie County on Monday, in a case involving the question, Judge Freer decided that boards of education and church trustees have power to lease school and church property for oil purposes.

IRWIN BROWN, the murderer of Emanuel Crull, was caught by the sheriff of Ritchie County in the act of sawing his way out of jail Tuesday night. He attacked the officer, but was felled by a well directed blow, and will hereafter wear handcuffs so long as he remains in the Ritchie jail.

JOHN VANCE, of Logan County, shot and istantly killed James Thomson, a neighbor, Thursday. The two had been the best of friends until recently, when they quarreled over the division of a corn crop. The murder took place in Thomson's yard. Mrs Thomson ran to protect her husband, and it is alleged that one of the assassin's bullets penetrated her side, causing probably a fatal wound. Vance is a son-in-law of "Devil Anse Hatfield."

CHARLES A. SWEARINGON, who left with the Camden boys, in July, for the Klondike gold fields, returned to Parkersburg Tuesday morning. The Camden boys will also return. They got only as far as St Michaels and found it impossible to get up the Yukon before spring; hence he concluded to come home and take a fresh start next March. Mr Swearingon states that he traveled over 15,000 miles since his departure from Parkersburg.

THE inauguration on Wednesday of Dr Jerome Hall Raymond as President of the State University, was witnessed by over a thousand strangers besides the citizens of Morgantown, and students of the University. The ceremonies were opened by an address by Hon Geo. C. Sturgiss, president of the Board of Regents; Rev F. M. Wood, of Martinsburg, spoke on the old Monongalia Academy, the forerunner of the University; Judge Marmaduke Dent, the oldest alumnus, spoke for the alumni; Hon. John W. Mason responded on behalf of the agricultural college, which was merged into the University; State Superintendant of Schools, J. Russell Trotter, spoke well on the relation of the public schools to the University; Chancellor Holland, of the Western University of Pennsylvania, responded wittily on "Our Rival." The crowning address of the occasion was that Dr. William Rainy Harper, of the University of Chicago, on "Some University Ideals." Telegrams were read from Hon William L. Wilson, President Adams, of the University of Wisconsin, Senators Faulkner and Elkins, Dr John R. Thomson, of Brooklyn, ex-president of the University, and Col. Dudly Evans, of New York.

Accident in Wyoming.

From the Sheridan Journal we copy the following account of a fatal accident to a son of Wilson Nottingham, of Big Horn, Wyoming. Wilson Nottingham is a son of Henry Nottingham and a nephew of Addison and Harvey Nottingham, of Glade Hill, this county. He is a prosperous farmer and stock raiser:

On Friday evening Ratio M., the second son of Mr and Mrs W. W. Nottingham, of Big Horn, met with a severe accident that resulted in his death, on Sunday morning. The circumstances surrounding the sad affair were as follows: Ratio and his younger brother were riding home from school on the same horse. They were riding pretty fast when they came to the Alliance ditch. The side of the ditch where they crossed was very stony, causing the horse to fall. In the fall Ratio had his arm, face and one leg badly bruised, the worst injury was to his stomach, which was hit by the horn of the saddle. The younger brother escaped without injury. Ratio was helped home by his father and the usual remedies applied. On Saturday morning he seemed to be getting along very well, and was able to be up and around part of the time. About midnight Saturday he complained of pains in his stomach and his parents applied hot cloths, which seemed to relieve him. At five o'clock in the morning he wanted to get up and did so for a few minutes. He then returned to his bed, and his father noticed that he was breathing shorter and that his mouth was filling up. He went to him and raised his head a little so that he could free his mouth, when all at once he fell back on his pillow, dead. At the time of his death he was 16 years, 1 month and 13 days old.

Honorable Mention for Marlinton Men.

Pittsburg Dispatch: West Virginia University shut Westminster out in a one-sided, one exciting football game this afternoon, (Oct 14). There were two touchdowns made in the first half, one by Noble and the other by the "black haired" Whitman, who relieved his brother at half back. Westminster made no gains to speak of until the latter part of the second half, after Yeager had made a touchdown from fall, running entirely around Westminster's line. These gains were just after the second kick-off of the ball, the ball being near the goal, but Yeager got it, and his awful punt put it beyond any scheme of redemption, and time was called. Osborne, Donley, Smith, and Whitham were brilliant; all were good, and Yeager was the bright, particular star.

THE following correspondence between the New York Herald and the member of the Democratic national committee for West Virginia explains itself:

New York, Oct. 13, 1897.

John T. McGraw, Grafton, W. Va.

Will you kindly wire the Herald, at our expense, a brief opinion on Governor Boies' statement that "the Chicago Platform has had its day in court before the tribunal of last resort."

"New York Herald."

Grafton, W. Va., Oct. 13, 1897.

New York Herald, New York City.

Responding to your telegram: I do not concur in the opinion expressed by Gov. Boies, of Iowa, that "the Chicago Platform has had its final day in court." I do not believe the American people will, without another and a supreme effort, surrender the government of the constitution to the arbitrary action of the courts; or permit it to be diverted from a government by separate and coordinate branches into "a government by injunction." The Chicago Platform should survive if it possessed no other merit than its declaration on this subject.

ERRATUM: For notice in court proceedings of last week of "State vs Eustice Brindle and Walter Clark, judgment confessed," read State vs Eustice Brindle and Walter Calvin, etc.

READERS of State papers may have noticed an account of the killing of a policeman in Bluefield who was making an arrest. Word has come through private channels that the policeman was Allen Brown, a brother of Professor C. A. Brown, who was once principal of the Hillsboro Academy.

THE fever that has been prevalent in Marlinton this summer seems to have died down; only one new case for several weeks. There has been thirteen cases of fever in the town this summer. All over the county there were a number of cases and altogether Pocahontas, which is usually so free of fever, seems to have had its full share this year.

THE Marlinton football field seems to be bearing fruit this year, having two players on the State University team, Lon Yeager, the star full back, and Jim Smith, the substantial right guard. In a recent game in Pittsburg against the Pittsburg Athletic Club, the University was defeated by one touchdown, only. In this game Lew Yeager had his nose hurt so badly that he could not go on with the game.

S. B. ANDERSON, a stock dealer of Greenbrier, loaded a train of cattle at Fort Spring last week. He had bought them in Greenbrier and Monroe. Two engines were required to move the train over the Alleghany. 200 head were billed to Gilmore and averaged 1546 pounds. In addition to his export cattle, he had as good a car-load of two-year-old heifers as was ever raised in the State. They were of the polled angus stock and averaged 1120 lbs.

IN spite of the fact that game is unusually abundant the game law seems to be working admirably. At least no game is exposed for sale in stores for sale. A hunter complained the other day that he had not the rights of a hawk or a fox which could take all the game they could take all the game they could catch without fear of the law. He suggested a small bounty on the scalps of such animals as prey upon game would do more than anything else to increase the game.

THE great dearth in cattle has caused a good many Tuckahoe cattle to be introduced into the county, and the difference in size and general make-up to our native cattle is very remarkable. One peculiarity is that the sons of these cattle are four years old they pass for yearlings, and cast Virginia stock raisers speak seriously of three-year-old yearlings, two-year-old yearlings, etc. One buyer here bought a drove at $24 per head and killed one of the best ones for beef. It netted 264 pounds. Another drove of 30 head, 5 heifers and 25 steers, of all ages, averaged 1300 lbs gross. He heard of one stockman who has taken 50 head of these cattle to keep for a year at 75 cents per months, less the interest at $25 per head.

ALL who were awake in Marlinton Saturday night about twelve o'clock were treated to the sounds of a pronunciamento and war whoop of the different members of a boy, could tell just what was transpiring. First could be heard the sound of an excited "mum dog" running on a hot trail and then for many in the rear up which the noise had been heralded could be heard the yells of the hunters name up. Presently the measured strokes of the axe could be heard and then "the fall of the crashing forest" the treasure—three live bar. A hunter gave a half cry and then was a scramble of the flying of the dog scattered with his adversary. A pile of pine —the axe has evidently fallen the dog and bear. Now the hunters and dog open with half cry on the chase and the noise of the hunt passed off to take a rest in a moment the dog has caught his prey and the hunters give one wild whoop and we all go to enjoy agreeable greeting the hunters some a hearty cheer from the

THE compulsory school law comes near being an enactment that does not enact than any law ever passed by any legislature. By it any excuse almost will make it legal to miss school, and the parent has only to send one half-day per week to keep the statute from running against him.

DIED: At the home of her stepfather, Rice Graves, Fidelis Trone, a young colored girl, aged about twenty. She contracted fever while working at Marlinton, and was sick several weeks. She had nearly recovered from its effects, when a relapse occurred, of which she died. Her funeral was largely attended at the colored burying ground, last Friday.

AT a recent term of the circuit court in Nicholas County, a prisoner was found guilty of a felony, but before Judge Bennett could pass sentence upon him he broke jail. Later he was captured and placed in the Nation jail, and Judge Bennett called a special term of court to sentence him. When Judge Bennett arrived in Sutton the prisoner had again broken jail, and is still at large.

WE regret to be informed that Rev F. P. Sydenstricker, who has filled the Presbyterian pulpit in this place for the past five years, is to sever his connections with the church here and leave for Greenbrier County in a few days. The delicate state of his health, as well as that of Mrs Sydenstricker, makes a change imperative, and upon the advice of physicians Mr Sydenstricker will forego further pulpit work, for awhile at least. He will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday evening.—Glenville Pathfinder.

Tan Yard Robbed.

Last Friday night as some young men were going home from church at Academy, they noticed a man a ting suspiciously, near the road at a haystack. They chased him and he threw down a load he was carrying. On being cornered he stood the men off for awhile with a knife but finally surrendered On examining the pack which he had abandoned it was found to contain leather and sheepskins from McCarty's tan-yard to the value of about $15. The man carrying it was Jacob Simmons, of Williams River Mountain, an ex-Confederate soldier, and a prosperous farmer. Ellis McCarty the owner of the tanyard was called and identifying the goods had a warrant issued for his apprehension. He was bailed to appear before the grandjury in the sum of $500.

The offense is that of breaking into a house other than that used as a dwelling with intent to commit larceny and is punishable by confinement in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than ten years.

The affair has occasioned a great sensation. The friends of the accused have always regarded him as a blackguard, and those who are acquainted with him know that he has exhibited that incendiate tendency to acquire, incollect to boast, that marks the kleptomaniac. He has been known to appropriate small articles at the store, which was done to that end by way of the kleptomaniac's gold brick which changed for in his hill. Unfortunately for him when a kleptomaniac appropriates an object in a manner which brings the matter in a court of law, it is treated as a theft. There is a prevalent opinion in favor of the opinion, that the propensity to acquire may become so irresistible, and the will so impaired, that the opposition is involuntary, and the perpetrator irresponsible. If anyone who has been acquainted with the accused on the subject of kleptomania, they will see that he shows many signs of the existence of the same deep seated malady.

ELMER JACKSON.

He Has Reached the Horse Stage. Caught By a Shepherd Dog.

After an absence of several months, Elmer Jackson, the typical bad boy and the moral lesson which anxious mothers hold up to their children of tender years, appeared in Marlinton riding a horse that he had borrowed without leave of the owner thereof, and sporting a heavy freize overcoat which he had taken in the same offhand way.

He is a colored youth between fifteen and sixteen years old, large for his age, belongs to a very decent family of negroes, and has been a natural born appropriator ever since he showed signs of individuality. His father wore himself out trying to reform him with hickory withes and spared not the rod, but Jackson was, evidently, hopelessly and irretrievably damaged in the making. He has a very repulsive face, and altogether he looks like a very bad boy.

Jackson has been working for William Freeman, who lives about 36 miles from Marlinton on Buffalo Mountain. Ed. Thomson, a neighbor, had a horse in Freeman's pasture. Jackson took the horse and rode it to his father's home in the Brush, where he delighted to show his young colored friends how it could travel. Friday morning he took it to Huntersville and sent it back to Green Bank by the mail carrier. At the time he took the horse he took a heavy freize overcoat which he did not send back. Bud Burner, constable, and Samuel Sheets, deputy sheriff, arrived in Marlinton Friday evening hot on his trail. He saw them coming and took a bee-line for cover. That night he slept in Dr Cunningham's stable. The next morning he ventured into the store of J. D. Pullins & Co. A good-natured darkey, Will Wheeler, told him to skip out just before the officers arrived, and he raced down by the residence of J. H. Patterson.

When Wheeler gave the boy the word he did not know what an "accessory after the fact" was; but Burner was naturally riled at having his plans set at nought by this darkey, and he arrested him. Wheeler was surprised and astonished, for he has a most abnormal respect for the law. Justice Bird held him on his own recognizance to appear before the grand jury. Wheeler was no relation and had no interest in the matter whatever.

Jackson remained at large until about dusk when John Maupin went to his corn-field to get a bag of corn, and found him sitting on the fence. He entered into conversation with him and presently Dave Anderson came up. Maupin said: "Dave, we might as well arrest this fellow and get the reward." Jackson suspected and started to run away, when Maupin's dog went in pursuit and fastened in his clothes from behind. While the darkey was trying to kick the dog loose he was collared by the two men. On being arrested he was sent into the house at McLaughlin House and produced the large, frieze, forty-cent overcoat to which he had clung with such tenacity.

Jackson has been involved in a number of stealing scrapes heretofore, and perhaps it would be well for him to be confined in a place of safety, to afford protection to other peoples' property. One of his feats was to take a silver watch from an old soldier named Chalkers, the watch hanging at his right hand, and the darkey stealing it while the old man bent over his work.

Waiving examination, he was committed to jail to await the action of the grand jury.

His family are inclined to resent his capture by means of a dog and claim that he was hunted down like a beast.

More About the New Railroad.

*The daily papers of last Tues*day make this announcement: The construction of a railroad from Point Marion to White Sulphur Springs has been commenced, fifteen miles of the road being already built. It is reported that an extension will be built into Pennsylvania from Point Marion. The Dry Forks road, the terminus of which is at Parsons, has been purchased by the new company which is controlled by the Vanderbilt interests. The proposed route is two hundred miles long and extends through the central part of the State and touches a large tract of undeveloped mineral and timber land.—Monroe Watchman.

Monroe's Representative in the Klondike.

It may not be generally known that Monroe County has a representative in faraway Alaska among the thousands of gold-seeking pilgrims who are moving on the Klondike. Such is the case, however, and Mr Lanning E. Ballard, son of John C. Ballard, Esq., is the young man who is braving the privations and perils of that frozen country to seek his fortune in the arctic gold fields. Mr Ballard, who for some years has resided in Missouri, left three months ago on this formidable journey, and the last letter written to his father indicates that the plucky young fortune hunter has already covered about 1,000 of the 1,500 miles which seperate the Klondike from the waters of the Pacific Ocean. His company numbers 18 men. They are well equipped for the hazardous undertaking and have provisions for 15 months. Their outfit and supplies are carried on pack mules, horses and oxen, and their progress is necessarily slow. They are now across White Pass and have probably encamped for the winter on the headwaters of Lewis River which flows into Bennett Lake. They are prepared to construct satisfactory winter quarters which they will not leave until next April. They have 500 miles to cover before they reach Dawson City, which is at the mouth of the mouth of the Klondike, but they expect to hasten their speed next spring by using the river. Mr. Ballard says that the White Pass trail is strewn with the carcasses of dead horses, and a number of men have lost their lives in the attempt to make the trip. Nearly all of those who have come to grief are men from cities who have had no experience with horses, and have come without proper preparation or any real knowledge of what they are undertaking. Mr Ballard has many personal friends in Monroe and all of us unite in the wish that he may triumph over the difficulties which confront him and come back with the great fortune which his pluck and daring deserve.—Monroe Watchman.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Tee proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

A SERMONETTE.

And as thy servant was busy here and there he was gone.—1 Kings 20: 40.

Here is something very impressive and conveys a moral that claims special attention in the busy, exciting times in which we are now living. There is so much to attract attention that it seems well nigh impossible not to be anxious about too many things, and there is serious danger that we the people of this wonderful generation may be busy here and there, the principal thing that makes our lives worth living may get away from us.

So far as we can learn anything of former times, there was never a period when people lived and moved as fast as they do now in this year 1897. It is a time of hurry and bustle, everything is moving at a rush, and in a peculiar sense all is becoming new, as the old ways of doing things are passing out of use. Question after question is asked, and yet those who make these serious and all important inquiries are in too much of a hurry to give time or wait for well considered answers. Patiently considered reforms seem too slow, and when attempts are made to hurry up reforming measures revolutions are provoked. After much excitement and confusion, reaction.

When reaction due to hurrying up matters sets in then there is a feeling that the last state is worse than the first, and a hopeless state of mind come over the people and they are ready to go at something else in the same rushing way. It is all important to remember that the Supreme Ruler of the universe is never in a hurry.

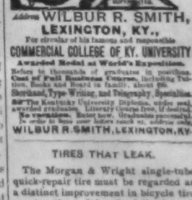
What this person lacked was not energy or industry, for he was busy here and there; but he failed to go about his work in a considerate, intelligent manner. Now if we would be admonished by this warning example of the failure made by the person busy here and there without system and due consideration, let us follow the pattern placed before us in the methods used by our divine Master and Leader He undertook the reformation or improvement of our planet, this it, possibly, to reveal to all other worlds the manifold wisdom of God. Tho such an undertaking far surpasses all powers of human apprehension, and might well cause the bravest of the brave to shrink from its performance, yet our Lord is never in a hurry,—nothing loud or rushing about his methods. He is ever calm and considerate. Daily he goes about his Father's business; now conversing all day by the sea of Galilee with some obscure fishermen, then spending long periods praying in lonely places in the midst of mountain solitudes. With uniform tranquility and peace in his methods, not by crying in the streets,—but in quietness and humility he did his work toward reforming our world, and through it manifest to all worlds the blessed benefits of his work.

In the effort to think over what he did and counting it up we realize that Jesus Christ did more work than any man who ever lived in our world. So from his way of service we are impressed with the idea that in religious service from soul to soul nothing is more effective as special personal attention such as those alone can give who are so busy here and there in the attempt to do things with a rush.

It will be useful also for those who wish to have something to show for their life's work to be impressed with the conviction that science is not an enemy to true religion but in one of its best friends. By science is meant the proper use of the reasoning powers so as to use those intellectual faculties in a wise manner so as to apply the right means to the attainment of the right ends and purposes of our lives while we are alive. It is one of the hopeful omens of good that Christian thinkers and workers are in many influential instances disposed to apply the well tried methods of science to their department of knowledge and sphere of christian service. But let none of these thinkers and workers be too busy here and there to overlook this all-important fact that beyond science and Bible knowledge is the heart of consecration for their fellow beings, which those who would successfully do the work assigned them must possess. Without this consecration, presenting themselves as living sacrifices, they will lose the whole object of their lives, just like the person referred to in the text who was busy here and there.

Moreover, pious people ought to meditate on this pathetic incident and see to it that the things about which we may be so busy should be things worth doing. This is what the man in the parable neglected to do, and thereby he missed seeing the relative importance of the things he had to do, and so missed doing the most important thing in his line of duty, and his diligent doing was worse than a failure and led to ruin. Now the one thing we ought to do above all others, according to Christ's expressed opinion, is to seek the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and every thing else worth having will be added thereunto.

Now should the lesson of the parable be considered by some business man who is busy here and there getting money, we hope that like the king he will not be heavy or displeased.



Should the lesson of the parable fall under the notice of some lawyer whose main thought while busy here and there is the law, we hope that he will not be heavy and displeased like the king.

Should some physician have his attention called to this parable while he is busy here and there with patients and their medicines, we trust he will not be heavy and displeased like the king.

Should some worthy citizen reflect on this parable at some moment snatched from being entirely absorbed by wordly avocations, we pray he may not be heavy and displeased like the king

We are told the king was heavy and displeased and would not be admonished but persevered in being busy herr and there to the neglect of his duty to God, and with him life was a failure of failures.

TIRES THAT LEAK.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire construction. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with plugs, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the punctures, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 3, the repair

No. 3.

No. 4.

strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the punctures, as in cut No. 4.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not to pinch. This is an important feature in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "leak like a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Everybody knows how tough bicycle tires are. Morgan & Wright tires will not have sidings; they guarantee. This is due to the fabric.

Any boy bicycle dealer whether other tires are sold or not, Morgan & Wright tires are. Ask him what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are supplied from all dealers, or the factory by express, prepaid, on receipt of price, $1.50 each or any of the Morgan & Wright line repair strips, issued by the principal riders.

M. & W. When you have a puncture, get right off. Riding a tire flat, if it has a tack or nail in it, may damage it considerably.

An Indian Loon Hunt.

Early in the summer, when ice was moving out of the Nepigon River, which flows into Lake Superior at Red Rock, several hundred Chippewa Indians were gathered about the Hudson Bay post near that place.

One day when a loon, or great northern diver, was seen in the lakes opposite the post, word was quickly passed among the listless loungers, and the village was instantly on the move. Birch-bark canoes were slid into the water and a few of the braves took their squaws with them, while others went alone. By one impulse they shot out into the lake to chase the sharp-eyed loon.

The bird, seeing the approach of so many canoes, dove out of sight. That was the signal for a spurt on the part of the canoeists, and they scattered widely, according to each paddler's guess of where the loon would come up.

Having made a long swim under the water, he rose far to the south of where most of the fifty canoes had run, but as old men and his old squaw were not far from the beautiful black and white head that suddenly arose. The old man tried to get a shot at the loon with his bow and blunt wooden arrow—the only weapons the Indians used in this chase—but the loon was too quick for him, and went down again.

All the canoes now rushed that way, the men yelling as they forced their light barks through the water. The old man and his shrivelled squaw were foremost. His muscular frame looked tense as he rapidly wielded his paddle.

Spreading out a little near where they deemed the loon would rise, a dozen of the Chippewas waited with bows in hand and blunt arrows strung—waited with the alertness of cats watching for a mouse. But the loon fooled them by coming up far west of where it was expected. The canoe nearest him was that of a fourteen year old boy, who with two or three others put in useless shots.

Again a noisy rush was made towards where the bird was expected to reappear, every Indian yelling a deep, sharp "Wah! Wah!" The few squaws in the canoes aided their husbands in paddling, and propelled the canoes when their dusky lords dropped their paddles and seized their bows.

This time the loon, fully alive to the danger he was in, took a wonderfully long swim, coming up far from most of the canoes, and at such a distance from the nearest that he had a moment or two of breathing before taking the next lip. This would have been his chance to fly had he possessed the power of rising quickly from the water like his relative the wild goose. But loons cannot ascend quickly from the surface, and so when pursued, always try to escape by swimming and diving.

As if by coommon consent the canoes now spread out more widely to surround the strong and agile bird. He came to the surface with in a few feet of two or three canoes and a quick shot hit him in the neck, but it glanced off as from a twig, and down he went again, the scattered canoes dashing towards the spot once more and halting to scan the water for his appearance.

This time the dive was much shorter; the bird was losing wind possibly the blunt arrow had hurt him. A half-dozen arrows "spudded" into the water about him but not one hit him.

The chase was becoming more and more exciting. At each appearance of the gamy loon a yell and a rush would occur; the canoes sped converging till it seemed that a half-dozen of them must collide, but always the adroit paddlers sheered aside from destruction. The spray from the frantic paddles covered the crews with water, but neither bucks nor squaws gave heed to that.

The loon would come up now in front, then back of those ahead; his lives became shorter and shorter; he was evidently in distress; sometimes he showed his white breast with pity and wished the bird might escape, but the laughing, shouting Indians gave no evidence of any such feeling.

In all the chase the old man and his squaw alone handled their canoe admirably. The squaw, a perfect steed of the screaming redskins, the nearly exhausted loon popped up his head beside this canoe. By a quick clutch of his paddle the old squaw caught him.

A wild shout of triumph arose from the old man as his wife clung to the struggling, flapping captive. The whole crowd joined in his shout and swung the head wobble the chorus, while the braves upstood a bit crestfallen that women should capture the bird.

Once ashore, the lucky squaw knowing that her lord would not venture her one defiance from the disappointed braves, left the loon with her husband, and quietly, pr with a certain proud air of victory sought her lodge.

The loon was now the center of attraction, being held captive by one leg until the old man could get his knife after having secured safety. He after another would lift up the great bird by the neck and wing and, pushing "Wah! Wah!" At the last the old man took it to his canoe, where it was showered by the squaws with presents of food, etc., for dividing it out by the Hudson Bay Company factor.

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW

The frames are made in one piece of steel and so without end all strain without bending or breaking in the harrow are so spaced that they will not clog. Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The teeth are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame by bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth and about the bar gives the greatest amount of pulverizing and straining the balls, and because of these features are stronger than used on any other harrow. The depth of work can be regulated while the team is moving. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow runs.

The Pocahontas Times.

GEORGE M. PULLMAN, the Chicago Millionaire, died October 19, suddenly, of heart trouble. He established a town by means of his car works. The town of Pullman now has a population of 11,000. His wealth has been estimated at $10,000,000.

THE special grand jury called for Kanawha County returned six felony indictments and five for misdemeanor. George Chilton, Thomas C. Hall, Edward A. Botkin, and Benjamin C. Hall are indicted jointly for a misdemeanor,—conspiring to obtain exclusive control of the retail liquor business of Charleston. George Chilton and Thomas C. Hall, misdemeanor, for attempting to bribe a councilman; E. A. Botkin, same offense; James L. Cook, indictment for false swearing (a misdemeanor), charged with having sworn falsely sworn when taking oath as a juror in the McDonald case, recently, that he had not made up or expressed an opinion in the case; Andrew C. Blair, late prosecuting attorney, misdemeanor found for withholding executions against convicted persons, for a consideration, and compromising fines, etc. Indictments for felony were found against four school trustees for receiving money from a teacher to get him the school.

LEWISBURG voted herself a set of $13,500 waterworks, and now it would seem from an able exposition of the case by Major John W. Harris, in the Independent, that the town has acted hastily in the matter, and that to pump water from the Greenbrier River, the only available source, will cost more than all the other expenses of the town together. Water must necessarily come high when it has to be hoisted five hundred feet up a West Virginia hill-side. In fact it would seem that it would be almost as easy to move Lewisburg to the Greenbrier as to take the river to Lewisburg. The scheme seems hardly practicably, for a town of 1,000 people, even though it be as wealthy as Lewisburg. The town does not promise to become great while the bonds mature, for this is the only town in the United States that has not become greater or less within the past fifty years. The idea of a pumping station on the Greenbrier,, costing several thousand dollars per year, is a big thing for Lewisburg to undertake to support.

SUICIDE IN EXTREMIS.

On Tuesday, October 18, Mrs Atherton Blight, quite recently a society leader of New York, was found dead in her room, from a pistol shot. Mrs Blight's daughter was married a few months ago to W. P. Thomson, a son of the late Colonel Wm. P. Thomson, so widely known in our county during the war. This is the published account of the affair:

Newport, R. I.—It developed today that the death of Mrs Atherton Blight, the former society leader, who died Tuesday was by suicide.

She had been sick for fifteen years, and for a year or more her sufferings had been intense. Mrs Blight longed for the end and after many weeks of patience, when relief in a natural manner was about to come, alcohol control of her mind and shot herself. Her disease was consumption with all its horrors.

Mrs Blight's nurse had gone to the kitchen to prepare her breakfast and she was alone. No report of a pistol appears to have been heard, but when Mr Blight came out of the room a few minutes after the departure of the nurse, he found Mrs Blight lifeless on the bed and a pistol at her side.

Every effort was made to suppress the facts, but under the circumstances, no doubt, that Mrs Blight would be slaughtered for her sel but her friends among the cottagers who were acquainted with her long illness sympathized with her so deeply that not a word of reproach has been heard.

It is said that she would not have lived more than 24 hours, and that for more than a day her existence had been nothing but a struggle to escape the horrors of the end. It is said that the family have also got possession of a pistol in the house.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

Andrew Edmiston.—One of the Remarkable Pioneer Citizens of Pocahontas County.

Andrew Edmiston, Esq., late of the Lower Levels, is the subject of these notes making up this biographic paper. His wife was Mary (Polly) Gilliian, daughter of James Gilliian, near Falling Spring upper Greenbrier County. Early in the century Mr Edmiston settled near Locust on the farm now owned by George Callison, Esq.

James Gilliian, when far advanced in years, married Mrs Edmiston the mother of Andrew Edmiston, an l thus became his step-father as well as father-in-law, a relationship so unique as to challenge a parallel in the history of Pocahontas intermarriages.

Mr and Mrs Andrew Edmiston were the parents of five sons and four daughters. Lydia, Jane, Martha, and Mary were their daughters; the sons were Mathew, James, George, Andrew Jackson, and William.

Lydia Edmiston was married to Mr Richard McNeel, a grandson of John McNeel, the original settler of the Upper Levels, and lived near Mill Point on the place now held by the Hon. W. T. Beard, whose wife, Mrs Mary Beard, is her only surviving child. C. E. Beard and Lee Beard are her grandsons.

Jane Edmiston became Mrs Abram Jordan, mentioned elsewhere as having gone West. So far as known to the writer she is now living in Kansas with her daughter Mrs William Renick.

Martha Edmiston married Franklin Jordan and settled in Missouri, where she died leaving no surviving children.

Mary Emmiston was an invalid all of her life, and never married. She went with her brother George to Kansas.

Mathew Edmiston married Mrs Minerva Bland, in Weston, West Virginia, and settled there. His name appears in the history of our State as one of the most distinguished of our native born public characters. In V. A. Lewis' History and Government of West Virginia mention is made of this distinguished man as follows:

"Judge Edmiston was born September 9. 1814, at Little Levels, Pocahontas County, now West Virginia, where after receiving a common school education he was admitted to the bar in 1835. Four years after he removed to Lewis County, which later he represented in both branches of the General Assembly of Virginia. In 1852 he was chosen a judge of the circuit court, in which position he continued until 1860. He was elected to a seat in the Constitutional Convention of 1872, but because of ill-health did not qualify. He was appointed a judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals in 1886, but one year before his death. Judge Edmiston died June 29, 1887, at his home in Weston, Lewis county."

This historical notice has with it a portrait of this distinguished jurist and statesman. [page 239.]

James Edmiston married Miss Mary Hill, daughter of Thomas Hill, near Hillsboro, a son of Richard Hill, the pioneer. He lived a number of years near Mill Point, on the farm now held by C. Edgar Beard. Mr Edmiston was a member of the Pocahontas Court and for years was prominent in county affairs. He went West late in life. Mrs Minerva Beard, of Huntersville, is his daughter.

George Edmiston married Miss Nancy Callison, relict of Isaac Callison, son of James Callison, one of the pioneers of Locust, and a daughter of John Jordan, and lived many years at the homestead. He was a busy, enterprising citizen, and was engaged in many business enterprises with the late Colonel Paul McNeel. He finally moved to Kansas, where his family mostly reside.

Andrew Jackson Edmiston married Rebecca Edmiston, a daughter of James Edmiston, son of William Edmiston, brother of Andrew Edmiston. After the decease of her husband Mrs Rebecca Edmiston became the wife of Jackson Jones, of Nicholas County, West Virginia.

William Edmiston, the youngest of Andrew Edmiston's sons, spent some time with Judge Edmiston, at Weston, where he attended school. He then went several terms to the Rev M. D. Dunlap, principal of the Pocahontas Academy at Hillsboro. When he attained his majority he started for Missouri with Anthony C. Jordan. While on a steamer in the Missouri waters he was seized with cholera and died on the boat. The towns were quarantined in a very rigid manner and all landing was prohibited. Hence the crew were compelled to bury their dead passenger in the sand at a lonely, uninhabited spot not very remote from St. Charles, Missouri. His friend Jordan went ashore to assist in the burial, but would not return to the boat, and finished his journey to Daviess County on foot, after successfully eluding the quarantine guards by keeping away from the public routes of travel.

The writer is mainly indebted to the retentive memory with which the venerable James McCollam is endowed for most of the particulars used in illustrating the family history of Andrew Edmiston. The sketch now in hand illustrates some of the possibilities in the reach of such youth as perseveringly pursue a high aim and spare no honorable efforts to realize the fruits of noble endeavors. We are what we make ourselves.

In his youth and early manhood Andrew Edmiston seems to have had a consuming passion for athletic exercises, boxing, wrestling, and feats of muscular endurance. There was living at the time one Thomas Johnson, near the head of Stony Creek, who claimed to be the champion hard-hitter of all that region. He heard of young Edmiston's exploits as an athlete, and these exploits created some doubt as to which was the "best man"; and to settle the question the ambitious Stony Creek athlete sent a challenge to the champion of the Lower Levels that if he would meet him he would find out that the he might be the best the Levels could show, that he would soon find himself nowhere on Stony Creek if he just dared to show himself up there. This fired young Edmiston and made him as hot as the furnace we read of in Daniel. He may have sought rest but he did not find any that night, and so he set out by the light of the morning stars for West Union.

He walked from his home, near Locust, to John Smith's, head of Stony Creek, fifteen or more miles, before breakfast, to dispute the question of "best man" with Tom Johnson on his own Stony Creek ground. Without stopping for rest or breakfast he sailed into Johnson, tooth, fist, and toenail. In the first round Johnson landed a terrific blow on Edmiston's shoulder that dislocated Edmiston's arm, and yet he continued the contest until he saw his opportunity and overpowered Johnson until he called out enough!

John Smith then took charge of the victor—the new "best man" of Stony Creek and the Levels—and gave him his breakfast, and by noon he was back at Locust. Andrew Edmiston felt the effects of that dislocation all of his subsequent life. Slight exertion would ever after make his injured arm fly out of place at the shoulder.

In his later years he professed a change of heart and became a member of the M. E. Church. His sincerity was respected by all who knew him best and regarded genuine.

Some years before his decease his health was greatly impaired, and he became a great sufferer from nervous depression. While in one of the gloomy spells occasioned by his ill-health it was recommended by some physicians to try the effects of a ducking in the river. The doctor was of the opinion that the shock and struggle would break the "spell" and be of decided benefit. Thereupon a plan was arranged to have him go with a party of friends to Seebert Gibson's, over the Greenbrier, to eat lunch, and collect them be called into take a little snack and hurry him

Jim Scott, one of the strongest men and best swimmers; was engaged to upset the canoe and take Mr Edmiston out of the river before anything serious could happen him in the water. Mr Edmiston went along to see the fun the party proposed to have at Oldham's. He dismounted near the bank of the river and crossed in a canoe as it was rather deep to ford.

Things became so interesting and pleasant at Oldham's that Mr Edmiston was forgotton, and when they came to look for him to return home he was not to be found. Of course the party was much alarmed, but when they went to where the canoe had been tied up they saw it on the other side of the river and their patient on his horse greatly amused at the idea of their having to get over the deep water as best they could. Scott, however, came in very well. He swam the river, brought the canoe over, and helped the party across. Mr Edmiston in the meantime galloped home. It was concluded the next time he had a spell to let him have it out, for it certainly did n't hurt him much. Some thought it might be well for the party to have some such spells before they would be up with him.

When the dying day came when he was to pass over to the bright forever, it was found he had nothing to do but to die. God had not cast him off in the time of old age nor forsaken him when his strength failed, as he seemed to fear so much when depression of spirits or despondency afflicted our kind old friend. At evening time it was light with this venerable man, and he could realize the sweet power and significance of words like these: "I will go in the strength of the Lord God; I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only.—Psalm lxxi. 16.

W. T. P.

VINCE. BOND DEAD.

Alfred Vincent Bond, the subject of this, was born at Brushy Run, Pendleton County, September 29, 1880. The quietness that marked his boyhood was exemplified in the young man of 17 summers. When he became old enough to attend school he was earnest, thoughtful, and obedient. He was so apt that study to him seemed a pleasure instead of a task, and seldom came to recite with a poorly-prepared lesson. He was loved and esteemed by all who knew him. Nothing could induce him to do what he believed to be wrong. At the age of 13 he presented himself at the altar and was happily converted, and remained a consistent member of the M. E. Church.

Last winter he attended school at Frost, Pocahontas County, and made many friends. The writer had been closely associated with him for the last two years, and a more pious young man I never knew, and one of the best.

Of fine personal appearance, he looked the picture of health and strength. August last he was seized with typhoid fever and after a protracted illness of several weeks he went to meet his sainted mother, who had preceded him about eighteen months, and on the 27th day of September, 1897, his body was consigned to the tomb.

Thus has passed from among us a young man in the prime of life. But when the conflicts of life are over; when the last battle is fought, and the dead in Christ shall rise to meet him in the sky, we know we shall meet our dear departed friend and the music we used to engage in here we will sing triumphantly in heaven.

We tender our deepest sympathy to father, brothers, and sisters, and sing the God of infinite mercy sustain them in the prayer of their friend.

Ticklish Things.

Coughs are ticklish things. Nowhere does the extravagant saying: "I was tickled to death," come nearer being true, than in the case of a severe cough. Do you know the feeling? The tickling in the throat, that you write under and fight against, until at last you break out in a paroxysm of coughing? Why not cure the cough and enjoy unbroken rest? You can do so by using Human Oxen in South America.

In an article on "Difficulties of Transportation in the Tropics," in The Engineering Magazine, C. P. Yeatman tells some remarkable stories of the strength and endurance of pack-carriers in Columbia. Says Mr Yeatman:

"There are professional pack-carriers on some roads who make a specialty of carrying burdens which the sturdy and much endurmule cannot stagger under. On some of the roads you will see at times what appears to be a live box staggering slowly and painfully down the mountain-side ahead of you; as you draw nearer, you may hear the box grunt, very much as an old pack-mule does at every downward step on a steep road. There is something uncanny about the whole proceeding, if it is your first experience, and you happen suddenly to overtake the box, going down hill, for the moving, swaying, and grunting mass has no visible means of support, and no apparent excuse for behaving in such a manner. Perhaps you may read on its back, 'Mason and Hamlin Organ Company,' or some similar legend, but that is no help in solving the perambulating mystery for whoever heard of a boxed-up organ wandering alone down a steep mountain path, and grunting as it reeled along? Very likely the path is too narrow for your mule to pass your fellow traveler; so you are obliged to follow in its wake. But at last you are able to pass ahead, and you find the organ is in no way to blame for moving, for it has a man under it. Short and stumpy he may be, but the muscles on him reminds you of the pictures of old Atlas holding the world on his brawny shoulders. In one hand he carries a long, stout cane, with which he steadies himself on the slippery clay, and when he wishes to rest, he backs up the bank on the side of the road, settles the lower end of his load on the higher ground and props up the upper end with his stick; then he lets go his the plaited maguey-fiber bands of his shoulders and forehead and step from under his burden.

"Up the next hill perhaps you will overtake a woman pack-carrier, her skirts tucked up to her knees, and below the skirts, in prominent view, great knots and masses of corded muscle, which form her not graceful, but very useful, underpinning. Ask her how much weight she carries, and you may get the answer, as if it were a child's load, 'ocho arrobas, no mas'—equivalent to, 'only two hundred and twenty pounds.' As you catch sight of her wrinkled face, you may thoughtlessly remark that it is a heavy load for one of her years; her answer is apt to be: 'You should see my grandmother; she does carry heavy loads; I am not full grown yet.' This is said with an injured air that you rude on wondering why you had not remembered that a woman has a right to be lusty about her age, even if she is not dressed in the height of fashion. As to the grandmother, and the probability of her still being able to carry burdens in this world, you are apt to be strongly of the opinion that the pack-mulish old woman has drawn entirely on her imagination; but do not be too sure of that, for the glaring tropical sun brings ripeness quickly, and while women are freckled mothers at fourteen years of age, a great grandmother may still be a very active member of society.

"In this sort of freight carrying a 'large load' is a twelve-arroba, 300-pound package, which is generally the maximum for men, as a one-arroba is for women, may cost $150 for one hundred miles, or $50.12 proper per ton per mile.

It would be a good idea for some people to hold the tongues occasionally, and give their brains a chance to catch up.

It is an unsettled question whether or not Senator Hanna has any brains, but the habit of using the head instead of the tongue leads to broadening the latter.—Chicago News.

A Promising Life Sadly Ended.

The death, Friday, in an asylum at Chester, England, of Mr Edward Langtry, a native of Belfast, Ireland, husband of "The Jersey Lily," the well known actress, has in it not a little pathos, being the melancholy conclusion of a life that began under circumstances that promised much happiness. While still almost a youth he met on a yatching tour in the English Channel Emile Charlotte Le Breton, daughter of the Dean of Jersey, and in 1873 married her. At first the pair lived quietly, but the beautiful young wife, intoxicated by the change from the sober ways of the Island of Jersey to the gay fashionable London, soon acquired extravagant tastes, which dissipated her husband's fortune, and in 1881 she betook herself to the stage. Domestic broils followed, if they had not preceded, this step, and the actress sought and obtained a California divorce. Her husband was seeking an English divorce from her at the time of his death. His life had been wrecked by "the Lily's" beauty, which was not fortified with the finer traits of womanhood. The immediate cause of his death is supposed to have been an accident encountered in traveling from Dublin to Chester. —Baltimore Sun.

A Vote Winner.

Major J. Hoge Tyler, the Democratic nominee for Governor of Virginia, may not be endowed with the stately eloquence of Senator Daniel, or the augmentative powers of some others of the Democratic campaigners, but he is said to be a hand-shaker from away back, which takes immensely in the rural district, whilst in anecdote and humor he is making a decided hit. In a recent speech in Richmond he is quoted as saying: "This is the driest ticket that the people of Virginia were ever asked to vote for. Jack Montague never drinks anything but Dan River mud. Ed. Echols doesn't know the difference between wine and pokeberry juice. As for myself, I never drink anything stronger than unspiked buttermilk." In Alexandria, Saturday evening, in a speech which seems to have delighted his audience, Major Tyler declared that he had not been able to discover any solid proof of the good times promised during the presidential campaign. He certainly took a gloomy view of the situation in Virginia, for he asserted that the land was so poor that "we will have to fertilize our graves in order to insure a resurrection." Major Tyler further said that the ticket of which he was the head was entitled to support "because it was made up of a black-headed man, a red-headed man and a bald-headed man, variety enough to suit everybody." The news of Major Tyler's humor has spread throughout the State, and he is overwhelmed with invitations to speak.—Exchange.

A CONSIDERABLE law suit was heard last week by W. H. Grose, justice, between W. W. Tyree and Paul Golden. The suit was over an order given by one Wanless to Tyree on Golden. A motion for a new trial is set for next Saturday.

FROM the San Antonian Express we clip the following notice of a deal in cattle made by O. R. Slavin, a native of this county: J. S. Alexander and O. R. Slavin, prominent cattle buyers of Kansas City, closed a contract with Dobie & Lowe for 1500 head of 2 year olds past, located in Mercies County. The same parties also bought of W A. Lowe 600 head of 2 year olds near Victoria, and from W. G. Austin 300 2 year olds, near Victoria; all of them to be delivered on December 18.

THE people of this town are not so fond of some of their country neighbors that they will let them sell them beef from a sick cow affected with lump-jaw, if they know it. The meat has been eaten, but we are not such suckers as to rest under the injury which has been inflicted. The evidence is so convincing that a grand jury will have a chance to look into it. The people here would as soon be poisoned some other way. This is not the first time that big jawed cattle have been killed and sold for beef in this county.

Lump Jaw Beef.

It has lately developed on pretty good evidence that meat tainted with the horrible cancerous affection termed lump jaw was very generally distributed about Marlinton on one occasion this fall.

Lump jaw is recognized by a swollen condition of the lower jaw, and cattle seized with it become thin and soon die. It is absolutely incurable so far as known. Honorable stockmen kill affected cattle and destroy the carcasses. There are others who kill such affected stock and sell for a good round price to unsuspecting victims. The crime is punishable by heavy fine and confinement in the penitentiary.

Cooking tends to destroy the germs, but the disease finds admittance thro an accidental scratch or even by a decayed tooth.

Slight evidence is needed to substantiate the case referred to, and such offenders will certainly be looked after.

All meat is closely inspected in city markets, and a dealer who knowingly markets diseased stock, and especially lump jaw, and is debarred from further entry to the market. It is told of one stockman, well known in this county, who does not dare to go to Philadelphia with cattle for having once run in a steer thus diseased.

Robberry in Rockbridge.

Mrs William Harrison, postmistress at Monmouth, a postoffice four miles from Lexington, was held up about midday, October 22, by three men and the office robbed. She had prepared dinner, when the three men stepped in the door, and one of them held a pistol at her head, while the others rifled the safe, securing about $35 in money and stamps. One of the others secured all the bread and meat on the table. Then all decamped. A patron called in a few minutes for his mail, but he did not see them. The country was scoured but they have not been found up to the present. This part of the country is infested with tramps.—Baltimore Sun.

"We are a law-abiding people. There is not a prisoner in the jail of Rockbridge County, and several years have elapsed since a criminal case of serious importance appeared on the docket of our county court."

What is Scott's Emulsion?

It is a strengthening food and tonic, remarkable in its flesh-forming properties. It contains Cod-Liver Oil emulsified or partially digested, combined with the well-known and highly prized Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, so that their potency is materially increased.

What Will It Do?

It will arrest loss of flesh and restore to a normal condition the infant, the child and the adult. It will enrich the blood of the anaemic; will stop the cough, heal the irritation of the throat and lungs, and cure incipient consumption. We make this statement because the experience of twenty-five years has proved it to be one of thousands of facts. If you are not already a believer in Scott's Emulsion, try it.

MY AMBITION.

Folks say I lack ambition, whoever heard the like;
I'm the most ambitious girl that lives along this old turnpike.
It's very true I do not care for writing books, this fall
I let some weeks go by and did not use my mind at all.

I never yearn for the joy that comes to him who sits him down
And writes a brilliant tale that simply captivates the town;
Nor pine for the day when folks shall say, remembering these fitful rhymes,
"She used to write much dazzling verse for the Pocahontas Times."
(Indulgence is asked for this line.)

I give my old things to the poor—the things I do not need,
When "The Ten" comes round with a basket big and for the poor folks plead;
But I do it in such a quiet way that it goes down on the list
From the M. M. L. C. D. O. C., or just "Philanthropist."

But I have one ambition—I've had it all along,
And if it never is fulfilled life won't be worth a song.
I visit my milliner every day, simply mean to "hant" her,
Till she says she thinks that I'll "look well" in a bright red Tam-O'Shanter!

SALE OF WEST VIRGINIA LANDS.

Confirmation of a Transaction Involving 300,000 Acres.

Several weeks ago the Manufacturers' Record referred to a report that a Northern syndicate, which included Cornelius Vanderbilt, H. McKay Twombly and W. Seward Webb, had secured a tract of 300,000 acres of timber and coal lands in the eastern section West Virginia, paying $500,000 for it. It was also stated that the same syndicate had obtained control of the Dry Fork Railroad line, which is now in operation thirty one miles at the head of the Greenbrier valley, between Hendrick's and Horton. The road has been operated by a Philadelphia company, of which K. P. Whitmer is president. It is understood that the purchasers intend extending the railroad to a connection with the Chesapeake & Ohio at White Sulphur Springs, thro the tract of land referred to.

In a letter to the Manufacturer's Record, Mr John T. McGraw, of Grafton, W. Va., who has been active in representative of the owners of the property, confirms the report of its sale. The transaction is one of the largest of Southern lands which has ever been recorded, and indicates the interest which the resources of West Virginia are attracting among northern capitalists. The C & O Railroad is a Vanderbilt property, and the railroad which is to be built will be in all about 110 miles in length, and will be a direct connection of the West Virginia Central & Pittsburg system and the Chesapeake & Ohio. In last week's issue of the Manufacturer's Record it was stated that work on this line had begun.

...There is something brewing ...oncerning the mortgage which the ...overnment holds on the Union ...acific. This mortgage, it seems, ...mounts to $53,000,000 when ma...ured. A gang of speculators, with ...ost noted J. Pierpont Morgan at ...he head, had about convinced the ...dministration that they had better ...ccept $33,000,000 cash and re...ease the property. ...October 18, Hon J. Hoge Tyler ...addressed the people of Rocking...ham on the issues of the times. As ...reported in the Register, he said ...that he had been criticised for not ...declaring in his speeches that pros...perity and good times had arrived ...at last. It was true prosperity had ...struck him at Roanoke when he ...was nominated for Governor, but ...surely the Republican party was ...not entitled to any credit for that. ...I don't believe you will ever have ...good times and real prosperity un...til the old-fashioned silver dollar ...has been restored to its ancient ...rights and privileges. I have been all over this ...State, much of the Union, and ...some parts of the Old World in the ...past twelve months and in all se...riousness I am compelled to say ...that I have seen no prosperity to ...any considerable extent. There ...has certainly been no general pros...perity at all events. Too much ...of the country is poor and dyed-...with a full staff in attendance. The prosperity we have had must be a measly little private, to be stalking behind a wheat-sheck or hiding in a potato-patch.

...Two members of the legislature evidently think they ought to meet this winter and transact the important business of preparing the needed amendments to be voted upon. Some of these amendments, especially that in reference to the changing of the judicial districts, are so necessary that we may say the people at large are anxious that the legislature should meet. But there is one class that does not want to see the last legislature together, and that is the leading men of the Republican party, who are as proud of the present legislature as a Pocahontas man is of a poor horse. They know what would be the effect politically to hold an extra session. We feel so sure that this is the main drawback to an extra session as to be ready to accuse those leaders of selfishness, and claim that they are forbearing the calling of this extra session for fear of weakening the party. The expense would not be felt and we would commend many of the proposed amendments to the consideration of the people of this State. The election of next year would afford an excellent opportunity for a decision of the amendments after cool consideration. The political offices to be filled are not numerous, and the people would pay more attention to this branch of the election than they possibly could during the heated campaign of a Presidential year. A short term is all that would be necessary, and we do not begrudge the poor legislators an extra trip to Charleston this winter. Let us have those amendments up at the next election by all means, and we won't do a thing to most of them.

...From latest advices the yellow fever situation has not improved very perceptibly as yet. Up to the last few days it seemed to be extending beyond the South, in spite of rigid quarantine regulations. It will be two or three weeks before frost can be expected, and until the frost line be reached the mortality seems to increase as the temperature falls. The press has evidently been reticent, and the real situation has been and is far more serious than published reports would seem to indicate, bad as that appears. By private advices we infer that every interest suffers, financial, educational, journalistic, moral, and religious. This fever is truly a pestilence that walks in darkness and a destruction that wastes at noonday, yet there may be worse things in communities remote from the fever belt.

...The interesting report comes from New York, that Charles B. Rouss may have his sight restored. Dr Gaelp Norman came from India for the especial purpose to treat Rouss, and after a week's treatment, the patient is able to see dimly sixteen inches. Dr Norman seems confident that in about four weeks he will be able to read the papers. The specialist had heard of Rouss' offer of a million to any one who would give him back his eyes.

As was generally expected, the jury in the Lustgart murder case, tried in Chicago, was discharged unable to agree. On final ballot they stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal.

...The annual meeting of the State Bar Association at Morgantown, on the third and fourth of next month, promises to be an exciting and entertaining one. Government by injunction is one of the live questions booked for discussion by the leading lawyers of the State. On this subject an address is to be made by Hon Seymour Thompson, of St. Louis, which will doubtless attract the attention of the whole country.

...Here is a straw that gives some idea of how the popular wind is likely to blow. It is taken from the Ashland Evening, an influential Democratic paper sent out from Chicago:

> Lincoln said: 'Thank God we have anywhere under which oppressed workingmen can strike.'
> The successors of Lincoln today say: 'Thank God we have injunctions and sheriffs, and military commanders who are above the constitution. With the help of these things we will prevent a working man from obtaining his rights more or less.'

...At the time of the excitement caused by the sailing party of France to help the Cuban revolutionists, we published an account of pirates, gave the number of pirates, gave the number of people killed during the battle, &c.

THE NEW YORK FIGHT.

The citizens of Greater New York are having an interesting time as to who shall rule the city. It is hard to tell the state of affairs exactly or how the people will decide between the various claimants. In these unhappy days in large cities (and every where except among those unruly people, far behind the times, who live far apart from each other and who must needs do their own thinking) there exists what they call the, "masses," something that was unheard of until a late day. The "masses" of New York are very dense and many of them are thick headed. How they will divide now is an anxious question. In the cities that form the second city in the world hundreds of meetings are being held. The Republican party with General Tracy claims to identify itself with the reformers who have ruled the city of New York about as well as usual for the past years. They are trying to impress upon the "masses" that they have been particularly fortunate in being ruled by such an excellent, clean-handed people. They hope that—

> "The daughter of debate,
> That discord aye doth sow,
> Will reap no gain where former rule
> Hath taught still peace to grow."

Tammany Hall, a most powerful political organization, is running hard in spite of the motto ascribed to it by its rivals: "To hell with reform!" Tammany has put up Judge Van Wyck, and undoubtedly is the gang which that most noble duke, General Tracy, has to fear. Those Tammany people have a way of making themselves solid with the voter and they go among them at their work, while the higher class politicians discuss the matter at their clubs or in their parlors.

Henry George will get some votes as a straight out Chicago Democrat. Tammanay did not grow enthusiastic over the Chicago bill of rights as it might have done. They respected the fact, no doubt, that the people of New York are somewhat prejudiced against that man Bryan. While we would like to have seen the issue made by Tammany direct against the Republican party, still it is hard to see how they could have run a campaign on the silver question in establishing a city government which does pretty nearly everything the nation does except coin money. We fear that H. George will not make the free silver cause to show up well in the New York election. He is one of those sincere, ardent friends of the cause who mean well but who damage us.

The fourth element is Seth Low, the great philanthropist, who nominated by petition, is supposed to cripple the Republican party to about the same extent that George will take votes from Tammany Hall's nominee. At first Low said he would not run unless he would prove to be a "unifying force." He seems destined to unify only a small number. He left bound to run, and nothing will keep him from polling as many of his admirers as possible. His party, platform, and principles, if he has any of the three, are himself, the greatest known non partisan who ever waged war for partisan votes. His position has called forth this squib:

> "Don't fer," says Joe, "it ain't no use.
> That's Dick a Pelog stance wi' gease.
> Says Israel, "I don't care a cent,
> I've sighted, an' I'll let her went."

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS.

Those who have read "Captains Courageous" Kipling's great American novel will be interested to know that he probably took the title from a verse which heads Chapter XXVI of Charles Kingsley's "Westward Ho!" There it is credited to "Old Ballad, a. d. 1684":

> "When captains courageous whom death could not daunt,
> Did march to the seige of the city of Gaunt,
> They mustered their soldiers by two and by three,
> But the freemost in battle was Mary Ambree.
> When brave Sir John Major was slain in her sight,
> Who was her true lover, her joy and delight,
> Because he was murther'd most treacherously,
> Then vowed he revenge him full dearly Mary Ambree.

...The trial of Jesse Knorr, for the murder of Emanuel Croll in the Browning complication at Hacrwood, is a very strong case. He has made several confessions, and if reports are true a conviction is confidently expected.

STATE NEWS.

Melville D. Post, Wheeling's literary pride, has his second book in the hands of the publisher.

The Point Pleasant Register asks, "What has become of the project to erect a monument to the men who fell in battle at this place more than a hundred years ago?"

The papers and people of Wheeling are urging the chamber of commerce to secure the location there of the government armor plate works.

The fruit crop this year of Jefferson and Berkley counties was one of the most prolific ever known. A fair estimate fixes the value of the apple and peach crop of the two counties at over $100,000. One successful fruit grower, of Berkley County, is reported to have sold his apple crop for $20,000.

James W. Hess, formerly of Lewisburg, will be the new postmaster at Indianpolis. He moved to Indiana in 1856, where he is now one of the best known business men in the State. He learned the carpenter's trade in Lewisburg un- Lewis Wetzel, Esq.

Wheeling, not to be behind the times, presents something new in the way of a jail delivery. Two noted crooks unlocked the door of the county jail there, Friday morning, with a wooden key which they had made, walked out to the criminal court room, thro the court room, and on to Ohio.

Hon. William L. Wilson's father-in-law, Dr Adronian J. Huntington, has been appointed Dean of Columbia University, Washington, D. C. Dr Huntington has been professor of Greek at the Furman University, Greenville, S. C., since 1843. He is 75 years old, but in twenty years has never missed a class.

The "Augusta" boomers, during the legislature, claimed over 400 square miles as the area of Marion County. The surveying committee, appointed by the county court, has just finished its duties and reported the county as containing 306 and a fraction square miles—one-ninth less than the Austin Merrill survey, made twenty-eight years ago.

Professor Thomas E. Hodges, of the University, located a bullet in Ernest Hayes' foot, by the use of the X-rays. The bullet was fired into his foot several years ago by the accidental discharge Flobert rifle while he was shooting sparrows. The experiment was a complete success, but as Mr Hayes was compelled to leave for the east, he postponed a surgical operation for the removal of the bull.—Morgantown Monongalian.

Parkersburg is suffering from an epidemic of diptheria aggravated, it is said, by the disagreement of the city physicians as to the name and nature of the prevalent disease. The wrangle among the medical men is hot, absurd and deplorable. It has reached a point where one physician posts a house as being diptheria smitten, and others call and remove notices. Cases are rapidly on the increase as the result.

On the Kanawha sixteen deer were killed by parties living there. They had been driven out of the mountains by forest fires and were making for the river. When they were killed the game law of the State was violated. Several bears, also, have recently been seen in different parts of the State. Near Dingess, last week, a workman discovered a cub bear. While he was planning to capture it, the mother bear came upon the scene, and he beat a hasty retreat.

The Daughters of the Confederacy met in the county court house of Martinsburg. The membership increased fifty during the year and now numbers one hundred and sixteen. The treasurer's report showed receipts amounting to $805.42; disbursements $402.96, and a balance in the treasury, including the amount on hand at the beginning of the year, of 1003.46. The president, Mrs McSherry, delivered a very interesting address, after which business was transacted, and suggested that Stonewall Jackson's birthday be commemorated hereafter throughout the State. Jackson was born in Clarksburg, W. Va., on January 21, 1824.—Martinsburg World.

For the past week or more bands of gypsies have been gathering in the woods near Shepardstown, making this point a rendezvous from which they start on their annual fall pilgrimage southward. In one of the bands was a very beautiful girl fourteen years old, named Lizzie Gore, who is said to be worth about $50,000. She has been the object of passionate adoration of one of one of the sons of another party, named Nailer Harrison, who already possesses a wife and seven of children. It seems he has won her affection, for on Monday night they eloped, for parts unknown. The girls absence was noticed by her parents and the camp was soon in an uproar. Pursuing parties were sent after the fleeing couple but no trace of them was yet been found. The father of the girl applied for a warrant for the arrest of her lover, while her former brother threatens all sorts of things when the other overtakes him.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine and over comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

REALISTIC FICTION.

Mr Gallagher's Experience.

"I once read," he said, "that Kipling traveled 1,000 miles to get the impressions of a man who went down in a ship at sea and was luckey enough to come up again. It struck me at once that this was the secret of Kipling's success. The faithfulness of detail, and above all, the truth of it was what scored.

I became enthused with the idea that this was the key of the situation, and resolved to put the same in practice and reap the benefit myself. It was only a short time before an excellent chance offered. I was writing a story in which the hero, while ascending the Matterhorn, slides down a glacier, and when just at the verge of an awful precipice catches a twig protruding from the snow which is gradually uprooted. At the last moment he is saved by the heroine, who throws to him a rope she has formed by tying together her leather belt, wealth of sunny hair, strips of clothing, and imported Roman stripe sheer silk four-in-hand tie.

One day, while the twig had been slowly uprooting itself for more than three hours, and I was puzzling my brain to imagine what the hero ought to be thinking of and doing besides catching cold, I threw aside my pen and picked up a newspaper to give my brain a rest.

The first item that caught my eye was the following:

"Columbus, Ohio, July 15—Martin Gallagher, a workman employed in repairing the tower of the city hall, had a narrow escape today from a horrible death. He lost his footing and fell sliding down the steep roof of the building with terrific celerity. A nail, accidentally protruding, caught in his garments and held him at the edge suspended above the stone pavement 100 feet below. It was fully fifteen minutes before his companions could rig a tackle and rescue him from his fearful predicament."

Here was my chance to outdo Kipling. I would go to Columbus interview Gallagher, record his impressions, which must be identical exactly similar to those of my hero, and by their thrilling realism create a sensation throughout the literary world.

I packed my valise, bought a ticket for Columbus, and, leaving my hero on ice, started out, determined to procure for him some realistic and blood-curdling reflections of the best Ohio brand.

When I arrived I took out my note book and pencil and hunted up the city hall. Gallagher was still holding his job, and I found him seated on a step eating his dinner. He was a solemn-looking *man, as befitted one that had ex*perienced such a narrow escape.

"Mr Gallagher," I began, "I am a celebr—an author—who writes stories and things. I read about your remarkable escape and I want you to tell me about it." I then talked some more and explained that I wanted to know how he felt and what thoughts were in his mind while he was hung up on the nail.

"Oi don't mind tellin' yez," he said, "ay yez'll write it up like I tell yez. It was along of that mulderin' scutt of a Dempzy Sheehan. Says Dempzy: 'It's the growler Oi'll be after rushin',' says he, 'an yez'll all chip in.'

"'It's a long way,' says Oi, 'for a man wid so dhry a throat as Dempzy's got to have beer, widout it's shrinkin' a quart or so on the way, but we'll thry him won time.'

"They was six av us, and we chipped in a dollar apiece, and down went Dempzy wid de can. While Oi fought he'd had toime to rach the corner on the way back I leaned out the windy as the blizzy and me foot slipped, and—whoosh! Oi went hallchpukh down the strate!

"What thoughts were in your mind when you first fell, Mr Gallagher?" I asked eagerly, getting my pencil ready.

"Divil a t'ought," said Gallagher. "Oi left me t'oughts in the tower. Wid a shtruck the nail wid the side av me troiser's Oi t'ought av the toime when Oi first landed in New Yar'rk an sat down on a bar'rel in Castoral Par'rk."

"But, Mr Gallagher," I said, "don't you think of your wife or your children?"

"Oi was mad, I said Mr thallagher, an I'd a bit mad toime for t'inkin av annything ilse but mesilf and Dempzy and a t'ousand curses on him! Oi was hanging by me fingers, and Oi looked in the strate and t'ought twelve av Dempzy wuddn' was the greatest av t'ir hand. He sthopped and looked up.

"'Blissed saints!' he said, 'is it yez, Martin, or the airship?'

"Wid that he turns up the can and takes a pull

"'Yez owdacious, thrait'rous, dhirty son av a Donegal bog jumper, Oi yells, 'where was ye brit up to be afther shtalin dhrink from your betthers? Bhring up th' can or Oi'll dhrap an yez.'"

"'Shame on yez,' says Dempsey whin he had to shtop dhrinkin' to give his brith, 'to be flyin' about lightin' an gutters av buildings like an ould bbird! Fhly aff in the wuds and perch on a stump till yez learns to sing better tunes.' Wid that he shticks the can in his shtable dure av a mouth agin."

"But surely, Mr Gallagher," said I, with a troubled recollection of the the forty odd dollars expenses I would be out on my trip to record his sensations, you must be able to remember something of your feelings and impressions while you were suspended in your perilous position?"

"Sure, and haven't Oi just been afther tellin' them to yez?" said Mr Gallagher, pausing to insert a piece of corned beef into his visage; "twas wid the nail harassin me and the soight av that divil's imp av a Dempsey dhrainin' the last dhrop of sixty cents' worth av beer in the can, Oi was chock full av impressions.

"Yez son of a banshee,' calls Oi to Dempsey,skidd o' wavin' my feet and kickin' wid my hands,—which was all Oi cud do, 'come up here and Oi'll mash yez into putty.'

"'Oi haven't me wings, Martin dear,' says Dempsey, sittin down on a shtep and leanin back and lookin' up, 'and besides Oi'm thinkin' it Oi did Oi'd fhly crooked wid 'em like a woodcock, on account av the darlin' beer Oive had. And then he began singin, 'Mrs O' Flaherty's Fancy Dress Ball.'

"'Twas a bit av a while afther-wards that the boys dhropped me down a rope wid a loop in it, and they drawed up. I wint down and shtopped with Dempsy a few minutes, and then went to a drugstore and tilephoned for an ambulance to come afther him.

"Wan o'clock sthruck sorr, have yez got the infor-r-mation yez wants?"

"Thank you, Mr Gallagher," I said, "all I want."

I returned home on the next train and figured up my expenses. They were $42.65. My hero is still hanging on the edge of the glacier. I don't want to go through the experience myself in the interests of realism in order to finish my story, and I can't afford to buy any more impressions like Mr Gallagher's. I am undecided whether to let his past life do the kinetoscope act in his mind, as the custom was in all time-honored romances, or to simply state that his thoughts beggared description.

In the meantime I have been wondering how Mr Kipling managed to get his information from people whom he interviews.—Detroit Free Press.

BUCK KILGORE'S STRATEGEM.

How the Texan Got Even With a Nervy Woman.

"Savoyard," a contributor to the Louisville Courier-Journal, tells a good story of the late Constantine Buckley Kilgore, ex-Congressman from Texas and United States Judge, who died September 23, at Ardmore, I. T. The story is as follows:

During the war Buck Kilgore was ordered home to assist in gathering up some deserters. One evening about dusk he was out in the country in quest of a deserter who had been off the "layout" for a year. He was very hungry and very weary. He called at a house by the roadside and there he found a woman just taking from the spit a nicely broiled chicken. The savor of the fowl made him ravenous. He had a Mexican dollar in his pocket which he had carried for years, and to which he was much attached, but he was bound to have that chicken, and he pulled out the dollar and proposed a trade—the coin for the fowl. The lady said the chicken was for a sick friend, and that she could not sell it.

"But," she continued, "I'll jump you for it."

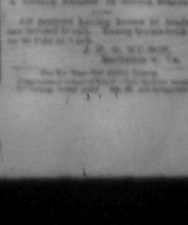
"What do you mean?" said Buck.

"I mean that we will see which can jump farthest from this doorsill out into the yard, and the one of us that lands shall have both chicken and dollar."

"All right; that suits me exactly," said Buck. The dollar was placed on the dish beside the chicken and his gun was leaned against the wall by the door, and Buck slung his arms and made a tremendous leap of over 12 feet. He recovered with difficulty, and when he turned to the door there was the lady with his cocked gun in her hands, with the but against her shoulder and finger on the trigger.

"Now, you just flirt the gravel down that road, young man, or I'll make buzzard's food of you before hell can singe a gnat," she ordered.



There was shoot in her eyes and "buck and ball" in the gun, so he "flirted the gravel," his bosom swollen with impotent rage, and his mouth overflowing with eloquent profanity.

By this time it was dark. Over in a field Buck spied a gin house. He went to it, climed into the loft, lay down on the floor and was soon fast asleep. After a time he was awakened by voices down below. He listened and made the discovery that one was a female voice, and a moment later realized that she was relating the "jumping" episode to her companion, who gave vent to peal after peal of laughter. There were the chicken and his dollar, which he could see by the light of the yellow dip. Peering about he saw his gun also. There was a big hole in the floor of the loft, and just as the man took hold of the dish to eat the chicken, Buck plunged thro the hole and seized his gun. Before they recovered from their astonishment, Buck roared out: "Madame, you just flirt the gravel back home, and as for this gentleman, he and I will flirt the gravel to the office of the provost marshal. He is the deserter I have been looking after for a week."

There was shoot in Buck's eye now. The woman left. Buck recovered his dollar, ate the chicken, and before midnight surrendered his prisoner to the provost marshal. It was worth a journey across the continent to hear Buck tell the story.

The Osborne

SPRING-TOOTH HARROW.

The frames are made in one piece of steel angle bar, and formed to withstand all strain without buckling or warping. The teeth in this harrow are so spaced that they will not trail each other, Pulverizing the ground thoroughly. The steel pipe tooth bars are mounted in malleable boxes secured to the frame, and will not bend or break. The peculiar shape of the teeth cutting two-thirds about the bar gives the greatest amount of spring possible without straining the bolts, and because of their shape and fastening are stronger than used on any other harrow. By the levers the depth of work can be regulated while the harrow is in motion. The draft is steady and direct as the harrow has no side motion.

ALL THESE FEATURES COMBINED HAVE MADE THE OSBORNE CELEBRATED.

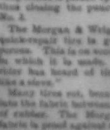
TIRES THAT LEAK.



The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire must be regarded as a distinct improvement in bicycle tire constructions. It has the following advantages:

While punctures in it can be repaired with pings, or semi-liquid injections, as well as in any other single-tube tire, it can be permanently repaired by using the quick-repair strip inside the tire. See cut No. 1.

No. 1.

By injecting M. & W. quick-repair cement through the punctures, and then pressing down on the tire with the thumb, as in cut No. 2, the repair strip inside is picked up by the cement, thus closing the punctures, as in cut No. 3.

No. 2.

No. 3.

The Morgan & Wright single-tube quick-repair tire is guaranteed not porous. This is on account of the way in which it is made. Nearly every rider has heard of tires that "leak into a sieve."

Many tires rot, because water gets into the fabric between the two layers of rubber. The Morgan & Wright fabric is proof against moisture.

Needle-pointed tacks have made tubular Morgan & Wright tires sure, and yet how seldom their punctures. This is due to the fabric.

Ask any bicycle dealer whether smart tires last as long as Morgan & Wright tires. Ask him, what the Morgan & Wright guarantee means. Morgan & Wright tires are repaired free of charge at the factory in Chicago or at any of the Morgan & Wright tire repair shops, located in the principal cities.

If you have a puncture, get right off. Riding a tire flat, when it has a tack or nail in it, may damage it considerably.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Pocahontas Times.

THE TIMES is under obligations to Mr Arthur Lawson, of Cumberland, England, for a copy of the Carlisle Journal containing an address by his father, Sir Wilfrid Lawson, at the annual meeting of the North Cumberland Liberal Association.

We should perhaps mention that the Liberal party in England is fully as much under the weather as the Democratic party of this country.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson made a vigorous attack upon the policy of the government relating to foreign affairs, and that spirit which we condemn by the name Jingoism. At least "Jingo" is a term of reproach. Jingoes are for carrying war in the four parts of the globe; "pegging out claims," "spreading civilization," "developing markets" "rectifying frontiers," and under what name they chose to term it he denounced it all as wholesale national robbery. He called attention to some lines by Andrew Lang, which seem to picture the brutality of the spirit and relish of any glamour which it might have possessed:

"A health to Jingo first, and then
A health to powder, shell, and shot,
The man who hates not other men
I deem no perfect patriot.

"Wherever guns and gin are sold
We've stamped the natives nigger in
He gives us scenery, tracts and gin
Drinks all round
To the great name of Jingo, king and crown and,
And every filibuster, round and round."

The speaker has a world wide reputation as a foe to the drink evil. He said, as to the spreading of Christianity: "The same ships that carried out missionaries on the deck, carried in the hold thousands of cases of gin to destroy the bodies and souls of those people that the missionaries went out to do good to."

He was followed by Mr Allison, M. P., whose remarks as to the dark days of the Liberal party one feels so very particularly applicable to our own Democratic party, and that there is great vitality in the party; and that "so long as they adhered to their principles, and so long as they believed in them, they might depend upon it the Liberal party had just as bright a future before it as it ever had in the past."

He also deplored the war feeling. He seemed to class the American poet Lowell as a scot of a Jingo, and to Scotchmen we will object to this as Lowell was particularly lauded in some of his rhymes. The verse quoted by the speaker is

"Go for the west, I go again &c—
I cannot to my I heed or &c—
Blest is, I guess that, here or &c.

The best way was to fight it there
For him was statesmen war is horrid,
I says to them with all my heart,
But stop across them get forrid
Remember upon a powder cart."

Mr Allison says "The less civilization attempted in that way the better."

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

John Smith, of Stony Creek.

This paper is designed to perpetuate the memory of two very deserving persons, who were among the first to open up a home on Stony Creek near its source, now known as the West Union neighborhood. Mr John Smith was a native of Ireland and was of Scotch - Irish ancestry. A large per centage of the Pocahontas citizenship is of this stock, and it should be the aim of our younger people to inform themselves about this people so as to learn what may be expected of them in order to be truly worthy sons and daughters of one of the best of living races. A race of people who, according to Macauley, Bancroft, Thomas Carlisle, and others, has done more for human liberty and advancement than any other people now in the world.

John Smith came to this region in the seventies of the previous century, from Pennsylvania, and upon becoming acquainted with the family of Levi Moore, the pioneer at Frost, he made love to Sally Moore, one of the daughters. Upon their marriage the two young people took a fancy to the large spring that gushes so copiously and beautifully from the rocky cliffs near the source of Stony Creek and settled close by it and built up their home, one of the best of its kind in their day. The place is now occupied by the family of the late Captain William Cochran. Some particulars in regard to their sons and daughters have been already given in other biographic papers that need not be repeated here in full. In addition therefore to what has been written the following fragmentary items of their history are recorded.

John Smith, junior, married Fannie Cochran, daughter of the late John Cochran, near Marvin, and settled on the place now in possession of John Young, a great-grandson of John Smith the pioneer settler, near Edray. He afterwards moved to Roane County and lived at the three forks of Reedy. He was a Union sympathizer, was arrested by the Confederate military as such, but when it was ascertained that he was not a dangerous person he was paroled on his honor, but died on his return home.

Andrew Smith's wife was Nancy Cackley, daughter of Levi Cackley on Stamping Creek. After settling and living for a time at the old Stony Creek homestead, he moved to the State of Missouri.

Elizabeth Smith became Mrs Jacob Drennan. After living some years in Braxton County, Mr and Mrs Drennan moved to Nicholas County and located on Peter's Creek, fourteen miles west of Summerville, where members of their family yet reside. Charles Drennan is their son.

Ann Smith was married to Captain William Young and lived many years on the place near Hamlin Chapel now in possession of George C Moore. She was a person of great industry, fine mental endowments, and a model housekeeper, and intelligently, sincerely pious. The writer gratefully remembers her and members of her family as cherished friends. Late in life she went West, and died but a few years since at a very advanced age in the State of Iowa. The first wife of Captain James M. McNeill was one of her sons. The late Colonel Samuel Young was her oldest son. Adam Young was another son. The only survivors of her family now in Pocahontas are her grandsons, John Young and Adam Young and their children.

Rebecca Smith was married to John Auldridge, and lived on Laurel creek a few miles from the old homestead further west. These with other people reared a very interesting and exemplary family, of whose special mention was made in the Auldridge memoirs that were recently published in this journal.

Mrs Rebecca Auldridge lives with her daughter Mrs Nancy Kennicutt in the town of Rogerverte. She is not far from ninety years of age, and is hale and hearty. Her home is but a step or two from the Chesapeake and Ohio railway on one side and the other side is at the edge of the St. Lawrence boom whence the logs are floated to the mills by the million. How different the surroundings of her youth and early life from those of her old age. A more marked contrast can scarcely be imagined.

There is scarcely an hour, day or night free from the thundering and screaming of the trains fast or slow, and Mrs Auldridge seems to regard them no more than she once regarded the rustle of the falling leaves around the old Laurel Run homestead, sixty miles away from the iron road.

Hannah Smith became the wife of Richard Auldridge, a brother of John Auldridge just mentioned. After living some years at the Smith homestead, they went to Braxton county and were happily situated at the opening of the late sad war between the States, on Wolf Creek. Their family was composed of two sons and a daughter. Mr Auldridge sympathized with the Southern Confederacy and was killed. Both sons were in the Southern army. John Auldridge fell at the battle of Gettysburg. Allen Auldridge survived the war with an honorable record as a brave and faithful soldier. He sought a home in the State of Kansas, taking his mother and sister Almira with. Mrs Auldridge sleeps in her Kansas grave, while at last accounts her son and daughter are keeping house and doing well, as good dutiful children deserve.

Sally Smith was married to Robert Rodgers, and for some years lived in Buckeye Cove, near Swago. Afterwards they settled in Nicholas county, West Virginia, where Mr Rogers still lives far advanced in years.

Martha Smith became Mrs Samuel Young. Mr Young was a brother of Captain William Young. They lived a few years on a section of the old homestead, and finally moved to Logan County, Ohio, where their descendants mostly have their present homes, and enjoy the fruits of honest labor and judicious management.

Thus we have been able to lay before our readers some information in regard to these worthy persons and their two sons and six daughters. In their day their home was a place where the young people had good times, as good times went in the pioneer era. At logrollings, wool-picking, quiltings, and flax-pullings the youngsters met, fell in love, and did much of their courting. Sundays it would be preaching or all day prayer-meetings, when it was not deemed right and proper to think and talk about anything but Heaven and heavenly things. The grandest social events would be the weddings that occurred just as fast as the young people thought themselves old enough to get married and go to themselves. Thursday was the usual day for the marriage. The first three days were spent in preparation, and the last three in the wedding, infare, and return home. These nuptial occasions were usually seasons of such exquisite enjoyment that all the young people, seemingly, came to like weddings so well that nothing would do but they must have one of their own soon as convenient, and so it came to be a proverb that one wedding soon makes another.

Mrs Smith survived her husband a good many years, but did her part well, saw her children married and settled in life. When the time came folded her busy hands in rest and quietly went to sleep. It is a comforting reflection that here and there on the hillsides of our beautiful land are planted humble sleepers, like the bodies of these worthy people, that will some day appear in all their beauty and lovely. It is touching to indeed how widely apart are the graves of their children. Kansas, Ohio, Iowa, Missouri, and West Virginia have graves where members of this family are waiting for the coming of the Resurrection day.

PUBLIC SERVANTS.

It is a well known fact that in America there is so little honor attached to the holding of local offices that the best men do not always offer themselves for the place unless it is one which has an adequate pecuniary reward. We have often heard men justify themselves by counting the cost necessary to filling the office, and by showing that they would make nothing out of it, they actually justified themselves in refusing to stand for the place. This has hampered the people wonderfully in choosing their local rulers. Every citizen should be willing to accept any position offered him, and the people at large should not misconstrue his motives in accepting the office. The Youth's Companion has a good editorial on the subject, under the head of "Good English Example:"

The Duke of Devonshire has been a busy man ever since he entered English public life, and he has great landed estates which require constant attention. When he was recently asked to stand for Mayor of Eastbourne, there was no lack of excellent excuses for declining the nomination. He was Lord President of the Council in the ministry of the day and the leader of the Liberal Unionists who had seceded from Mr Gladstone's home rule party; and in addition to his political duties he was overwhelmed with private business and with social engagements.

Instead of refusing the nomination he accepted it, and the Eastbourne was not a great English town like Birmingham, when Mr. Chamberlain worked out as mayor new principles of municipal policy; nor like Sheffield, where another titled landowner and mayor, the Duke of Norfolk, received and entertained the queen during the jubilee year. No reputation was to be made in that seaside resort, as there was in London when Lord Rosebery accepted the chairmanship of the county council and plunged into municipal politics. The mayoralty was merely another tax upon the time and patience of a busy man.

The Duke of Devonshire regarded it as a public duty to take the office when the corporation urged him to become mayor. He was willing to sacrifice his leisure and convenience in order to fulfil a public obligation.

Americans of wealth and social position are sometimes reproached for imitating English dress and manners and becoming dudes. If they would copy the English nobility in willingness to devote their time and energy to local government, they would follow an example that is worthy of high commendation.

There are black sheep among the lords, but the titled class of England is a working body noted for intelligence, industry and public spirit. The dukes and lords take their full share in the drudgery of local government. As mayors of cities and members of town and county councils they give up many hours in the week to public work, and their service is always without financial reward.

They set an example which rich merchants and active business men are ashamed to disregard. Engrossed as they may be with their private business, they find time for attending council and committee meetings and for promoting the ends of good government.

This is the secret of the efficiency and success of local government in England and Scotland. The sons of education, wealth and influence, instead of leaving politicians to govern their towns and counties badly look after this public business themselves. They regard it as a public duty and discharge it as a serious inconvenience and from high motives. So complete this duty is looked upon as local government is not what it ought to be.

The Ins and Outs of It.

If you get best wear out of a coat, best work must have gone into it. You can't get good bread out of poor flour.

Moral: You can't get the best out of anything, unless the best is in it; and the best has to be put in before it can be taken out. Now, we have a rule to test those sarsaparillas with a big "best" on the bottle. "Tell us what's put in you and we'll decide for ourselves about the best." That's fair. But these modest sarsaparillas say: "Oh! we can't tell. It's a secret. Have faith in the label." . . . Stop! There's one exception; one sarsaparilla that has no secret to hide. It's Ayer's. If you want to know what goes into Ayer's Sarsaparilla, ask your doctor to write for the formula. Then you can satisfy yourself that you get the best of the sarsaparilla argument when you get Ayer's.

papers have generally referred to it vaguely as being situated in the central part of the State. Whether the boom towns have been mapped out or not, just as certainly as the railroad is built the towns will follow as a matter of course. Any one unacquainted with the county has no realization of the vast wealth that is here. It is not that which is generally comprised under the term of natural resources which will bring lasting prosperity to this county, or people it with its most enduring and substantial class. The fertility of the soil will afford work for ten times as many stock raisers and farmers as are now engaged in the business in Pocahontas. There are vast stretches of country that are comparatively level, which would produce abundantly, but the wonder of wonders are the rich mountains covered with black soil, in western Pocahontas. Denude these mountains of their timber, and a bluegrass sod forms which equals for grazing purposes any bluegrass raised in America. In the past the primitive method of belting and deadening the timber has let the sun in and it did the rest. After the sod is formed in this natural, spontaneous manner, it is no unusual thing to fence up a field and without any previous cultivation whatever raise a crop of hay, cutting a bluegrass hay that is even fattening in its feeding qualities, and which can be cut year after year, improving all the time in the quantity it produces.

When the timber of our mountains has been harvested, yielding great gains to those who put it on the market, the lumberman will give way to the stockman and farmer, and instead of great wastes of brush growing up where the large timber stood there will be farms, farm - houses, fences, and cattle, and these prosperous farming communities will feed towns, boom or otherwise, on the 300,000 acres.

We certainly have room in Pocahontas county for a farming population of 50,000 people. We have barely 7,000 now. After the timber is taken off the farmers will come, and to them we will have to look as the main promoters of this new county, and to them will be due the lasting prosperity of this section. Our true benefactor is the man who will make two blades of grass grow where one grew before.

CENTRALIA.

Centralia is situated in Webster County, and at the present time it is considered one of the wildest and most romantic spots of that county. About the time Marlinton was spoken of, the booming of this town began. The Charleston Gazette says that this town has been heard of again:

Centralia has been heard from again. Everybody thought the place had gone entirely out of existence. About six years ago the streets ran up into the hundreds, and the wild fox dog his hole answered on the corner of Main street and 10th avenue. Grand new mills employing hundreds of men, a paper on paper and downtrend in the construction of those who purchased lots. Being as it was a coal operation, and the center of the State, the city was destined to be under the lash dynasty, which all the rest of the State received. But when the surveyors finished laying off the streets and lots, all business ceased. One of the promoters left the State between two days, and many there were who mourned his departure. The saw mills never were erected, the residences never extended beyond 20th street, the river flows as silently and as gracefully by as ever, and its placid surface is still undisturbed by the splash of logs and the city's silence by the hum of machinery. The trains rush by this lonely spot on their way to the homes of men, and oblivion seemed to have settled down upon the city of Centralia. But at last it has been heard from. A boom may be built there. The Central a Boom and Lumber Co. secured a charter to construct a boom in Elk River at that point. The Company has $4,800 capital, and Robert B. Smith, of Mt Pleasant, Pa. is the principal stockholder.

ALL farmers should make a note for future use of the valuable experiments for the treatment of warbles in cattle conducted by the Technical Instruction Committee of the Staffordshire County Council. Warbles are a fruitful source of mischief. The attentions of the fly are so dreaded that all cattle lose flesh in the summer season from this cause. The hides are seriously damaged in cattle of all ages, while cows give less milk and run considerable risk of abortion. The Staffordshire experiments have been more directed to cure than to prevention, altho cure is prevention to some extent, as every maggot killed is one less to take up the destructive work next season. By frequent dressings of train oil and other smears the fly may be prevented from alighting on the animals in hot weather, but that entails some trouble, and farmers are averse to unaccustomed trouble, and a simpler way is to tackle the warble when it appears. Nothing could be simpler than the methods which the experiments have shown to be effective. Dry salt, rubbed in two or three times, kills the maggot in a very few days. It dries up and is expelled without causing any inflamation, such as sometimes results when the maggot is killed by other means. Two cows selected for experiment were dressed with salt on the 20th of May, and on the 29th most of the warbles were dead and remarkable result in so short a time—the cows were more contented and giving more milk. The success of the experiment encouraged its extension to the whole herd, and by the first of July the pest was eradicated. By that time the condition of the two cows had "much improved." All that is necessary is to cut away the overlapping hairs so as to expose the opening of the warble, and rub in the salt. By attention to this duly the prevalence of the pest could apparently diminish in the following year, and its extermination would only be a matter of time and application.—Carlisle (England) Journal.

THE Christian Herald thinks that the devil may have something to do with the making of nomina... tions, and that as all who provi... dence sees that the hearts of the people are so attuned that the right man is chosen. It practical... ly gives this doctrine, and cites the case of Lincoln, Douglas, and Bell, *and says that evidently Lin*coln was a providential man. He is admired and loved by both North and South, and his memory venerated; but it is a pity that he could not have been good enough to have whipped the South in ninety days, or bad enough to have allowed the South to whip. This deep seated regret and outbreak may be deemed as coming at too late a day, but when it is written by a pension payer, who was born since the war, we can see that the war is still a live question. The pension system fails in this, that the greatest sufferers of the war never can be reached. It burdens the country for the benefit of the poor kin of the enlisted soldier, but—

"Can storied urn or animated bust
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath:
Or pension paid by millions move the dust
Of those who marched on battlefields to death?"

THE compulsory school law has this effect. When the patrons are dissatisfied with the teacher they cannot simply withdraw their children from the school, and their only relief is to have the qualities of the teacher investigated and remove him if he is not doing his duty. In Boone county such a patron tried to remove the obnoxious teacher with a knife. An exchange says:

The West Virginia compulsory school law has already been getting in its work in Boone county. Professor Deck Toney whipped some of Squire Millard Pawley's children at school, and the Squire withdrew them from attendance. The professor promptly reported the matter to the trustees and under penalty of the law the children were compelled to return. Thereupon Pawley swore that he would cut Toney to pieces, and last Friday week he found the professor at a cane mill on Toney's branch. A quarrel was followed by a fight, in which Pawley used a knife, cutting Toney over the heart and behind the left ear, inflicting wounds of a most serious character. Toney almost bled to death before a physician could be secured, and he is still in a critical condition from his injuries.

SOMETHING interesting for our lady readers is reported by a recent traveler from Iceland. He says the Iceland ladies, young and otherwise, are the most contented and best satisfied persons in the world. The reason given is there are no changes in the fashions and they are not always in a worry about styles and the proper thing to put on when they appear in social gatherings. How would it do to get our fashions from Iceland until our minds are opened for silver, and let Harper's Bazar and Demorest have a much needed rest? Let us hear from all those who would like to be among the most contented and best satisfied people in the world.

TERRIBLE storms raged on the Northern Lakes and the Atlantic coast, October 24 and 25. Much shipping and other property was damaged, but loss of life surprisingly small. On the night of the 24th the storm at Marinton seemed to pass overhead and the atmosphere reminded one of a train of cars. We are very willing to accord the right of way high enough to not to do us any damage.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made to establish a pocket cutlery at Sistersville, Va. This is a new industry, as it is the first of its kind in the United States. This oil is much valued in Europe for toilet soaps and other purposes. Pen nut flour is used quite extensively in Europe being made into bread cakes and crackers. This flour is a favorite article of food in German hospitals.

CERTAIN officers seem to be hopelessly complicated. The report seems well authenticated that on a personal tour Cuban insurgents sent out of the country the only hospital in under reliable settlement ten in connection to the United States and one means no amount of money for our insurgents to think about, costing bullet a of dollars for a sore scratched.

SAWYERS AND HIS STYLE.

Probably the most original writer of the present age is William H. Sawyers, the editor of the Hinton Independent Herald. His style is said to be inimitable, but we have been such an attentive reader of his editorials that we are tempted to try to write one that would sound like his, of course expecting the reader to give due credit to him for the superior qualities that this article will show.

Bah! yah! We reckon we don't care a darn what that old tub of tallor, Markhanna, has to say about it. The nebulous condition of the unregenerate, demoniac, *double*distilled essence of tomfoolery, the Republican demagogs who are just now engaged in the vain and hopeless task of proving to the patriotic and immortal adherents of the principles of Jeffeffersonian Democracy that the untrammeled vista of a bright and glorious future is not now opening upon the view of those who aspire to see a speedy and downright end of the doctrine of the free and unlimited demonetization of free silver, is apparent to all. We ask in the name of common decency that such unmitigated nuisances as Henry Waterson, Markhanna, and all plutocrats of whatever denomination, be forever annulled, set aside, destroyed, torn down, razed to the ground, humiliated, depreciated, and made naught. Upon the site of the ruins of such men who fell from their high estate of riotous rottenness, we would like to see that bright effulgent star, William Jennings Bryan, erect such another government as would even surpass the wildest dreams of the most susceptible jackass who ever voted the Republican ticket, thinking that he was to be rewarded by a free pass to the world renowned millenium, which the Republican party can never expect to bring to pass.

What the American people need more than anything else is fewer paltry, pandering, prewewitical, polygolical, public men to exhaust the treasury and to confuse the clerks of Congress. We have seen so many pseudo-pious, pennyroyal, pumpkin-eaters traipseing around and pretending to pick flaws in our incomparable Constitution, all the time drawing an intolerable amount of sap from the veins of a perishing government; and pretending to see all manner of hob*goblins, chimeras, and tartarian* nightmares in an appropriation for a new door-knob to the capitol building at Washington, and expending their time to have corrected other tangles in like insignificant political thimbleriggery, that we demand a surcease from such vain and frivolous tasks and demand that they return to their former proud allegiance and help to secure that famous league between gold and silver and proclaim to a suffering world the undeniable relief offered to them by a system of bimetallism.

Until the undeniable, the inconsistent, and the incongruous can be harmonized, it will be hard to predict with more clearness the exact majority which William Jennings Bryan will have in 1900.

THE DEATH OF HENRY GEORGE

Death stepped in to have a hand in the great New York election by removing Henry George, one of the four great candidates who were before the people. In his death the world has lost one of the purest and most sincere of public men —a man whom everyone admired for his sterling qualities. His bitterest political enemies knew that the man was above reproach. The other candidates depended upon and owed their vast following to party or principles, but Henry George was all and in all to his success. Had death laid its hand upon any other candidate the vote for his successor would have been the same. It is easy to realize now how much the ticket which Mr George headed depended on him. From the leading place, that ticket existed and ran after his death only to be defeated.

Henry George, Jr., was nominated in his father's stead.

Henry George was born in Philadelphia, September 2, 1839. He was of English and Scotch descent. He clerked for a short time after leaving school, and shipped as a sailor at the age of sixteen; prospected for gold on the Pacific coast, but was unsuccessful. In 1865 Francisco he learned the printing trade, and in 1871 founded the San Francisco Post.

In 1879 he began the book that has given him fame, "Progress and Poverty." He set the type himself and issued the book in 1879. The volume set forth his theory against the individual ownership of land, and their enrichment by the increase in value of unimproved property. He suggested as a remedy the single tax on land and began a discussion which is still waging. He lectured in England and Ireland in the early eighties.

He ran for mayor of New York in 1886, and made second place. The vote stood Abram S. Hewitt, (Dem.) 90,552; George, (Ind.) 68,000; Theodore Roosevelt, (Rep.) 60,435. When he accepted the nomination for mayor, a month ago, he said: "I'll make this race if it costs me my life."

Last Friday night he spoke until late at night. He received a stroke of apoplexy at 4 o'clock next morning and passed away without regaining consciousness.

His ideas of political economy have been adopted by thousands wherever the English speech has sped. He was at the head of all the single tax clubs spread throout the world. His writings were their text books. The following selection from his works, made by the Baltimore Sun, will give the reader an idea of the clearness and force of Mr George's writings:

"Near the window by which I write a great bull is tethered by a ring in his nose. Grazing round and round, he has wound the rope about the stake until now he stands a close prisoner, tantalized by rich grass he cannot reach, unable even to toss his head to rid himself of the flies that cluster on his shoulders. Now and then he struggles vainly, and then, after pitiful bellowings, relapses into silent misery. *This bull, a very type of mas*sive strength, who, because he has not wit enough to see how he might be free, suffers want in sight of plenty, and is helplessly preyed upon by weaker creatures, seems to me no unfit emblem of the working masses. In all lands men whose toil creates abounding wealth are pinched with poverty, and, while advancing civilization opens wider vistas and awakens new desires, are held down to brutish levels by animal needs. Bitterly conscious of injustice, feeling in their inmost souls that they were made for more than so narrow a life, they too spasmodically struggle and cry out. But until they trace effect to cause, until they see how they are fettered and may be freed, their struggles and outcries are as vain as those of the bull. Nay, they are vainer. I shall go out and drive the bull in the way that will untwist his rope. But who will drive men into freedom? Till they use the reason with which they have been gifted nothing will avail. For them there is no special providence. Under all forms of government the ultimate power lies with the masses. It is not kings, nor aristocracies nor landowners nor capitalists that anywhere enslave the people. It is their own ignorance."

Fatal Accident at the Sinks.

On October 18, a shocking accident occurred at the Sinks, in Pocahontas county. Joseph E. Vint, aged 23, accidentally shot and killed his cousin, Wm. H. Bennett, aged 22.

Both were residents of the Circleville community. They had gone to the Sinks on a hunting tour and had agreed to hunt in the opposite hollows of a mountain. After Vint had hunted quite a while he saw a ground hog which escaped his sight through some brush. He followed it a few steps when he noticed at the mouth of a sink hole the ruffling of hair on something. Supposing it to be the ground hog he fired with a Winchester rifle, and upon the game found it to be his cousin, who for some reason had crossed over from his route, and taken a position in this place, probably watching for the same game that Vint had seen. The ball entered the back of the head and lodged in the forehead. From his position it might be supposed that he was asleep at the time. His hat was lying at a distance and he was lying with the side of his face flat on the ground with his gun at his side.—Highland Recorder.

Our Boys are Degenerating.

The feeble effort made by the boys of Marlinton to make things interesting Hallow'een was very pathetic. It is evident they lacked inspiration or originality. The boys of this town are certainly going to seed very rapidly. A few years ago the results of a Hallow'een were often astonishing. This year it fell on a Sunday, the boys therefore took Saturday night, or the 30th day of October, as the night of execution. This night is the eve of Hallow ave, and from time immemorial has been celebrated by throwing handfuls of corn against the windows of poor unprotected widows and weak kneed citizens, who are unable to account for the sound on the glass, and think it is a summons home, or the beginning of the end.

Hallow'een is the time when fairies, our "good neighbors," are especially busy; and any strange noises, or work done at this season at night is to be accounted for solely as the work of these "good neighbors." For instance if a yoke of oxen is found in the schoolroom or neighbors trade gates, or a buggy is put upon a roof, an outhouse overturned, or a dwelling pelted with cabbages, nobody is supposed to blame it on a party of boys, but if they are wise will let it pass as the work of the fairies.

Last Saturday night a large party of boys assembled, but there was little devilment in their make-up. They succeeded in uprooting about six large heads of cabbage and restacked a pile of lumber. They thumped a few cabbages against a house or two, and took the rest off and ate them. The cold salad seemed to have a depressing effect, and, much to the disappointment of each citizen, they went home without having raised his neighbor any special trouble. Even the letting off of a shotgun in the stilly night by an awakened citizen seemed to put no new life in them. They went thro their program in a perfunctory manner and were much inclined to shirk their work. As we said before they were more inclined to eat the cabbage than to use it in the time - honored way of hurling it against people's doors.

We would recommend that they study Thomas Bailey Aldrich's "Story of a Bad Boy"; or get some points from William Allen White, who writes about "The King of Boyville." Failing in this, they might talk to some Boy who has been a"boy in his time and get up a more interesting program for next year.

The Rime of the Ancient Fugitive.

It was a bleary eyed hobo man,
And he stopped'n one of three;
"By the bib con jutice on thy beaten's front,
Wherefore stoppest thou me?"

He holds him with a skinny hand,
"There was a farm," quoth he.
"In West Virginia, wh-nce I came,
To let wild turkeys be.

"Last spring I clear-ed a patch of ground
With axe and grubbing hoe,
Let in the sun and burned the logs
And planted corn to grow.

"Each day I worked the loamy soil,
The crop was made at last,
I shocked the corn, and counted then
The danger all was past.

"One morning I went to the patch,
The day was drizzling rain,
There was a flock of turkey birds
Destroying my good grain.

"I threw the rocks, the robbers flew,
Next day right back they came;
I got my gun, but then the law
Protected such wi'd game.

"The turkeys fed on my corn shocks
Until they all grew fat,
My grain was turned to turkey meat,
And when I thought of that

"There was no meat in my smokehouse
And mark what next occurred,
The thing-t done with my sh- tgun
I shot a turkey bird.

"And I had done a hellish thing,
The grand jury worked me woe,
For they averred I'd killed the bird
And laid the statute low.

"The wreach,' said they, 'the bird to
That should be left to grow.' [slay

"That night quite late I left the State,
I could not chose but get,
The sheriff came, his horse was lame,
I'm unattached as yet.

"Upon those West Virginia hills
My eyes look not again:
And all because the unjust laws
Let varmints eat my grain.

Musical Association.

Editor of THE TIMES:

Having just returned from attending the Musical Association, I will give you a short account of the meeting.

The semi-annual meeting of the Pocahontas County Musical Association met at Green Bank last week, and was in session October 28, 29, 30. It was as nice a meeting as the Association has ever had.

The people of Green Bank entertained the visitors most royally, and the attendance was fine.

There were a large number of leaders of singing from all parts of the county. Dunmore and Green Bank have a number of fine organists. The singing was grand.

We cannot undertake to mention by name all the leaders there, but there were "professors" of music on all sides of the church, in the yard, on the fence and in the road, and we need as many more.

Officers were elected were John Waugh, President (3d term) Harlow Waugh, secretary; A. M. Oliver, recording secretary; M. F. Ruckman, vice president.

Mr H. M. Moore entertained the audience highly with a graminophone.

The people of Green Bank have the thanks for their kindness and hospitality to their visiting friends.

JOHN D. ROKEE.

The Pocahontas County Musical Association met at Green Bank October 28th and lasted three days and nights. A very large crowd attended from all parts of the county, and many persons from adjoining counties. Great interest was manifested by all, and science of music is advancing rapidly in our county.

Some able addresses were made before the Association by Dr J. P. Mooman, Professor D. L. Barlow, J. B. Warwick, Rev A. M. Eavey, C. B. Sweeker, and others. Some persons might have thought a Patrick Henry, a Spurgeon, or a W. J. Bryan was on hand. The very best of order prevailed all the time. The talking machines operated by Professor H. M. Moore and Dr C. L. Austin seemed to strike the tickle of the audience very much, and they responed with much laughter and cheers.

Professors were John Waugh, M. F. and O. W. Ruckman, John Rorke and two sons, Calvin Gay, Marvin Carter, Thomas Courtney, M. A. Friel, George E. Moore, W. A. Bussard, C. B. and R. D. Sweeker, H. M. Moore, M. F. Herold, A. M. Oliver, C. O. Arbogast, J. D. Wilmouth, Frank Hoorbin, Rev. Caldwell and Eavey, D. R. Taylor, Mrs H. M. Moore, Mrs Wardell Arbogast, and Miss Flora Moomaw performed at the organ admirably well. Old and young thought the session sublime, indeed. We missed that good old genial musical man, Brother W. T. Price.

The Association has a standing invitation to come to Green Bank when it suits her to do so. The visiting members appreciate the kindness and hospitality shown them while there.

Now the people have a feast about to come keep it up. Let all the leaders of classes go to work this winter and sing in the church and school houses. Encourage the science of music all you can, and next spring we will fill the hills of old Pocahontas full of joyful sounds.

STATE NEWS.

ABRAM HOSTELLER, of Rockbridge County, Va., raised 3,000 bushels of wheat on his farm.

THE county court of Cabell County issued an order compelling all prisoners serving time in the county jail to work on the county roads.

THERE are now in the deaf, dumb and blind school at Romney 58 deaf and dumb girls, 60 deaf and dumb boys, 26 blind girls and 21 blind boys—a total of 175.

CHARLES HATMAKER was killed at Clarksburg, October 28, while attempting to crawl between some freight cars. The cars were moved by a yard engine and his head was cut off.

THE Ensign Manufacturing Company, of Huntington, has received an order from the San Francisco and San Joaquin Valley Railroad Company for 100 thirty-ton cars.

FROM Berkley County comes the information that burnt corn is a sure cure for hog cholera. It was discovered by burnt corn from a distillery being fed to hogs suffering from the malady during the recent epidemic of hog cholera in that section.

WHILE digging a well on their property near the depot last week the Koon Marble Company found, at a depth of twenty feet, a well-preserved piece of wood—chestnut or hemlock—whittled out in the shape of a spread. The work of the knife, or cutting tool, could be plainly seen. The supposition is that the Indians, or some other race of people, possessed it.—Philippi Republican.

A GILMER COUNTY wedding was followed by the usual country charivari. During the noisy progress of which Woodford Bailey, brother of the bridegroom, put 18 inches of powder into an old musket and tamped it tight, and held it above his head and fired it off. The gun burst and tore and mangled his left hand and arm in a frightful manner, and it was found necessary to amputate the arm at the elbow.

A NEW regulation has been adopted at the Washington and Lee University, and that is that the student body meet together in the university chapel every Wednesday morning when prayer-meeting is held. Immediately after the services are over there will be a brief address delivered, generally by President Wilson, on some current topic of the day, and sometimes a member of the faculty will deliver the address.

A SON of Hanson Heater, of Braxton County is in the Klondike country, and, according to the Braxton Democrat, he has made a big pile, besides holding interests in sixteen undeveloped mines. In a letter to his family he says, among other things, that they do not observe our Sunday up there but, nevertheless, rest one day out of the seven; that in the afternoon of one of those days he strolled around one of his mines and picked up $400 in the course of his stroll, probably for exercise. Heater went west with a saw mill several years ago, and kept going until he struck the Yukon.

IN Boone County, last July, St. Clair Ballard, who had been jailer for some time, died, and forthwith the scramble for the position made vacant began. The local politician got in his work, but his efforts failed to materialize, and Mrs Ballard, the wife of the former jailer, was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mrs Ballard is a perfect specimen of womanhood, stands about five feet six, and is as intepid and fearless as her husband before her. Her cool grey eye looks along the barrel of a revolver as calmly as tho she were discussing the latest thing in fall hats, and there is not a man in the county who does not acknowledge her his equal in courage. Mrs Ballard is the only female jailer in the United States, and she carries her honors gracefully. The appointment gives universal satisfaction.—Huntington Advertiser.

The Pocahontas Times.

As the result of the killing of a player by the University of Virginia at Atlanta, resolutions were introduced in both houses of the legislature to prevent football being played in Georgia.

JUDGE BRAZIE, of the criminal court of Fayette County, died last week. He had suffered amputation for blood poisoning at the knee, a few weeks before his death. He was a nephew of the late Roscoe Conkling.

THOMAS THORNBURY, of Huntington, died October 31. He was the oldest Free Mason in the State. He had been secretary of his lodge, No 13, for forty-six consecutive years. He had represented Cabell County twice in the Virginia and twice in the West Virginia legislature. He was Cabell's representative in the constitutional convention of 1872.

THE Union Pacific was sold at public auction to the reorganized committee formed to purchase it, at Omaha, November 1. It was bought at a bid of $57,564,931.96. This is the deal in which so many newspapers saw intended fraud toward the United States. The sale was the foreclosure of a mortgage held by the government, and the purchasers bought the property subject to a lien for the cost of construction. A sale under this lien was held the next day. The sale was made by an auctioneer on a door step a windy, cold day. The reading of the advertisement consumed forty minutes. This railway was built in pursuance to liberal concessions allowed by act of Congress passed in 1862, amended in 1864. It received the assent of President Lincoln. The terms given by the government were extravagantly liberal. A right of way 400 feet wide was granted through the public domain, with the right to take material for construction from adjacent public land, and twenty alternate sections for each mile of railway built, except coal and mineral land and land already preempted. The government advanced bonds to the amount of sixteen to forty-eight thousand dollars for each mile of road built and took a second mortgage to secure it. It is for this debt that the sale was made. We hope for the honor of the nation that all was fair in the deal; not that we would miss the $33,000,000 we lose about, but for the sake of the honesty of our public men.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

James Waugh, Jr.

It is proposed in this paper to give some particulars illustrating the family history of Jas. Waugh, Jr. He was the eldest son of Jas. Waugh, the Scotch-Irish emigrant who was among the first to open land and build a home in "The Hills." In these memoirs he will be spoken of as James Waugh the second. Early in life he married Rebecca McGuire, from Pennsylvania whose name indicates Scotch ancestry, and settled on the Greenbrier where James Waugh the 3d recently lived, now occupied by Rudolph Waugh. In reference to the sons and daughters we learn that Rachel Waugh was married to Frederick Fleming.

Nancy Waugh became Mrs Abraham Griffin, and lived many years on Buckley Mountain, a few miles east of Buckeye. Mrs Claiborne McNeil, near Buckeye, is his daughter.

Elizabeth Waugh was married to John Ratliffe, and lived on Clover Creek.

Jacob Waugh married Mary Brown, daughter of Josiah Brown, near the Indian Draft, and spent the most of his married life in Upshur County. They were the parents of fifteen children. Only five however lived to be grown.

Jacob Waugh was a local Methodist minister of prominence. He was a very fine penaman, and became Clerk of the Upshur County Court and occupied that responsible position for many years, and will be remembered as one of the best citizens in the history of Upshur county affairs.

James Waugh, the third of that name in this genealogy, married Sally Cochran, daughter of John Cochran, eldest son of Thomas Cochran, the progenitor of the Cochran relationship in Pocahontas county. He settled on the Greenbrier at the old homestead. His second wife was Hanna Lamb, from Highland county. In the sketch of Pocahontas County given in Hardesty's Encyclopedia the reader will find biographic details of James Waugh's personal history.

Morgan Waugh went to Kanawha county.

Allen Waugh went to Missouri and settled there.

Isabella Waugh became the wife of John Brock and settled in Kanawha county.

Marcus Waugh, the youngest son of James Waugh, married Susan Johnson, daughter of William Johnson, on the Greenbrier near Verdant Valley. He settled on a farm adjoining the Waugh homestead higher up the river a few miles east of Poage's Lane.

The friends and members of the Waugh relationship are mainly indebted to Mrs Nancy Shrader for whatever pleasure these memoirs may afford them.

Lorenzo Waugh, a son of James the second, became a distinguished evangelist. From his autobiography, published in San Francisco, copies of which are in the possession of his friends in Pocahontas, we learn that he was born in 1808 at the home on the Greenbrier where his earlier years were spent. At the age of sixteen he was a teacher in Harrison county. He was a teacher in Mason county in 1832, entered the Methodist ministry in that year, and was junior preacher on the Guyandotte circuit. In 1833 he rode the Nicholas county circuit and was transferred to the Ohio conference in 1834. In 1835 he became a member of the Missouri Conference. On one of his Missouri circuits he met Miss Clarissa Jane Ede ll, but his heart once more and was accepted, and the preacher did the rest. It seems he first lost his heart in "The Hills" about fascinating time; but time makes up for such losses with the patient and persevering.

In 1837 Lorenzo Waugh was an Indian missionary to the Shawanoe nation. It was the Shawanoe who did the most being Indian tribes in Pennsylvania, and long we find in Ohio of four a Pennsylvania preacher telling of Jesus and his love to those people whose warriors had slain Baker and the Bridger boys not far from where he had been born and reared, and who had often tried to kill Jacob Warwick, Lorenzo Waugh's best friend of his early boyhood. How very interestingly things will come around as time passes.

In 1840 Lorenzo Waugh rode the Platte River circuit, now in Nebraska; and in 1848 he entered the Illinois Conference. In 1851, with his family he crossed the plains and settled in the Petaluma Valley, in California, in which State he has ever since been occupied as preacher and temperance lecturer. His strictures on the use of Tobacco are very severe, and he has to turn up his nose whenever the "devil's perfumery" is in the air. As for whiskey, the words have yet to be made to express the abhorrence he feels, as all present words for loathing and disgust are too tame to answer the purpose in describing the satanic broth Beelzebub, as it appears to him from his way of looking at its dire results on the American people. It is believed that he still lives in his charming Petulsma home, and if so he is 80 years of age. He tells in his autobiography how Major Jacob Warwick gave him a colt for beating a young man at a footrace. This race came off the day that John Sharp's house was raised, now occupied by J. Wesley Irvine near Verdant Valley, and probably occurred in the meadow just below. During the greater part of his vastly extended itinerancy Lorenza Waugh used horses that were the offspring of the animal presented him by Major Warwick.

This paper will be closed by a brief reference to the sisters of James and Samuel Waugh. Jane and Margaret Waugh, daughters of James and Mary Waugh, the original ancestors of the Pocahontas relationship.

Jane Waugh was married to Timothy McCarty and, lived on Knapp's Creek, near Mt. Vernon. Her daughter Mary was Hon. Levi Moore's second wife. Samuel McCarty. Sally McCarty became Mrs Boggs, and lived in Greenbrier; Jane became Mrs Harvey Casebolt; Reuben McCarty died in youth; Martha Ann perished during the war and her remains were never found; Jacob McCarty, member of the legislature, were Jane Waugh's children.

Margaret Waugh was married to Arthur Grimes, son of Felix Grimes the pioneer, and lived *where Lewis Carpenter now re*sides. Katy Grimes became Mrs Mullinax, and lived in Pendleton county; Polly Grimes was married to William Cunningham in the same county; Nancy Grimes died young; Arthur Grimes married Elizabeth E. Cumstad, of Pendleton, and settled in Upshur county; Samuel Grimes married Margaret Dysard, of Anthony's Creek, and settled near home; John Grimes died in early youth; David Grimes married Mary Grimes, daughter of James Grimes, of Felix.

We have had under consideration a family of Pocahontas citizenship, many of whose members made the best of their opportunities for mental and moral improvement and became prominent and useful persons in their respective spheres. With such a family history those who now represent these families have every inducement to attempt higher results, as their advantages as so far superior to what their ancestry had in reach.

Intelligent, pious tillers of the soil as the hope of the country and the hope of the world. May it be the will of an all-wise Providence to favor our county with many of those who have pious minds and willing hands and thus properly develop one of the most beautiful and attractive regions on earth when considered all in all. A self supporting people relying on God and themselves can never be degraded. A home made up of farm and friends is the nearest place on earth to heaven. S. E. S.

THE FOOT EVIL.

Young eyes that last June smiled in ours,
Now seek the ear lost in the scrimmage;
And hands which toyed with fruits and flowers,
Commit rude mayhem on God's image.

The casualties resulting from a Cuban engagement and an average American college game of football as it is played are about the same. A few years ago one or two substitutes was looked upon as a sufficient reserve, but now the relay of substitutes run up to a number almost sufficient to form a second team. After every game the players limp off each hurt a little all over his body. The treatment he has been subjected to would kill half the lower animals in the world. Put a pursley citizen in the game for ten minutes and he would lie down like a fat hog, and the bystanders would save his life by pouring cold water over him for two hours.

In every game the opposing forces charge each other enmasse and all go down in one struggling heap. They untangle themselves and most of them leap to their feet, but nothing is more common than to see a motionless figure on the grass. His comrades rub him back to life or he limps out of the game with a contusion on his head, a ruined face, a lost tooth, a broken nose, a dislocation, or some other injury. Often he is carried out, dumped unceremoniously, and the game goes on. This is all the spectators see. They say the wind is knocked out of him and he will be all right presently. But next day the papers said that he had concussion of the brain, or a broken neck, and that he is dead.

Every year we can calculate on about a dozen fatalities, and considering that there are only a few hundreds of players the death rate is right large.

The main trouble is that the players have a double object in stopping the man with the ball. They want to stop him from gaining another inch, and stop him so hard that he will not be such a strong antagonist. They catch him round the hips and throw him so heavily that he is several minutes in getting himself in a shape to be dangerous.

The University of Virginia killed a man at Atlanta the other day in the most brutal manner imaginable. He was Richard Von Gammon, full-back on the team of the University of Georgia. The account of the killing as given by the press is in these words:

"Just after the second half of the game had begun, Virginia was maneuvering in one corner of the field. The attack was directed against Gammon. He was thrown and several of Virginia's heavy men fell on him. Some assert that Gammon's body was doubled and that his feet struck his head, causing the injury; but no definite account of the affair can be had."

It had been better for Gammon if he had surrendered or called for help. It is a most fearful thing to think that an attack was intended on his person, that such an attack was made, and that as a result the boy was killed. All the entertainment the sport affords the spectators, and all the excitement it gives the players, year by year, is a small thing compared with a life.

The Chancellor of the University of Georgia will forbid any more football by any of his students.

The devotees of the game are intemperate in their tastes. There are a half-dozen varieties of football that are comparatively harmless, but the American college student insists that they are too tame for him. They have consequently devised a game which admits of every atrocity being committed. Where men are killed and where individual skill is sacrificed to combined efforts and to a display of brute force. The innocent pig skin does not enter the game to any great extent, and the game could be played almost as well with any other object. If the same sum it might finally get to be football with the head ball left out.

If nothing else can be done, the college authorities might adopt a game which is played in England sometimes with but one player on a side. Then there would be no more grinding up of the sons of men, and we would hear the last of a man killed at such a merry making.

When we started to write this homily we had thought of treating the matter lightly, but the spirit moved us in a different way; and we suppose the subject has ceased to be a "laughing matter."

QUARREL IN PRINT.

The editors of the Randolph papers like each other not even a little, and such passages as the following are of usual occurrence:

James Hebden and wife, of Mingo, were registered at the Valley House Monday and Tuesday.—Enterprise.

Yes, Kildow, they were registered just for dinner those two days, but were compelled to come to Elkins at night, and would have come to Elkins for their dinners had they had time. One meal a day in Beverly is about as much as any one can stand.—The Inter-Mountain.

If the editor of the Inter-Mountain would come to Beverly and pay for the hotel register he mutilated while in a beastly state of intoxication, the above would come with better grace.—Enterprise.

We would recommend the following code of laws from Shakespeare, in "As You Like It":

TOUCHSTONE—O, sir, we quarrel in print, by the book; as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous; the second, the Quip modest; the third, the Reply churlish; the fourth, the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie circumstantial; the seventh, the Lie direct. All these you may avoid but the lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If, as If you said so, then I said so; and they shook hands and swore brothers. Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

THREE NEW WORDS.

Among the things to make last year's Presidential campaign one long to be remembered is the fact that three new words were coined, and future dictionaries will have to find a place for them; McKinleyism, Bryanism, and Yerkesism. We are indebted to some talented writer of the Chicago Chronicle for the following clear definitions of these new words. Words have been coined even if silver did get a backset.

According to the writer referred to, McKinleyism is the proper name of a political system that through protective legislation increases the prices and profits of manufacturers by subsidies drawn from the earnings of tax-payers. By the plan of duties and bounties the people are made to pay an increased price for all the necessaries of living so as to build up the wealth of the classes protected.

As to Bryanism he says it is virtually the same thing with silver substituted in the place of wool, copper, lumber, glass, tin, and iron and gold, Bryanism demands coinage laws that will produce the same profit for the silver miners that the wool, iron, and copper and gold producers derive from protective tariff and coinage laws of the McKinley fashion.

Mr Yerkes is the Chicago street car gentleman whose name may not be quite so familiar to the reader. Yerkesism however is pretty much the same thing in substance as the isms mentioned.

The city ordinances give Mr Yerkes the use of streets which are public property, and maintained by taxpayers, the same as protective laws create a monopoly of manufactured goods at the expense of those who consume the goods, and much the same as free coinage would doubly enrich the silver owners at the expense of every body except the silver diggers. So it seems these isms run on parallel lines ending at the pocket books of the taxpayers.

Each of these isms, McKinley, Bryan, and Yerkes, seems to be a plan that results in personal, private enrichment at public expense. According to this writer, who claims to view everything from an independent standpoint, each of these words represents a monopoly created and protected by law. Neither monopoly is different from the others in its purposes and results, and in its support under class and special legislation.

This is an eye opener with a vengeance, but the friends of Bryanism have this for their consolation, it is by far the least objectionable, and has a record from 1792 to 1873, that is not to be ashamed of, as long as Washington, Jefferson, Hamilton, and Franklin be deemed worthy of due respect for their opinions.

S. C. R.

THE Times acknowledges the receipt of a copy of the inaugural number of the Athenæum, of the University. It contains a full and minute account of all that was said and done at the inauguration of President Jerome H. Raymond. Upon a review of its contents one feels amazed at what the new administration aspires to.

Prof. W. R. Harper, of Chicago, who has had so much to do in moulding the educational character of the new president, gives the keynote in these words: "The modern man, whether scholar or practical worker, whether statesman or educator, must know the past, be in touch with the present and anticipate the future. To know the past is a duty; to be in touch with the present an imperative necessity; to have constantly in mind the future, a privilege which will prove at once the source of comfort and inspiration." He then gives his ideal of what he considers the best methods of instruction to make this modern man or woman.

President Raymond in an elaborate address sets forth the means he thinks to be the best adapted to realize the purpose in view. These two educational souls truly seem to beat as one.

Several other interesting addresses were made, but time and space are not available to render full justice to their merits. Should the regents of the University and the friends of education, by progressive measures, throughout the State respond to all this new administration with heart and hand, we are on the eve of an intellectual era never dreamed of even by most of living men, to say nothing of the teachers of former generations. Should these marvellous ideas, however, fail to materialize very soon, as one of the speakers aptly quoted, there will be this to console:

"What I aspired to be
And was not comforts me."

"I'm not what a man do a which ennobles him, but what man would do."

ARBOR DAY.

The Superintendent of Schools has set aside the 19th day of November as Arbor Day for the State of West Virginia, the same to be a legal holiday. The school children of Pocahontas will please take notice of the day and destroy some of the brush around their respective school houses. This will be obeying the spirit of the institution. Where grass is needed more than boundless contignities of shade, then the school children can derive more benefit from "redding" up a bit of ground and freeing it from brush than they can to start forth on an expedition to make a new forest.

Let us imagine a celebration on the part of one of our Pocahontas schools. The injunction of the State Superintendent is read to the handful of scholars and the teacher talks on the necessity of trees to the well-being of the earth. The boys and girls will probably think of the corn-patch at home where the trees insist on growing faster than they can be sprouted down. But still they may agree with Whittier, who says:

Give fools their gold, and knaves their power,
Let Fortune's bubbles rise and fall,
Who sows a field, or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree, is more than all.

The next day the scholars, such as can be spared from husking corn, meet and the teacher leads them into the woods. There they learn something of the extraction of roots by pulling some maples or other small saplings. These they take and having taken seek a place to set them out again. Their school-house is the proper place for them, and if it is not already surrounded by woods it would be a very fine thing to transplant them there, only no man would insure the life of a tree for ninety-nine cents on the dollar that has been recently transplanted into the play-ground of a school.

The historic games of "prisoners base," "bull-in-the-ring," "sow-in-the-mush-pot," "burny," "shoot-buck," and other sports interfere with their healthy growth. The trees do not flourish and in a short time they are dead.

Another plan of working on Arbor Day is for the young innocents to take bags of walnuts, acorns and hickory nuts and go on excursions and dig a hole and put a seed in wherever the spirit moves them. With us we have no waste places, and the old farmer, whose life struggle it is to keep down the brush in his hackings and other fields, would not approve of people planting trees there.

Real arboriculture must necessarily be very much of a farce in a county like ours, where so many perfectly formed trees are destroyed every year in clearing ground. The ground not in actual use for agriculture or stockraising purposes is already covered with such timber as the earth affords sustenance or the forest fires allow to live, and our efforts would only be directed to ornamental purposes, and we know the spirit of the majority of our cabinets, who, while building in the very heart of the forest, clear away every tree from near their homes.

Arboriculture receives great attention in Europe. The forests are pruned and thinned more carefully than our orchards. Hundreds of years ago the inhabitants there began to cover their unused lands with forests, and now most of the woodland of the Continent has been planted and raised by the hand of man. In England a gentleman who sells his oak trees is financially on his last legs.

Many years must elapse before a forest planted by hand would yield timber in return for the troubles taken, and the day has not quite come for us to be interested in tree planting more than our artistic sense should teach us to ornament our homes with shade trees. What we do lack the is fruit trees. It brings the merest and earliest return, but year after year those intending to plant an orchard put off the task until they look back over ten years of wasted opportunity and think what a comfort and pride it would be to have a good orchard. If arbor day would put this in mind then it would amount to something. Plant apple trees, or graft a good apple on a worthless seedling, and you have done something for your country.

The newly elected mayor of New York will have a larger amount of political patronage to bestow than all his predecessors for twenty-five years together.

THE POCAHONTAS TIMES.

Five years ago this issue the present proprietors took charge of this paper, and since then have labored more or less faithfully to get out a paper each week and to give the people of the county as good a paper as possible under the circumstances. In that time they have only missed one issue, and that week we all felt as if we had forgot to do something that we ought to have done, and so far we have not repeated the experiment, and we have been blessed in not having suffered from accidents which might have delayed or hindered us. For four consecutive years the paper has not missed an issue. We take the opportunity of this anniversary to acknowledge the excellent support given us by the people of Pocahontas county, and to thank our patrons for their uniform kindness to us. There have been times when the people would not do any thing startling for us to report and we were compelled to draw on the imagination, but by hook and by crook we have sent out some sort of a bulletin each week. During the five years our subscription has by imperceptible degrees just doubled itself, and the gist of what we wish to say is to hope that the people of the county are as well pleased with The Times as The Times is pleased with them.

BITS OF JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

A book of poems of this delightful writer came under our observation the other day, and we will give some of the things that seemed to "run in the head" after reading them. A great many people object that his rhymes do not make sense but neither does the water falling over rocks, but both may be pleasant to the ear. The man, who can sing words together so that they string, need make no excuse for "jingling," when the muse takes him in her irresistable embrace.

The children that Riley loves to write about are very entertaining, if there is no sense in them, and his lines nearly always call up the bright little fellows who have most of them arrived at the only age when they are interesting.

Granny's come to our house!
An' he! my lawzy daisy!
All the children round the place
Is ist a-running crazy!
Fetched a cake for little Jake,
An' fetched a pie ror Nanny,
An' fetched the pie for all the pack
'At runs to kiss their granny.

Then "The Pet Coon" commences this way:

Noey Baxter ketched him and fetched him in to me,
When he's ist a little teensy-weensy baby-coon.
'Bout as big as little pups, an' tied him to a tree:
An' pa gived Noey fifty-cents when he come home at noon.

At Aunty's House.

"An' I ist et p'serves and things
'At ma don't 'low me to —
An' chicken-gizards — (dont like wings
Like grown folks does) do you?
An' all the time the wind blowed there
An' I could feel it in my hair,
An' ist smell clover ever'where!
An' a old red head flew
Frettin nigh withe over my high chair,
If I'as me at on the porch!

The "Raggedy Man" has some wonderful tales to tell the little boy about his Grandfather Squeers.

"He remarkably deaf was my Grandfather Squeers,
That he had to wear lightning-rods over his ears
To keep hear thunder — and often times
then,
He was forced to request it to thunder again."

Our Hired Girl.

Our hired girl, she's Lisabeth Ann:
An' she can cook best things to eat!
She let puts dough in our pie p' it,
An' pours in sourgras' as good and sweet,
An' uses she salts it all on top
With cinnamon, an' uses she'll stop
An' stoop an' slide it, let us view,
In 'n' out each alcove, an' 'n round slop
An' git all spilled; uses bakes it, so
It's outward go first thing you know!
An' uses she'll say:
"Clear out o' my way!
Take your dumps an' run child; run,
Lr I can't git no cookin' done!"

A Nonsense Rhyme.

Sing, O sing!
Of the things that cling,
And the claws that clutch and the fangs that sting —
Tell the beggar's tongues
And his tuf suffering
Quartered and baited with a long answering!
O the dark danger in the dark outcast, where the crow-bait carouse in the crib-
ing grass,
And the long feast around of the lean wolfs on
For the end, and end
Of a bad beggar
Cursed bad and good.

GREENBRIER VALLEY DEMOCRAT.

A circular letter under the above caption is being sent out from Ronceverte, copies being sent to the county papers of Pocahontas, Greenbrier and Monroe requesting them to publish the same, promulgating a brilliant scheme to form a stock company with an unlimited membership, (each member being a subscriber of course) and the shares at $5 each. They propose to buy a $1200 plant and setting up the same at Ronceverte to engage the best editorial talent of all that region and with a grand combination of wit and logic combat the evil influences of a certain Republican sheet soon to be issued from the printing office of the Valley Messenger.

We regard the movement as chimerical, as the region has already more papers than it can support, and agree with the Monroe Watchman which says, "In fairness to all parties we do not think it could be made a paying investment."

Further the committee indirectly reflect upon, and ignore the efforts of certain weekly papers occupying the Greenbrier Valley, all Democratic. Let us see if the forces already in the field cannot cope with the new adversary.

The above are chunks of rhyme from the author's book called "Rhymes of Childhood." They are not meant to save the State or any such purpose, but they please the ear and leave a good taste in the mouth of the reader.

The many friends of Hon A. F. Withrow, of Bath county, will be pleased to hear of his return to the Virginia legislature by a majority of over two hundred. In 1896 his district gave a Republican majority of over a thousand.

The West Virginia Bar Association has been in session at Morgantown. D. C. Westenhaver, of Martinsburg, was chosen President. The next meeting will be held at Charleston during the next regular session of the legislature.

The F. F. V. train, running between Cincinnati and Washington, was derailed last Thursday near Charlottesville by the breaking of an axle on the locomotive. Four passengers were killed and seventeen injured.

Prof George Frederick Holmes, of the University of Virginia, is dead. He held the chair of history and literature in that institution for just forty years. He was born in British Guiana in 1820, and was educated in England. He was the author of a number of text books used in the schools of this country.

When the returns came creeping into Pocahontas in 1892, when a political revolution elected Cleveland, a Democrat passed a hillside cornfield, in which one of the most stalwart Republicans of the county was shucking corn, away at the upper side. He hailed the passerby, and asked him the news of the election.

"All gone Democratic! Cleveland is elected by a big majority!"

"It's all a lie! Justwait till I see my To-le do Blade!"

Even the Toledo Blade, then and now, concedes very heavy Democratic votes cast at the polls.

The Monroe Watchman complains that the schools of that county are over crowded. It is a pity that the same cannot be said of Pocahontas county. As a rule our schools have hardly enough pupils to make the work interesting for the teacher. There are few schools in this county that have an average daily attendance of twenty.

Look out! Some game wardens have been especially deputized to guard the game of Pocahontas. We are not certainly informed of their names. To quote Shakespeare, "The hunter now suspicions every bush an officer." The deputies are citizens of this county. The sentiment here seems to be to observe the law except when wild turkeys make depredations on corn fields, and then it seems to be more than flesh and blood can stand.

On Friday night, Howard Tibbs, a colored citizen living in the Flat Woods three miles from Marlinton had his home burned to ashes. The inmates were at meeting and the fire is believed to have caught from the chimney. The family returned to find the house entirely burned up. Everything was destroyed, even his winter supplies of provisions. The loss is a sad one and elicits much sympathy. Tibbs is a negro of the best ordinary enterprise and industry. Prompt measures are taken to rebuild and replace in a measure the misfortune that has befallen him.

The wild turkeys have at last invaded the county seat of Pocahontas. A few weeks ago a deer was seen grazing in a field not over a hundred yards from the court-house and last week a large flock of wild turkeys actually came into the streets and vacant lots of the town plot of Marlinton. The upper part of the town has been used as as a corn-field pending future development, and the turkeys opened it out. There is hardly a corn-field in this county that wild turkeys have not been ravaging, and this corn-field so near the town was no exception.

The one question has always been a momentous one in the domestic economy of Marlinton since the first development of the place. Lately the grisly critters have been breaking into corn-fields, and now cleaning has got to be the order of the day and night. One gentleman in the suburbs keeps his two cows out of mischief during the day by yoking them in a sled and working them right along. It does not seem to interfere with the milk supply. Sunday morning two more were found to be a serious predicament. A large red cow with crumpled horns had slipped down over the upper part of the neck of a white one, twisting her neck sideways and cutting off most of her air supply. They had remained in this position quite a while before discovered, and it was an hour or more before they were unyoked and then the red one started off at a great pace while the other almost keeled away. We sometimes hear of wild animals of the deer tribe partaking in this way—the skeletons found with the horns locked in the branch prey, and these cases should doubtless have met a like fate. Another time a cow pursued by a dog came from the woods at a great pace, and stopping unexpectedly to a ditch found herself on her head with her hind legs in the air and her neck lying quite still. Thinking the end of sweet red clover fancy, or mistaking her end.

Dr. McClintic's House Burned.

Tuesday morning, Dr F. T. McClintic's house burned in the village of Hillsboro. The fire originated from a defective flue in the kitchen. The fire was discovered about 9 o'clock in the morning and the building was soon consumed. Most of the household effects were saved. The physician's office built to the house was also destroyed.

Shooting Affray.—Ledford Bartlett Shoots a Lumberman.

(Webster Echo)

Wednesday evening about 4:30 o'clock, L. C. Bartlett, a painter, who has for the past two years has made Addison his home, and Patrick Johnson, a woodsman, engaged in a fight in Walter Standard's store, on the corner of Main and Buttermilk streets. Bystanders seperated them and Bartlett went off uptown, leaving Johnson standing in front of the store. Bartlett soon came back and this time he had in his possession a 38-calibre revolver, which he flourished as he came. Johnson who bears the reputation of being a fearless fighter and who was considerably under the influence of whiskey, paid no attention to the revolver, but went at Bartlett like a man eating tiger. When but a few feet of space separated the men, Bartlett fired, the ball striking the fighting Irishman in the left temple, ranged around the skull, and made an ugly tho not a serious wound. After being shot Johnson knocked Bartlett down, jumped on him and was getting in his licks in true pugilistic style when he was pulled off by parties present.

It is said that Johnson does not bear the reputation of being a very peaceable citizen and rumor has it that he has been engaged in several shooting scrapes during his stay in this county. Bartlett has always been considered a quiet and inoffensive man by the people of Addison, but has been drinking heavily of late and was in a ugly mood. He was arrested and given a preliminary hearing before Squire A. M. Payne, and Bartlett was held to await the action of the grand-jury which, Thursday morning, returned a true bill against him for shooting with intent to kill.

A "General" Invitation.

The following lines were written during the war by an unknown author:

"Come, leave the noisy Longstreet,
And come to the Fields with me;
Trip o'er the Heth with flying feet,
And skip along the Lee.
Then Ewell find the flowers that be Along the Stonewall still,
And pluck the buds of fleeting pea
That grow on A. P. Hill.
Across the Rhodes the Forest boughs

Where sadly pipes the Early bird
That never caught the worm.
Come hasten, for the Beer is gone,
And Wilson lies on the plain.
Come, braid a Garland o'er the leaves

"Bud" Phillip's "Dust-Whirler."

Speaking of bicycles, I saw the oddest looking and most novel one at a cross roads hamlet near the Tennessee line, while hunting a few years ago, I ever saw. It was made by "Bub" Philips, a black genius of 11, who had once worked on a railroad section between Scottsville and Gallatin. The two wheels were solid wooden ones and the frame two plow handles. The gearing had been constructed out of an old pump chain that Bub begged tof a farmer. The darky could ride the cumbersome looking "dust whirler" at a rapid rate of speed, and would be able to make astonishing good time on a track. I asked the lad if he wouldn't like to "go to town" and ride in the races, but he showed his white teeth in a grin and said: "Naw, suh, boss, I caint do it, fu' dey all want er trade fer ol' Hanner, an' I doan wan' ter trade 'er off." Bub said his steed cost him six cents, and he made it in three days, and a half.—Louisville Post.

Davis, Tucker County, now a town of 3,500 inhabitants, with one of the largest and best equipped saw mills in the State, the West Virginia Paper Company's large plant, and the second largest tannery in the United State, was ten years ago the centre of an unbroken forest.

The drug store of S. T. Anderson, insured for $1,500, and the photograph gallery of R. T. Donovan were destroyed by fire at Bayard, W. Va., on the West Virginia Central this week. Mike Long, a baseball player, Benezette, Pa., and a man named Anderson, who is from Rock Hill, S. C., have been arrested for incendiarism. Long confessed that Anderson had punched a small hole in a kerosene oil tank in the wareroom where the fire originated, had set a candle, which, by careful experiment, he had timed to set on fire an oiled string running to the oil and to some oiled excelsior, and ignited the combustibles at 2 a. m., and had then left for Elk Garden, paying him $50 to see that the contrivance worked all right, give the alarm and get his trunk out. Both are now in jail at Maysville.

Sunday morning, October 24, one of the fastest and heaviest trains on the New York Central plunged into the Hudson River, near the town of Garrison. Nineteen persons either drowned or crushed in the wreck, and many others injured. Another train was not far behind. In the confusion this seems to have been forgotten, until a man appeared, his face terribly cut and torn and clothing covered with blood, and as he limped forward it was apparent that one of his legs had been crushed. As persons approached him to give him assistance he waved them off, calling out, "Has any one flagged the other train?" Reckoning not of his own injuries, he pressed on and flagged the coming train. By his presence of mind and courage the train was stopped and a second accident averted. This shows that heroes will appear when needed.

Wilson—Hogsett.

On Tuesday, 2 p. m., a quiet marriage occurred at the residence of Mrs Susan Friel, on the Greenbrier five miles above Marlinton. Oliver E. Wilson and Miss Eudora Frances, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs Wellington Hogsett, of Mill Point, were married by Rev W. T. Price. The friends of these worthy young people sincerely wish them much happiness.

Last Friday, November 5, an attempt was made to kill Dr Moraes, the President of Brazil. A review was in progress at 2 p. m., when a soldier broke ranks and dashed at the President, 'dagger in hand. His brother in defence was mortally wounded. In the excitement General Bethencourt, Secretary of War, was shot and killed instantly. The attempted assassination grew out of a recent revolution of monarchist sympathizers, which was suppressed with great slaughter.

Horrible Crime in Jackson County.

Eight miles from Ripley, on Gross creek, in an isolated place, resides Mrs Edward Green, a widow, formerly Mrs Frances Pfost, mother of President Pfost, of the Bank of Ripley, and also of Dr. James Pfost, of Spencer, and with her resided two grown daughters by her first husband, aged respectively 26 and 28 years, and also a son, James, by her first husband, aged 21 years. With the family until recently resided John Morgan whom the family had adopted when quite young, but who recently had sought employment within two miles of the Green homestead and frequently visited the house.

Yesterday widow Green disposed of a horse for which she received $56, and Morgan heard of the transaction. When he passed the Green homestead in the afternoon, he inquired if the horse had been sold, and if they had received the money for it, and was told by young Pfost that they had, and Morgan went on his way.

The family retired as usual, and were awakened about midnight by an alarm at the door. Mrs Green, who is over 70 years of age, answered the call and demanded the name of the caller, and was told that it was Morgan. She thereupon opened the door, when she was struck on the head with a club and felled to the floor, the assassin raining blow after blow upon her prostrate form. Her two daughters and son rushed to her assistance, and the eldest daughter met a similar fate. The son endeavored to escape and had gone some distance from the house, near a corn crib, where he was overtaken by Morgan and brained. Before leaving the house the murderer thought he had completed his work, as he had struck the youngest girl a blow over the head which stunned her, but she recovered before his return and fled to some bushes near by and remained there till the morning when she gave the alarm.

A posse of neighbors soon arrived and the young woman related her story, and told who committed the deed. Morgan was soon tracked to a dense under brush, near the scene of the crime, and was overpowered and bound hand and foot, and taken to the Ripley jail. He had the money on his person, and his hands and clothing were covered with blood.

The crime was the most fiendish one ever committed in Jackson county, and is the second murder in fifteen years. The victims were beaten in such a manner as to be unrecognizable, and blood and brains were scattered all over the room. Hundreds of people gathered in the town during the day, and the feeling against Morgan is very bitter. He confessed the crime and said his only motive was robbery. The murderer is intelligent looking and is about 25 years of age.

A large crowd of men assembled for the purpose of lynching Morgan and had approached the jail at Ripley for that purpose, when Judge Edmund, of that circuit, addressed the mob and asked that law and order be maintained. He promised that a special grand jury should be assembled, and was able to influence them to disband. A grand jury was called, and an indictment found in an hour. His trial was proceeded with at once; the prisoner pleading not guilty.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urin and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use liquor, beer, or wine, and ever comes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price 50c. and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention The Pocahontas Times and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. DO YOU TRAVEL

Sagacity in a Poodle.

Joe Tenhon, traveling passenger agent of the Wabash, has returned from a trip thro the state, and tells this story: "As we were approaching Talmage the other day, a lady with a poodle dog came into the smoker. A traveling man called her attention to the character of the car and told her she had better go into one of the others. She declared she was going to remain right there, and she told him he must not light and smoke the pipe he was filling with tobocco. He opened the window and calmly lit his pipe, and was puffing away when she again demanded that he desist. He again told her she could go into one of the rear cars. It went on for a few minutes, when she leaned over and snatched the pipe from his mouth and threw it out of the window. The traveling man was at a white heat from rage, and turning around, grabbed the poodle and chucked it out of the window. Then she went on the warpath. She declared that she would have him arrested at Talmage where she said she knew everybody, and he said if she did, he would have her arrested for stealing his pipe. The argument was hot and heavy, and when they got off the train they rustled around for the town marshall, and finally found him, and were telling him their troubles when the poodle came running up the track with the pipe in his mouth.—Omaha World-Herald.

Prayer Wobbled When He Came to Possum.

"Ole Uncle" Claybrook is a very religious old darkey, and holds converse with his Maker twenty times a day or oftener. His habit is to pray, and then turn off into what appears to be a one-sided conversation with the Lord, but is evident that there is another party to it as far as he is concerned. To hear him reminds one very much of a telephone conversation.

The other day he was going thro his customary devotions, and when he got to the point of expressing thankfulness for the many blessings of life, he broke off into a recounting of them: "An' den dar's possum, Lord, how'd you ever think of makin' possum? Possum jes' beats all. You jes couldn't beat it of you tried ergin. Possum! ha! ha! Yes, dar's watha millon. I hadn't thought o' dat. Hit's jes great. You couldn't beat it neither could you. Lord? Now, hones' couldn' you jes fix so dey'd get ripe at once? If you was boss o' dis yer you mought go out an' shet de do'. Dey wouldn' be no mo' sin an' no mo' sorrow an' no mo' tribelation. Jis try hit oncet Lord, an' jis see what a diffunce hit would make."

And then "ole uncle" began to hum a quaint negro camp-meeting tune, and stopped to look at a piece of liver in a butcher's stall, as the best substitute for his loved possum or as best suited to the small piece of money which represented his total movable wealth.—Louisville Post.

Bell-Ringing at the Colored School.

The citizens of a Georgia town were greatly annoyed by the incessant ringing of the bell of a schoolhouse where colored children were taught. A committee waited on the principal and entered a vigorous protest.

"Is it absolutely necessary that you should ring that bell all day and night?" asked the spokesman of the committee.

"Don't what it is, sir," replied the principal, "hit's one er de reg'lations er de school."

"Will you please explain it?"

"Certainly, sir. You see when a new pupil comes in we stops the bell accordin' to his age. If he's 9 years old, we ring 9 times. Dat's de 9h, after dat we ring 1 time on de hour for sixty. Den, when a scholar gits up ter spell his lesson, we rings his age for her encouragement on er de hour make a note, we rings her twice de number of his age for her intelligence. Yes, sir, hit's one er de regulations of de school, an' you see, his whole policy necessary."—Bond Newspaper.—Atlanta Constitution.

MY FIRST NINETY DAYS,

Or the Blunders of a Confederate Captain.

BY COL. R. R. JONES, AUTHOR OF "THE SUNNY LAND."

IN THREE PARTS.

PART II.

(First published in 1868.)

I had not been long at Gauley Bridge before it came my turn to act as officer of the day. I felt both complimented and alarmed. I was wholly ignorant of the duties of the position.

Major Beadfute Warwick, who subsequently as Colonel fell covered with glory at Cold Harbor, was commandant of the post. He was an eastern man and—unacquainted with the geography of that part of Virginia, and the disposition of the inhabitants—fancied that we were in constant danger of a surprise.

In this he was most energetically seconded and sustained by Captain Buckholtz, an officer of much gallantry, in command of the artillery, who instructed me to visit the pickets twice during the day and three times at night. And the distance to be traveled in making our round was about six miles. The roughness of the route and the labor and peril to be encountered, cannot be conceived by anyone who has not experienced them. In addition to the regular pickets, men were stationed about seventy yards apart, connecting each post with the main camps. These sentinels being perfectly green, fancied a live Yankee under every bush and were ready to fire at the least noise.

I was to start on my first round at precisely nine o'clock. I gathered by blanket and repaired to the guard-house. It had rained almost incessantly for forty days and nights, consequently the rude floor of the guard-house bore a strong resemblance to that of a pig-sty. I scraped away the looser particles of mud, however, and spreading my blanket lay down among guards, Union prisoners, etc.; but I consoled myself in my novel and uncomfortable position by the reflection that I was "serving my country," and that our forefathers had trod the same rugged pathway to glory and independence. Indeed, my patriotism so far triumphed over my discomforts as to enable me to discover new beauties in the sentiment, "Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori."

At the designated hour I was aroused by the officer of the guard and began the toil of the night. Varied and startling were the receptions and experiences of that dreary round. Sometimes it was a sharp "Halt, who comes there?" and not infrequently it was the startling click of a lock, that made each particular hair stand on end, as the aroused sentry made ready to fire. I was under the necessity of specially instructing each sentinel. When I got back to the guard-house I found it was just midnight, the hour for "grand rounds"; so accompanied by a sergeant and three privates I started again. My experience was about the same as on the preceding round, with one or two ludicrous variations. "Who comes there?" "Grand rounds." "Come on grand rounds!" Another, "Who are you?" "Grand rounds." "I thought it was them fellers comin' to relieve me."

Grand rounds done, I found myself at the starting point at 3 A. M., wet, muddy, and fatigued. I only made two rounds. My immediate duties were to make three, and to fail was in my opinion to die an ignominious death. I thought of my family left in such unsettled and troublous times without a provider or protector, and resolving also how illy fitted I was for death, I nerved myself for the third and last round. Away I trudged all alone and finished the third round about sunrise; the third round finished me about the same hour. I had traveled eighteen miles, stabbing my feet against stones, falling over logs, jamming against stumps, plashing into mud holes, and wading a stream of water thirty yards wide and three feet deep no less than three times.

As there were but three captains at the post, this task developed on me every third day. No wonder then that my countenance grew haggard and wan, and my body weak and trembly, so that my sword dragged such hardships unaffected. Yet I bore all cheerfully, and with a martyr-like resignation, from a sense of duty, and because I thought at the time the authority of a commanding officer was unquestioned, and that as a subordinate I was bound to obey all orders, whether reasonable or unreasonable.

When commissioned officers were so unkind, what could have been expected of the private soldier? Passing from my quarters to the guard, one morning after another, I began to endure in my mind a feeling of resentment against the officer who was enjoying his ease in my stead.

"Who comes there?" he hoarsely demanded.

"Captain Jones."

"Advance, Captain Jones, and give the countersign."

"Countersign be d——d," I would mutter, as I stumbled on to the guard-house.

Yet I do not give the countersign correctly, for I am not sure that I ever knew it. I was in the habit of giving the first word that came into my head, and I was never challenged by a sentinel who could not do better.

One morning, however, I was challenged by a sentinel who could do better. I had come in from my round, and was standing in the door of the guard-house, when I heard the challenge, "Who comes there?" and the response, "Grand rounds." Then the sentinel called out, "Halt, grand rounds, and give the countersign!" Then I heard the sentinel bring his long mountain rifle, and bringing it to bear directly between my eyes so that I fancied I could almost see the bullet that was to finish my mortal career! It would have been imprudent to have shouted the countersign, surrounded as I was by laurel, where an enemy might have been concealed, so I essayed to draw a little closer.

"Halt! Give the countersign, I tell you, or I'll fire."

"I must get closer. I might be overheard."

"Don't care a darn! That's what that fellow said that come'd around last night, and I sin't gwine to fool with you much longer, neither, Captain. So jes' sing her out."

Seeing that further parley or expostulation was not only useless, but positively perilous, I brawled out, "Jeff Davis."

"That's the truck, Cap'n. Hurrah for Jeff Davis. You can go now;" and he resumed his beat.

So apprehensive of a surprise were our superior officers, (all eastern men,) that finally I got scared myself.

I was called up one night by Sergeant Major Pierce, and informed that the enemy was actually crossing New river, just above the mouth of Gauley, in great force—using three flat-boats for that purpose. I was ordered to awaken my men, and get them under arms.

The "boys" sprang eagerly to their guns, all but one poor fellow, who was, unfortunately, at that very moment, attacked with violent pains in the region of the stomach. I was assigned a position in an oat field. Captain Buckholtz labored with great energy to get his artillery in position; wheels creaking, whips cracking, drivers swearing. There we stood in the field, shivering in the raw morning fog, with guns cocked, heads inclined eagerly forward, and eyes strained, vainly endeavoring to peer into the surrounding darkness; but no enemy came.

In the latter part of July we began the famous retreat—or, as Gen Wise persisted in callin it, "retrograde" movement—from the Kanawha Valley. Cox had been whipped at "Scarry," but another army, acting in concert with his movement, was seeking, by way of Sutton, Summersville and the Wilderness road, to gain our rear, and thus not only cut us off from our base, but capture our whole force.

Such confusion and demoralization as then ensued have been seldom witnessed. One entire company, perhaps two, deliberately fell off and went home. Another scattered like frightened sheep; but the captain marched boldly on alone until becoming thoroughly disgusted, he took his sword and wore the bars no more! Huge sides of bacon were pitched in the mud and trampled under foot. The heads of whiskey and molasses barrels were knocked in, and every man helped himself. Gauley bridge, that had cost $30,000, was burned, altho the river was fordible for infantry and cavalry one hundred yards above. It is said, tho I never credited the report, that the famous "Hawk's Nest" was examined with an eye to its destruction, but was declared non-combustible, and thus saved for the admiration of future turists. Every one went it on "his own hook." For the first twelve hours, despite the efforts of the field, order and system were lost. Quartermasters were oblivious to their obligations to furnish transportation.

My company baggage had been carried across the ill-fated bridge by men. As I waited its transportation until near nightfall, and the bridge was already in flames, lighting the heavens from horizon to zenith with their lurid glare. The army had gone, its retreating footsteps echoing amid the gorges of Gauley mountain, still no transportation, nor would the last lingering Quartermaster answer satisfactorily my inquiries. So I moved off, leaving all behind.

Dark soon came on, and the rain descended only as it did rain in the summer and autumn of 1861 in the mountains of West Virginia.

We had gone a mile when we met a wagon with a four mule team and a negro driver. I pressed wagon, mules and driver, sent them back and got my baggage. It was now so dark we could with difficulty keep the road. I halted the company and told the boys to take care of themselves, and they would travel in every direction, seeking shelter under rocks and trees from the pitiless storm. I crept down the hillside carefully feeling my way, and found a deep spot under a large rock. Here I spread my blanket, which was soon soaked to the skin, and I told him to go to rest; he did so, and he completely occupied the whole space that I was compelled to lie all night in the rain. I could sleep to no purpose. I could hear the boys talking and laughing, and I felt all the while. I had never before regretted having been promoted. I did that night, and I think you will readily believe me. I was in no humor to be trifled with. I was in the habit of attending to the horses myself, and I had given Jim, the negro driver, no orders about them. When we were ready to start I found that he had not fed or watered them. I was standing at the top of the hill, and I called to him to bring them to me. He did so, and I then told him to go back and get his own breakfast. He refused to go. I told him he should go. He said he would not go. I told him he should go. He said he would not go. I told him he should go. He said he would not

The Pocahontas Times.

THEY have called Mark Hanna a boss in Ohio, and they are setting about to defeat him, and it looks now as if a disagreement might arise in which the boss would go down.

A MAN cannot be successful in politics unless he is a boss, and when he gets to be a boss he is beaten on that account. The result is that perpetual continuance in office is an impossibility.

WHEN Henry Watterson came back to the "reptiles," saying that he was willing to be a private in their ranks, he did the bravest and best thing he could do. We would like to see the Balt more Sun come back the same way.

AMONG the bills noticed now that the long delayed copies of the acts of the last legislature are being circulated, is the one relating to the delegate districts of the State. The changes made were in the votes of three districts, and is in effect an attempt at gerrymandering. Everbody knows the Democratic party has no reason to throw mud on this subject, and the principle will have to be maintained that in politics it is right for a party to so arrange its strength by the division of counties that it will make every edge cut. The Democrats had put Morgan county, a Republican strong hold, in a district with Jefferson and Berkely, and given them three delegates. The new bill reduces to Morgan county her representative, and makes the other two a delegate district. This is a much fairer arrangement to look at from anyother than a political standpoint. On the other hand, in 1891, Webster county with its large Democratic majority was placed with Lewis, and the two made a tolerably safe Democratic district. The late bill places Webster with Upshur, which has Republican votes to burn and leaves Lewis doubtful. Thus the Republican party gains three delegates who under the old arrangement would have belonged to the Democratic party.

NOW some reader of the Constitution has called attention to the fact that we have a constitutional provision to the effect that after each census the legislature is required to fix the number of delegates and their districts which cannot be changed until another census has been taken. The effect of this would be to make the act a nullity. A very noticeable feature of the bill, and one which indicates the great looseness with which a great deal of our legislating is done, is that the names of both Logan and Kings counties are left out entirely, for the constitution provides that every county not included with other counties, and having a delegate district, is entitled to at least one representative. This bill will bring up a live question next year, as with it the Republican party gains an certain locality in Morgan and Webster counties, is absolutely democratic, and will be counted under the vote of the party.

Biographic.

One hundred years ago one of the most widely known citizens in the region now embraced by Pocahontas and Bath counties was Levi Moore, senior, a native of Wales. He was the pioneer of Frost, and came there some time previous to the Revolution, and was among the first to make a permanent settlement. The lands he settled now owned by the Gibsons, Sharps, and others. His wife was Susannah Crist, and he first settled in Pennsylvania where he lived until his family, two sons and two daughters, were born, and the older ones nearly grown.

Hannah Moore was married to Robert Gay, the ancestor of the Gay relationship, so frequently alluded to in previous papers.

From Mrs John Simmons and Mrs Mary Jane Moore we learn the following particulars.

Sally Moore became Mrs John Smith, one of the first permanent settlers of the Edray district near the head of Stony Creek, of whom special mention has been made.

George Moore was at the notable double wedding when Jacob Slaven and Miss Elanor Lockridge John McNeel and Miss Harriet Lockridge were married near Driscol. The tradition is that a practical joke was played by one James Brindly, at which the horse took fright, ran off, and the rider's head struck a projecting fence-stake and was instantly killed. Geo. Moore lived a while on the land now held by Abram Sharp, Esq., but sold to John Sharp and went to Kentucky. He was back on a visit when his sudden death occurred as just mentioned.

Levi Moore, junior, was a person of marked prominence in county affairs. In person he was six feet eleven inches in height, and well proportioned. He was a member of the Virginia legislature and was on the commission to locate the court-house, and selected a site near where George Baxter, county surveyor, now lives. His first marriage was with Miss Nancy Sharp, daughter of William Sharp, the Hunterville pioneer, and lived on the Moore homestead. In reference to their children the following items are recorded.

Rebecca Moore was married to Leonard Irvine, on Back Creek, and lived at the Brick House where the road to Frost leaves the Back Creek road. Levi Irvine was killed in an accident; Lizzie Irvine was married to Henry Coffee, of Augusta county; Cornelia Irvine was married to William Gardner, and settled in Webster county. Milton Irvine married Kate McCarty, daughter of George McCarty, and settled on Little Back Creek; Susannah Irvine was married to Cyrus Kelley, on Little Creek; and there is a son, Herron Irvine.

Margaret Moore was married to Eli McCarty, and lived near Laurel Run. Her daughter Margaret McCarty married the late John Simmons, and lived on the homestead. Her brother Paul died in the West.

Martha Moore, another daughter of Hon Levi Moore, junior, was married to the late Rev John Waugh, of Indian Draft. Her children were Levi, Beverly, John Samuel, Miriam, Ann, and Eveline. Joseph B. McNeel, on Back Run; Rev John W. McNeel, a minister of the Baltimore Conference, now in charge of the Crisfield circuit; and Mrs William Dawson, near Buckeye, are his grand-children.

Andrew Moore married Rebecca Waugh, daughter of Samuel Waugh, in The Hills, and settled on Knapps Creek, thence moved to head of Stony Creek, and finally located in Jackson county. He was noted for his skill in harnessing the seasons and weather.

Levi Moore, the third, went to Nebraska where it is reported he possessed an immense fortune to be left to his heirs. Having no family of his own, he adopted his nephew of Andrew's name

The Hon Levi Moore's second marriage was with Mary McCarty, daughter of Timothy McCarty, a Revolutionary veteran, and the ancestor of the widely extended McCarty relationship in our county.

Rachel Moore, a daughter of this marriage, became the wife of Jas. Sharp, son of James Sharp, on Thorny Creek, and migrated to Iowa.

Susanna Crist Moore, another daughter, was married to Stephen Hadden, and also went to Iowa.

Mrs Mary Jane Moore, the third daughter, makes her home with her daughter, Mrs Matilda Moore, near Mt Zion Church.
